MISCELLANY.

OUT OF THE FRYING PAN INTO THE FIRE.

Hadn't you better give our landlord notice to-day that we will move at the end of the year, Mr. Plunket?

Move! For Heaven's sake Sarah, what do you want to move for?

Mr. Plunket!

Mrs. Plunket!

It's a very strange way for you to address me, Mr. Plunket. A very strange way!

But, for what on earth do you want to move, Sarah! Tell me that. I'm sure we are comfortable enough off here.

Here! I would at live in this miserable house another twelve months, if you give me the rent free.

I don't see any thing so terribly bad about the house; I am well satisfied.

Are you indeed! But I am not, I can tell you for your comfort.

What's the matter with the house?

Everything. There isn't a comfortable, decent room in it from the garret to the cellar.

Not one. It's a horrid place to live in. And such a neighbourhood to bring up children.

You thought it a love of a house a year ago.

Mr. Plunket! I never liked it; and it was all your fault that we ever took the miserable affair.

My fault! Bless me, Sarah! what are you talking about? I didn't want to move from where we were—I never want to move.

Oh no! you'd live in a pig sty forever if you once get there rather than take the trouble to move out of it.

Mrs. Plunket!

Mr. Plunket!

Wise from experience, the gentleman deemed it better to run than fight. So, muttering to himself, he took up his hat and beat a hasty retreat.

Mrs. Plunket had a mother; a fact of which Mr. Plunket was perfectly aware, particularly as said relative was a member of his family.

She happened to be present when the above spicy conversation took place. As soon as he had retired she broke out with—

Hump! Just like him! Any thing to be contrary. But I wouldn't live in this old rattle-trap of a place another year for any man that ever stepped into shoe leather. No indeed; not I! Out of repair from top to bottom. Not a single convenience, so to speak. Walls cracked, paper soiled, and paint yellow as a pumpkin.

And worse than all, ma; every closet infested with ants, and overrun with mice. Ugh! I'm afraid to open a cupboard, or look into a drawer.

Why, yesterday a mouse jumped upon me, and came near going into my bosom. I almost fainted. Oh, dear! I never can live in this house another year. It is out of the question. I should die.

No one thinks of it except Mr. Plunket. And he's always opposed to every thing. But that's no matter. If he don't notify the landlord, we can live here another twelvemonth? No, indeed!

I saw a bill on a house in Seventh Street, yesterday; and I had a great mind then to stop and look at it. It was a beautiful place. Just what we want.

Put your things on, Sarah, right away, and go and see about it. Depend upon it, we can't do worse than this.

Worse! No, indeed, that's impossible. But Mr. Plunket?

Pshaw! Never mind him. He's opposed to everything. If you had given him his way where would you have been now?

Mrs. Plunket had not been to this; the question brought back the recollection of a beautiful little house new and perfect in every part, from which she had forced her husband to move because the parlors were not quite large enough.

Never before no since had they been so comfortably situated.

Acting as well from her own inclinations as from her mother's advice, Mrs. Plunket went and made an examination of the house upon which she had seen the bill.

Oh! It is such a love of a house, she said upon her return. Perfect in every respect. It is larger than this; and is full of closets. And the rent is just the same.

Did you get the refusal of it?

Yes, I told the landlord that I would give him an answer by to-morrow morning. He says there are a great many people after it. That he could have rented it a dozen times, if he had approved the tenants who offered. He says he knows Mr. Plunket very well, and will be happy to rent him the house.

We must take it by all means.

That is, if Mr. Plunket is willing.

Willing! Of course he'll have to be willing. Oh! It is such a love of a house, ma!

I'm sure it must be.

A very different kind of an affair from this, you may be certain.

When Mr. Plunket came home that evening his wife said to him quite amiably.

Oh! You don't know what a love of a house I saw to day up in Seventh Street. Larger, better, and more convenient in every way; and the rent is just the same.

But I am sure, Sarah, we are comfortable here.

Comfortable! Good gracious, Mr. Plunket! I should like to know what you call comfort? How can any one be comfortable in a miserable old rattle-trap of a place like this.

You thought it a love of a house, you remember before you came into it.

Me? Me? Mr. Plunket! Why, I never liked it; and it was all your fault that we ever moved here.

My fault!

Yes indeed! It was all your fault. I wanted the house in Walnut Street; but you were afraid of a little more rent. Oh, no Mr. Plunket. You mustn't blame me for moving into this barracks of a place. You have only yourself to thank for that. And now I want to go out of it on the first good opportunity.

Poor Plunket was silenced. The very boldness of the position taken by his wife, completely knocked him hors du combat. His fault indeed! He would have lived on year after year in a log cabin, rather than encounter the horrors of moving; and yet he was in the habit of moving about once a year. What could he do now? He had yielded so long to his wife, who had grown bolder at each concession, that opposition was now hopeless. Had she stood alone, there might have been some chance for him; but backed up, as she was by her puissant mother, victory was sure to perch on her banner; and well did Mr. Plunket know this.

It will cost at least a hundred and fifty, or two hundred dollars to move, he ventured to suggest.

Indeed, and it will cost no such thing. I'll guarantee the whole removal for ten dollars.

It cost over a hundred last year.

Nonsense! It didn't cost a fifth of it.

But Mr. Plunket knew—he had the best right to know! for he had paid the bills.

From the first Mr. Plunket felt that opposition was useless. A natural repugnance to change, and a horror of the disorder and discomfort of moving, caused him to make a feeble resistance. But the opposing current swept strongly against him, and he had to yield.

The House in Seventh Street was taken, and in due time, the breaking up and change came. Carpets were lifted, boxes barrels and trunks packed, and all the disorderly elements of a regular moving operation called into activity. Every preparation had been made on the day previous to the contemplated flight. The cars were to be at the door by eight o'clock on the next morning. In anticipation of this early movement, the children had been dragged out of bed an hour before their usual time for rising. They were in consequence, cross and unreasonable; but not more so than mother, grandmother, and nurse, all of whom either boxed them, scolded them, or jerked them about in a most violent manner. Breakfast! The least said about that the better. It was well there were no keen appetites to turn away with disappointment.

Strange that the cars are not here! said Mr. Plunket, who had put himself in going order—It's nearly an hour past the time now. Oh dear. Confound all this moving! say I.

That's a strange way for you to talk before children Mr. Plunket retorted his wife, snubbing him up instantly.

And this is a much stranger way for you to act, madam. Forever dragging your husband and children about from post to pillar. For my part I feel like Noah's dove without a place to rest the sole of my foot.

Mr. Plunket!

Mrs. Plunket.

A war of words was about commencing, but the furniture cars drove up at the moment, when an armistice took place.

In due time the family of Plunkets were; bag and baggage, in their new house. A lover of quiet, the male head of the establishment tried to refrain from any remarks calculated to excite his helpmate, but this was next to impossible, there being so much in the new house that he could not in conscience approve. If Mrs. Plunket would have kept quiet all might have gone on smoothly.

But Mrs. Plunket could not or would not be kept quiet. She was extravagant in her praise of every thing; and incessant in her comparisons between the old and the new house. Mr. Plunket listened, and bit his lip to keep silent.

At last the lady said to him with a coaxing smile, for she was not going to rest until some words of approval were extorted from her liege lord.

Now, Mr. Plunket don't you think this a love of a house?

No! was the gruff answer.

Mr. Plunket! Why what is your objection? I'm sure we can't be more uncomfortable than we have been for a year.

Oh, yes we can.

How so?

There is such a thing as going from the frying pan into the fire.

Mr. Plunket!

Just what you'll find we have done madam.

How will you make that appear, pray?

In a few words. Just step this way. Do you see that building?

I do.

Just to the South West of us. From that quarter the cool breezes of summer come. We shall now have them, fragrant with the delightful exhalations of a slaughter house! Hump!

Won't that be delightful! Then, again, the house is damp.

Oh, no. The landlord assured me it was as dry as a bone.

The landlord lied, then. I've been from garret to cellar, half a dozen times, and it is just as I say. My eyes never deceive me. As to its being a better or more comfortable house, that is all in my eye. I wouldn't give as much for it by fifty dollars as for the one we have left.

Notwithstanding Mrs. Plunket's efforts to induce her husband to praise the house, she was not as well satisfied with it as she was at the first inspection of the premises.

I'm sure, she replied in rather a subdued manner, that it is quite as good as the old house, and has many advantages over it.

Name one, said her husband.

It is not overrun with vermin.

Wait awhile and see.

Oh, I know it isn't.

How do you know.

I asked the landlord particularly.

And he said no?

He did.

Hump! We shall see.

And they did see. Tired out with a day's moving and fixing, the whole family, feeling hungry, out of humor and uncomfortable, descended to the kitchen after it had become dark, to overhaul the provision baskets, and get a cold cut of some kind. But, alas! to their dismay it was found that another family and that a most numerous one, already had possession of La cuisine. Floor, dresser and walls were alive with a starving colony of enormous cockroaches, and the baskets into which bread, meats, &c., had been packed, were literally swarming with them.

In horror, man woman and child beat a hasty retreat, and left the premises.

It would be hardly fair to record all the sayings and doings of that eventful evening. Overwearied in body and mind, the family retired to rest; but, some of them, alas! not to sleep.

From wash-boards, and every other part of the chamber in which a crevice existed, crept out certain little animals, not always to be mentioned to ears polite, and more bold than the denizens of the kitchen, made immediate demonstrations on the persons of master, mistress, child and maid.

It took less than a week to prove satisfactorily to Mrs. Plunket, though she did not admit the fact, the new house was not to be compared with the old one in any respect. It had not a single advantage over the other; while the disadvantages were felt by every member of the family.

In a few months, however, Mr. Plunket began to feel at home, and to settle down into contentment. But as he grew better and better satisfied, his wife grew more and more desirous of change; and is now as the year begins to draw to a close looking about her for bills on houses, and examining every day, the to let department of the newspapers with a lively degree of interest. Mr. Plunket will, probably, resist stoutly when his lady proposes some new 'love of a house'; but it will be no use. He will have to pull up stakes and try it again. It is his destiny. He has got a moving wife and there is no help for him.

STANDARD OF ACTION. He that acts to weaken us if God say him, and prays to God to be heard him, although he may not obtain

all that he asks, or succeed in all that he undertakes, will most probably deserve to do so.

For with respect to his actions to men; however

he may fail with regard to others, yet if pure

CHOLERA ASPHYXIA.

For the Quincy Patriot.

This disease made its first appearance in August, 1817, at Jessore, a town about sixty miles distant from Calcutta, in Hindostan. Thence it extended its ravages along the principal rivers and great roads, with a pretty uniform progress, until it had crossed the Indian peninsula, and broke out at Bombay, about one year after its commencement at Jessore. Having reached this point, it appeared, for a few years, to have attained the utmost western limit of its sway.

In June, 1821, however, it made its appearance at Muscat, in Arabia, and advancing in a north western direction through Persia, it reached Astracan, at the mouth of the Volga, in September, 1823, and, nearly at the same time, broke out at Tripoli, on the eastern coast of the Mediterranean. In 1830, it again made its appearance at Astracan; and thence extending itself rapidly throughout Russia, Poland and Germany, it reached the eastern coast of the Baltic in the Summer of 1831. Soon afterwards, the disease appeared in Sunderland, in England; and in the following spring it commenced its ravages in our own country.

What is the nature of that deleterious principle which gives rise to this disease? Upon this subject all inquiries have hitherto resulted in little else than vague conjecture. Some ascribe this malady to an aerial poison, generated by the decomposition of vegetable and animal matter. This opinion is met with the objection, that the disease has prevailed at all seasons, in winter as well as in summer, and in localities where the materials for such miasmata were, to all appearance, too sparingly present for the production of an epidemic. Others have supposed the choleric cause consists of a poisonous air or effluvia, engendered deep beneath the surface of the earth, by a slow process of decomposition or chemical change in some mineral strata, or by central volcanic action. There is certainly something very analogous between the effects of the choleric cause, and those which result from mineral poisons, particularly arsenic. The slow progress of the disease for the period of more than thirty years, in a broad zone over the Earth's surface, often in opposition to the regular current of the wind, seems to accord well with what one might suppose would be the progress of an epidemic if it depended on a subterranean cause of this kind. There are some who are disposed to believe, that the cause depends upon some occult modification in the constitution of the atmosphere itself; but this opinion is met by the objection, that, if such were its origin, it could hardly have advanced in a direction contrary to the prevailing current of the air or winds, a circumstance which has frequently been observed. A few writers contend, that the disease depends on a deficiency of the electric fluid in the atmosphere, whereby the animal system is deprived of its most subtle and pervading stimulus, and the organic affections debilitated.

The disease has, also, been ascribed to the influence upon the human system, of some change in the magnetic condition of the earth; and Hahnemann, with a few other writers, has adopted the Linnæan doctrine, of animalcular origin. It is maintained by the advocates of this hypothesis, that cholera arises from an infinite number of animalcules, too small to be perceived by the most powerful microscope, which, floating in the atmosphere, enter into the lungs and alimentary canal, and thence make their way into the current of the circulation. This opinion is ingeniously and zealously defended by Dr. Neal, in a work written to illustrate this view of the subject. It is only sufficient to observe that these opinions are all as yet wholly conjectural, and that the experience and observation of the profession, though intently directed to this object, have hitherto, failed in establishing any thing on the subject which can be regarded as possessing any considerable degree of probability.

The question is often asked, does the cholera, engendered poison which, when brought to act on a healthy individual, will give rise to the same distemper? In other words, is the disease communicated from the sick to the healthy in the manner of a contagion? This is an important question. The fatality and calamitous consequence of epidemics, are always greatly augmented by the conviction among the people that the reigning disease is contagious. Besides the unhappy effects on the minds of the people, the vexatious, and often various sanitary restrictions and quarantines, to which the existence of contagion usually leads, are in themselves evils of very great magnitude, and never fail to augment both public and private distress. Where the evidence of contagion is so slight therefore, that the most careful and judicious observers are led to entertain strong doubts of its existence, it is manifestly the duty of those whose stations gives them an influence over public opinion, to discourage the belief in the prevalence of contagion. If the authority of those who have witnessed epidemic cholera is to be taken as an evidence on this point, the foundation for its contagious character is very slight. It is stated that in India, ninety nine out of one hundred physicians believe that cholera is not contagious; and in every county and district that has been invaded by this disease, a great majority of the most experienced and enlightened of the profession entertain the same conviction. In many populous cities and districts, as Moscow, Orenburg and Paris, the majority of medical men, as well as of citizens, did not doubt the contagious character of the disease while they contemplated it a distance, but after it had made its appearance amongst them, and they were furnished with an opportunity of observing for themselves, the belief in its contagiousness was almost universally abandoned. The quarantine regulations and sanitary restrictions which were enforced with the utmost vigilance and rigor at London, Paris, Hamburg, and other places, when the disease first broke out, were on further experience and inquiry, so greatly relaxed as to demonstrate in the clearest manner, the change of sentiment which took place under the light of experience, in relation to this point.

There is not, I am persuaded, a single unequivocal instance on record of the direct communication of this malady from the sick to the healthy. It is true that many apparent examples of this kind have been adduced, but these have always been attended with circumstances of doubt and uncertainty; whilst on the other hand, innumerable instances have been noticed wholly inconsistent with the supposition of contagion. Were some one of the unequivocally contagious diseases, small pox for instance, now for the first time to make its appearance, can it be imagined that after an almost universal prevalence during a period of thirty two years the contagious character of the disease would not have been incontestably established? In the report of that extraordinary committee of health, at Moscow, it was stated that in the opening of bodies of persons who had died of cholera, to the minute inspection of which four or five hours a day, for nearly a month, were devoted, neither those who attended at the operations nor any of the assisting physicians, nor any attendants, caught the infection although with the exception of the first day scarcely any precautions were used.

In the Cholera Hospital at Cincinnati, in which, during a period of nearly five weeks, there were constantly from fifteen to twenty cholera patients, not a single case of the disease occurred among the attending physicians, nurses, and other attendants, although some of these remained in the wards day and night during the whole period, and frequently slept on beds in which cholera patients had lain and died. Dr. Walker, speaking of the disease as it prevailed at Moscow, says that persons had put on the clothes of patients who were very ill or who had died of cholera, had lain in their beds, and even along side of dead bodies, had bathed in the same water where very bad cholera patients had been bathed just before, and that notwithstanding, not one of these individuals was attacked with the disease.

Without pursuing this subject any further, it may I think be safely asserted, that the cause of Cholera was originally, and still continues, to be generated by circumstances foreign to the human body; and that it is propagated by being diffused throughout the atmosphere.

DORCHESTER SCHOOLS.—NO. 9.

The annual exhibition of the Schools embraced in District No. 1, Summer Street, consisting of Primary, Miss Sarah R. Pearson, teacher, and Grammar, under the charge of Mr. Elwell Woodbury, assisted by Miss Sarah H. Page, took place on Wednesday, February 25th last. The Committee appointed to visit these schools on this occasion, consisted of Messrs. Clapp, Pike, Wadleigh and Houghion. The school rooms were crowded to their utmost capacity.—not with inattentive spectators it may be confidently asserted, but with fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters and other friends of the dear scholars and of the schools, all of whom gave evidence of thrilling interest; for, the onward moral and intellectual progress of those they most dearly love, has ever been the object of their ardent hopes, watchfulness and constant solicitude. And the exercises, all the exercises, plainly and most conclusively proved, that their fondly cherished desire had been fully realized. These teachers are model teachers, these schools are model schools. The Primary, under the control of Miss Pearson has made rapid advance the past year.

I hope no one of the truly excellent teachers of Dorchester, will consider it invidious when it is said that Miss P. is just the kind of teacher every Primary School demands. I am sure there has not been sufficient care to select proper teachers for this class of schools, not only in this, but in other towns. Committees act, or seem to act, upon the principle that any person almost will meet the demands of the primary schools, that any person, provided she has a little learning, is qualified to teach small children, when the fact is, I am fully persuaded, more care, more vigilance is required in the selection of this than any other class of teachers. For it matters not how beautiful, how rich, how costly the edifice if the foundation is incomplete or in any way defective! The earliest training of a child is the foundation on which must rest forever the future superstructure. The first impressions are like impressions made on steel, never, never to be effaced. The first moral and mental light, shed upon the young and tender mind, is to illumine its pathway through this world and onward, onward parallel with its great author! How vastly important then, that the primary teacher should be thoroughly fitted for her most responsible work! Impressions distinct and multifarious may be traced on the sandy beach, but the next rolling wave will wash them out. "The spots and stains of our earthly robes may be removed; the ravages of a storm, that strips nature of her beauty and glory, the devastations of an earthquake, all, all may be repaired. Time, culture and labor may reclothe, rebuild and restore to

POETRY.

THE BEGGAR'S CHILD.

Oh! give me bread!—this stricken child
Lies famished on my breast;
Though faint and worn, I sing to him,
Yet cannot give him rest.
He wakes and pines—my wretched boy!
His cry sounds strange and wild;
Alas! sweet sleep is for the rich,
Not for the Beggar's Child!

The children of the great are born
To beauty and to power;
The sun of Hope, and Health, and Life,
Shines on each opening flower;
Yet you proud mother could not feel
When first her infant smiled,
A love more deep than that which guards
The Beggar's sickly Child!

His boyhood may not know the care
Which trains their youthful mind,
Moulding the intellectual chain
That links them to their kind;
Sights—sounds of guilt—too soon must meet
His spirit undefiled,
And stain the spotless purity
That robes the Beggar's Child!

Ye close your portals when my step
Is on the threshold heard,
And can ye hear, yet pity not,
My baby's hissing word?
His little voice sounds sweet to me,
When, scouted and reviled,
Wistfully, in his mother's face,
Looks up the Beggar's Child!

Yon heir ye hold within your arms,
Nor hunger knows, nor thirst;
Most plenty was he early reared—
Oh! not in sorrow nursed!
For him the well-filled board is spread—
For him the hearth is piled—
But poor the meal, and cold the home,
That waits the Beggar's Child!

SHELLS.

Far out at sea, a tiny boat
Has set her tiny sail,
And, swiftly, see it onward float,
As freshen still the gale;
A rainbow in it must have slept,
To give it tints so fair;
Or loveliest angel in it wept,
A pearl in every hair.

Deep in the chambers of the sea,
Where Ocean's mermaid swells,
A palace stood; it seemed to me,
Its every stone a shell;
And, oh, what glorious hues were they,
That struck upon my eye,
Of blue, and green, and gold, and grey,
That there unnoticed lie;

As violets sweet, in loveliest dells,
So bluish unseen, those beautiful shells.
Thus, on the sea, and 'neath its waves,
These painted sea gems lie,
As tomb-stones o'er the many graves
Of low born men and high.
And when they rest upon the shore,
In wealth's luxurious case,
They sound to us the solemn roar,
They learned beneath the sea:

As exiles, though afar they roam,
Still sing the songs they learned at home.
TRUE SIGN OF PROSPERITY.
Where spades grow bright, and idle swords grow dull;
Where jails are empty, and where barns are full;
Where church paths are with frequent feet outworn;
Law court yards weedy, silent and forlorn;
Where doctors foot it, and where farmers ride;
Where age abounds, and youth is multiplied;
Where these signs are, they clearly indicate
A happy people and well governed state.

ANECDOTES.

A young lady in a boarding house, very vain of her musical talent, was one day entertaining the company with a song, when a crusty old bachelor came out of his room on the next floor and bawled from the top of the stairs:
"What are you doing with that pig? Do turn that pig into the street!"
"What pig?" cried several.
The bachelor descended the stairs, looked into the room, and said—"I thought I heard a pig squealing in this room!"
The girl never sang afterwards without first ascertaining that the old bachelor was absent.

A passenger on board a ship bound for California, states that they had on board a thin and feeble member of their company, who had been seasick all the way out to the line. One day this man went to the doctor, and in a sad, supplicating tone, accosted him with—
"Doctor, can you tell me what I shall be good for when I get to San Francisco, if I keep on this way?"
"Tell you? To be sure I can! You're just the man we want to begin a grace yard with!"

"Look here, Pete," said a knowing darkey, "don't stand out on railroad."
"Why Joe?"
"Kase if de cars see dat mouf ob yours day tink it am de depo' and run rite in!"

"Whose pigs are those my lad?" "Why they belong to that there big sow." "No! I mean who is their master?" "Whoy," answered the lad, "that little 'un there; he's a rare 'un to fight."

"Sammy, Sammy, my son! don't stand there scratching your booby head—stir your stumps or you will make no progress in life!"
"Why, father, I've often heard you say that the only way to get on in the world was to scratch a head!"

A lawyer by the name of Cain, being taken before a magistrate the other day, was asked if he was the man that slew his brother? "No, yer honor," said he, "I is the chap not got slewed."

Encourage your Own.

To the People of Quincy—
The following is a well known motto, and strictly true:

"That County or Town that gives the most liberal encouragement to its own manufactures of every kind is well known to thrive, and increase in wealth and population."

There are a few interesting facts, of which we wish to remind you, and which we are inclined to think have slipped from the memory of some, and which it will be for your advantage as well as ours to remember.

1st. That at the QUINCY BOOKSTORE you will find all the

Blank Account Book,
RECORD or MEMORANDUM BOOK.

2d. That there you will find a great assortment of Miscellaneous, Juvenile and Toy Books.

3d. That there you will find all kinds of STATIONERY.

4th. That there you will find an innumerable variety of
FANCY GOODS.

5th. That all the above will be sold at the very Lowest Market Prices.

6th. That we are entirely disinterested when we say that you will be much better satisfied with your selves and your bargains if you trade at home, in preference to "out of town."

7th. That there you will find a GOOD LIBRARY where you can procure reading on reasonable terms.

8th. That the Proprietors are agents for all the popular MAGAZINES, receiving the subscriptions themselves and furnishing the numbers at their own responsibility, free of any expense. Many have forgotten this of late, preferring to subscribe of some traveling agent, to one in their own town.

9th. That they RE-BIND old Books, Pamphlets, Periodicals, Music, etc., as cheap as they can afford to and as quick as anybody.

These things we wish to call to your memory, because while we have been moving on in a quiet kind of a way, you seem partly to have forgotten the old place, thinking perhaps that we did not keep up with the times in the variety of our goods, and also in prices. Our rule, like that of many others, is, "quick sales and small profits," therefore call in and we will supply you most satisfactorily.

DORCHESTER SCHOOLS.—No. 9.

The public visitations of the schools embraced in District No. 4, upper road and Mount Bowdoin, consisting of Primary No. 4, Miss Lucy P. Tolman, teacher; Primary No. 11, Miss Eleanor Jones, teacher; and Grammar, under the charge of Quincy Bicknell, Jr., Esq., took place on Tuesday, Feb. 27th last.

The Committee appointed to visit these schools, consisted of Messrs. Vose, Hall, Spooner, Wadleigh and Macintosh. The teacher of Primary No. 4, Miss Tolman, has been connected with it, it is believed, some ten years, and is very devoted and successful. The school has, during that long period, been conducted in a manner satisfactory to the School Committee, and to the general satisfaction, it is believed, of the citizens immediately interested. She deserves and should receive the approbation and very grateful consideration for her long, faithful and devoted labors. Miss Jones, teacher of Primary No. 11, has had charge of the school about one year; long enough, however, to establish the fact that she is a teacher of no ordinary promise and actual fulfillment. This new school was gathered in the Spring of 1846. The distance from the school house to several families belonging to District No. 4, being so great as to render it very inconvenient, it was deemed necessary, by those families, to apply to the town for the erection of a school house and the establishment of an additional school. At a meeting of the town, March 2d, 1846, the subject was legally presented under the article, "To know, on the petition of Marshall P. Wilder, et al, if the town will take any measures to establish a Primary School, near the junction of Columbia and Green Streets and the Street leading over Mount Bowdoin from said junction."

The subject was referred to the School Committee, who appointed as sub-committee of Messrs. Robert Vose, Thaddeus Clapp and Rev. Increase Sumner Smith, to ascertain the actual wants of that portion of the town from which the petition, then before the board, proceeded; and the said Committee were instructed and fully authorized to report in favor of the petitioners, provided it was ascertained that thirty scholars could be obtained to attend the school if established. This Committee, at a subsequent meeting of the board, reported: "That the undersigned, having been a Committee chosen for the purpose, appointed a meeting at which gentlemen from the part of the town interested were invited to be present, and to bring with them such information in respect to the number of children to be benefited by the proposed school as would enable the Committee to decide upon the question of its establishment. In accordance, therefore, with the vote of the board the Committee recommend the establishment of a Primary School as asked for by the petitioners." This report was accepted by the board and subsequently by the town, and a neat and convenient little school house was erected and furnished and the school organized.

The Grammar School, under the care of Mr. Bicknell, in many respects, may be said to be in a healthy and flourishing condition. Mr. B. has a way peculiar to himself as teacher and manager of a school. He is a most thorough and successful teacher, and apparently very enthusiastic and devoted. His system of teaching and of discipline is the true one, I entertain not a doubt, if not too exclusive. The principle of "I take the responsibility," is correct if a perfect knowledge of what is right and proper under all circumstances is possessed, and the rights, desires and responsibilities of others are properly considered,—and the course pursued is strictly in accordance with this perfect knowledge, and admission of others' claims.

The school, at the time Mr. B. took charge of it, was in a very low and unsatisfactory condition; and it must be admitted by all, that from disorder very soon came good order,—from anarchy and rebellion soon came perfect obedience,—from misrule came a system of measures which resulted in the highest good of the school. That Mr. Bicknell is a successful teacher, the standing of the school for a large portion of the time since it has been under his control, conclusively proves. I have said that Mr. B. has a way, also, peculiar to himself, in managing and disciplining a school. It may be added, it is thought, that he has a way peculiar to the times! This way is perfect obedience, perfect order, and prompt and perfect lessons. If the writer is not very much mistaken, there is a great falling away and lowering down of the good old puritan system of family and school government. It is thought that in too many instances any thing that may be properly called good family government and judicious discipline at the present age, is an obsolete idea. It cannot be doubted, it appears to the writer, that parental restraint, and a watchful attention to the conduct of children, and the exercise of proper authority over them, is as necessary as it was years within the recollection of a large portion of the parents of the present generation of children. Says a writer, "That the master of a family, using proper restraints, and gentle punishments towards his children, teaches them goodness, and by this help, instructs them in a virtue, which afterwards they practice upon other grounds, and without thinking of a penalty or a bribe; and this is what we call a liberal education and a liberal service." It is a much more agreeable duty, and more in accordance with the disposition of the parent who most tenderly loves his child, to talk to him, to reason with him on the beauty and excellence of obedience, truthfulness, kindness, and of the loveliness of virtue, than to enforce the practice of these virtues, if necessary, by inflicting punishment. But let the parent or master counsel, advise, entreat, warn and command even; let him dress up all the virtues of human nature with the most beautiful habiliments, let the parents praise the social virtues, and pursue any and every other course to reclaim the vicious child, his efforts will, in most cases, prove unavailing, unless he brings to his aid a penalty for wrong doing. The doctrine inculcated many years ago, of "Spare the rod, spoil the child," is as true now as then. To establish the fact that there is a great, deplorable and culpable remissness on the part of parents, let the unprejudiced and candid observer visit stores, taverns, bowling saloons, railroad depots, ay, let him visit the school room and the religious meeting, and he will be under the painful necessity of admitting the above position. But if he is not convinced, let him go to the courts of justice, to the records of the Courts and to the penitentiaries and learn the number of children and youth of all ages sentenced, for almost every species of crime, and no stronger or more conclusive proof will be required. Parents, awake, awake to a sense of duty before it is too late!! NEPSENET.

Pronunciation. The words Allopathy, Homoeopathy, and Hydropathy with those derived from them, are in most instances erroneously pronounced. The following division shows the true pronunciation, the emphasis being on the italicized syllables: Al-lo-pa-thy; Ho-moe-o-pa-thy and Hy-dro-pa-thy.

HENRY'S MERCHANT'S MAGAZINE AND COMMERCIAL REVIEW. The June number closes the twentieth volume and the tenth year of the existence of this most excellent and valuable periodical. And its continuance so long, constantly improving in the character of its contents, and increasing in size and amount of matter, fully attest its value, and the estimate which the public place upon it. Its reputation is now co-extensive with the commercial world, and so far as we are acquainted—and we are with works of a similar character published in England, France, and Germany—it is without a comparison as a valuable repository of statistical and other information in relation to trade, commerce, manufactures, mining banking &c., &c. Such a work is an honor to our literature and our country. And it owes its great success and reputation mainly to its talented, persevering, but unpretending editor and proprietor, Mr. Hunt himself. The editor, in closing the last page of the last volume, modestly says: "We think the work, as our knowledge has increased, and our means of information been extended, evinces improvement and progress," and promises that no effort on his part shall be wanting to make it "equally acceptable to all classes of intelligent men in any way connected with trade and commerce, in all their bearings upon the legislation of States and nations, and upon the development of the great industrial interests of man and society, at home and abroad." The library of the political economist, statesman, or jurist cannot be complete without the Merchants' Magazine.—Washington Union.

COMPLIMENTARY. "How often is it that a rosy-checked man, who never indulges in the use of ardent spirits, is suspected of taking a drop now and then. An occurrence which took place recently verifies this fact. Mr. L., was passing along the Street, early after breakfast, when his progress was politely arrested by a well-dressed, well-fed gentleman, from the country, with 'Sir can you inform me where I can procure a few gallons of fine old brandy? I wish to take it out to my place for private use.' 'Well sir,' said Mr. L., 'I'm informed that Mr. S—, of the Bank Exchange, is an au fait in those matters, and will supply you.' After showing the stranger where Mr. S—, was to be found continued, 'You have the advantage of me—I don't know you.' Nor do I know you," replied the stranger, "but you look like a man who knows where the best brandy is to be found." Mr. L. bowed to the stranger, and passed down the street, muttering that he did not know which excelled, the man's politeness or his impudence.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, JULY 14, 1849.

ANTHRACITE COAL IN MASSACHUSETTS. Prof. Ridgway of Philadelphia to whom was committed the survey of the coal district of Mansfield, (Mass.) estimates the amount of coal, on about 1500 acres of their lands as four hundred tons. It exists in five beds. One vein in eight feet in thickness. He estimates the difference of cost between the Mansfield and Pennsylvania coal at Boston, to be $2.20 per ton. Its composition shows 91.4 per cent, of carbon and Prof. Ridgway states that it burns with more flame, and ignites more readily than any red ash coal he has ever seen. If his statements are correct the discovery will be most valuable to our State.

POISON IN EGGS. The white of an egg, boiled hard in the shell, suspended in the air afterwards, a few liquid drops from it will dissolve myrrh, which is more than either water, oil, spirits, or even fire itself can effect. A little putrid white of an egg taken into the stomach occasions nausea, horror, fainting vomiting, diarrhoea, and gripes. It inflames the bile, excites heat, thirst, fever and dissolves the humor like the plague.

SPLENDID ROSE TREE. Persons passing through our village will notice in front of the residence of Mr. John Brummett a beautiful sight—a Prairie Rose Tree in full bloom. It calls forth the admiration of all who pass and is certainly an object worth going quite a distance to behold.

SINGULAR DEATH. An infant about a year and a half old, died in Boston on Monday—having, while playing with a fork thrust it through the eye into the brain.

MAILS FOR CALIFORNIA. The mails for California are made up in Charleston, (S. C.) for Havana, on the 1st and 15th of each month. At Havana they are made up monthly for Chagres and overland. Letters and papers put into the post office, at any time, will be sent to Charleston; but the best way is to make up packages and deposit them in the post office on or before the 10th and 25th of each month.

LYNN STATISTICS. The population of Lynn, on the first of May last, was 12606; of which 6606 were females, 350 Irish, and some one hundred colored people. The number of families is about two thousand. During the summer there is a transient population of some twelve hundred, six or seven hundred of which come hither for pleasure, and the rest to work. The population of Lynn, says the Pioneer, in an article from which these items are gathered, is remarkable for the large proportion of persons under the average size. The real estate of Lynn is worth from $3,800,000 to $3,500,000; the personal $1,700,000. There are few places in which the property is less unequally divided, than in Lynn. The property of the richest man in town may be set down at four hundred thousand dollars.

IMPORTANT LAW CASE. The case of the disputed will of the late Edward B. Phillips is now on trial before the Supreme Judicial Court at Ipswich, Essex County. The amount at issue is nearly a million of dollars. Harvard University is interested in the sum of one hundred thousand dollars, bequeathed for the purposes of the Observatory connected with the college. Josiah Quincy, senior, is the executor named in the will.

WINE AT THE SACRAMENT. A few Sundays since, the Rev. Mr. Mellen, while officiating at the Unitarian Church in North Chelmsford, refused to administer wine at the sacrament—stating that he was not in the habit of doing it, and did not approve of the practice. One of the deacons forbade him to use water, or to assign his reasons for the use of it from the desk.

HOLDEN'S MAGAZINE. We have received the July number of this popular work. Among the contents we notice, under the head of 'Pulpit Portraits,' a sketch of the Rev. Richard S. Storrs, Jr. This is the first number of volume fourth. C. W. Holden, 109 Nassau St., New York, publisher.

PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL. Messrs. Fowler & Wells, New York, have promptly issued this standard work for July. O. S. and L. N. Fowler, editors. This number contains a likeness of Judge Lewis of Pennsylvania.

FIRST ON THE LIST. The New Hampshire Legislature have voted unanimously to present a suitable block of granite to the Washington National Monument, and have appropriated three hundred dollars to the object.

ANTI-CHOLERA PRESCRIPTIONS. Don't get in a fluster, and go on a bustle, nor allow yourself to be terrified by; but keep a cool head, and never be led to join a hurrah and spree. Don't dread it at all, be ye old, young or small, neither be overly rash; but keep calmly on, as ye always have done, and avoid eating acid and trash. Be tidy and clean, avoiding every thing green, whether it be cabbage or krait; and quite skimming you'll go, if you take for motto, "Always know what you're about."

STATE LAWS. The Secretary of State, Mr. Calhoun, will please accept our thanks for a copy of the Acts and Resolves of the last Legislature.

A HEALTHY TOWN. In the town of East Bridgewater, containing about two thousand five hundred inhabitants, the resident physician there, Dr. Orr, has attended more than fifty births since the first of January last. During the same time there have been only three deaths in the town, all of consumption.

SHAKER FLUID EXTRACT OF VALERIAN.

This is the most efficacious preparation known, in cases of Headache, Sleeplessness, and all Nervous Irritability.—its Anodyne qualities, producing gentle and refreshing Sleep,—and is therefore of unsurpassable value to aged persons, or those suffering by Nervous affections. The following letter deserves especial notice.

Bowdoin, Aug. 10, 1848.
Messrs. Edward Binley & Co., I have not till the present time found leisure to devote any attention to the "Fluid Extract of Valerian," a bottle of which you were kind enough to send me a few weeks since. I have now sufficiently used it to satisfy me, that it contains the active medicinal principle of Valerian in a purer, more simple and concentrated state, than any other preparation of this root with which I am acquainted. From the great success which has attended its use, I think the public may rely upon it as a very valuable medicine in all Nervous Affections, Headache, Sleeplessness, &c. Permit me to add, that the manufacturer should continue to prepare the Extract with the same care as heretofore.

With much respect, yours, &c.,

Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry.

The great remedy for CONSUMPTION, and the best medicine known to man for Asthma of every stage, Liver Complaints, Bronchitis, Influenza, Cough, Colds, Bleeding of the Lungs, Shortness of Breath, Pains and Weakness in the Side, Breast, &c., and all other diseases of the

PULMONARY ORGANS.

A very important disease over which this 'Balsam' exerts a very powerful and salutary influence, is that of DISEASED LIVER.

In this complaint it has undoubtedly proved more efficacious than any remedy hitherto employed, and in numerous instances when patients had endured long and severe suffering from the disease, without receiving the least benefit from various remedies, and when MERCURY had been resorted to in vain, the use of this Balsam has restored the LIVER to a healthy action, and in many instances effected

PERMANENT CURES.

after every known remedy had failed to produce the desired effect.

Besides its astonishing efficacy in the diseases above mentioned, we also find it a very effectual remedy in ASTHMA, a complaint in which it has been extensively used with decided success, even in cases of years' standing.

It not only emanates from a regular physician, but has also been well tested in all the complaints for which it is recommended. It is not my intention, therefore, either to cloak it in mystery, or in any way deceive the public by over rating its virtues; on the contrary, I shall simply endeavor to give a brief statement of its usefulness, and better myself in surprising efficacy will enable me to furnish such proofs of its virtues, as will satisfy the most incredulous, that Consumption may and "CAN BE CURED," if this medicine be resorted to.

The genuine is signed I. BUTTS.

A sure cure for Dyspepsia and Costiveness.

HARRISON'S PERISTALTICS have had 12 years' trial by the Medical Faculty and the public generally. This medicine is in Lozenges, pleasant to the taste, and may be given to children. The Peristaltics are gently laxative, and by their tonic qualities improve the digestive organs and invigorate the whole system. They cure Costiveness, Headache, Dizziness, Sleeplessness, Jaundice, Oppression after Eating, Liver Complaint, Diarrhoea, Piles, Dropsy, Delirium, Rheumatism, Pains in the Bones, Scrofula, Tic Douloureux, Worms, &c., &c.

These Lozenges are excellent in all Nervous complaints and Dyspeptic symptoms, Female Suppressions and Irregularities, especially in the young. This medicine contains no preparation of Mercury whatever, and no ingredient which may not safely be given to the most delicate female and under any circumstances.

This preparation is also put up in bottles for refreshing persons, who should always have a supply. An occasional use of the Peristaltics prevents Fever, Bilious complaints, and chronic or East India Diarrhoea. They are admirably adapted to the complaints incident to the coast of Africa, Sumatra, West Indies and South America.

These Lozenges are recommended by some of the best Physicians in Boston, who use them in their families and general practice. All affected with oppression after eating, or rising of food will find great relief. They are the best medicine for children known.

DR. BRIGGS'S SHOULDER BRACES AND SUPPORTERS

are acknowledged the Medical Faculty of New York to be the best ever invented.

Read the following letter from Prof. C. P. BRONSON, A. M., M. D., Teacher of Elocution and Music.

I have no idea that your Braces will cure many diseases; but as a preventive of disease, I find by considerable experience and observation, that it is very valuable; particularly such diseases as are incident to the digestive organs, lungs and spine; because it pleasantly compels a person to be straight, and thereby aids the operations of nature. "Blessed are the upright, both as well as mind; and the opposite is equally true—Cursed are the crooked."

I have applied this brace to a great variety of persons, male and female, old and young; and in most of these cases with decided benefit, especially those of feeble constitutions and slender form. And I am particularly pleased with its structure, conforming, as it does, so entirely to physiological principles; on which account it commends itself to reason and common sense, as well as to science. I am acquainted with a good many articles of somewhat similar character and purpose, but consider yours preferable to any of them; as it differs, in some important respects from all others. Allow me to hope that you will not resort to any of the too common modes of "alluring purchasers," only give it fair trial with reasonable persons, and they will need no other recommendation.

Yours truly,

C. P. BRONSON.

NORFOLK SS.—At a meeting of the County Commissioners at Dedham, June Term, 1849:

ON the petition of Albion Dearborn and others, presented at the April term of said Commissioners last past, praying that a town road in Quincy, called South Street, may be altered by widening the same, and also that a new public highway may be laid out in said town, as in said petition described. The Commissioners having first caused notice to be given to said town, and all other parties interested in said petition, and having viewed said Pine Street, and the route of said proposed new road, and fully heard all said parties, do adjudge that common convenience and necessity require alterations of said Pine Street to be laid out and made as prayed for, without said new road.

It is therefore ordered that the County Commissioners meet at the house of Thomas White, 2d, in Weymouth, on THURSDAY, the sixteenth day of August next, at ten of the clock in the forenoon, and thence proceed to locate said alterations. And that an attested copy of this Adjudication and Order thereon be served upon the Clerk of said town of Weymouth, thirty days at least before said sixteenth day of August next; that a like copy be published three weeks successively in the Quincy Patriot, a newspaper printed in said Quincy, the last publication thereof to be fourteen days at least before said day; and that like copies be posted up in two or more public places in said town, fourteen days at least before said day, that all persons and parties interested, may then and there appear and be heard if they see cause.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

NORFOLK SS.—At a meeting of the County Commissioners at Dedham, June Term, 1849:

ON the petition of Albion Dearborn and others, presented at the April term of said Commissioners last past, praying that a town road in Quincy, called South Street, may be altered by widening thereof, as in said petition set forth. The Commissioners after due notice to said town of Quincy and others, and after a view of said road, and a full hearing of all said parties interested, do adjudge that the common convenience and necessity of the inhabitants of said town require that said South Street should be altered as prayed for.

It is therefore ordered that the County Commissioners will meet at the Hancock House, in said Quincy, on TUESDAY, the twenty first day of August, at eight o'clock in the forenoon, and thence proceed to locate the said alterations. And that an attested copy of this Adjudication and Order thereon be served upon the Clerk of said town of Quincy thirty days at least before said twenty first day of August next; that a like copy be published three weeks successively in the Quincy Patriot, a newspaper printed in said Quincy, the last publication thereof to be fourteen days at least before said day. And that like copies be posted up in two or more public places in said town, fourteen days at least before said day, that all persons and parties interested may then and there appear and be heard if they see cause.

By the County Commissioners.

ATTEST, EZRA W. SAMPSON, Clerk.

A true copy of the Adjudication on file and order therein.

French Patent Oil for Leather.

THIS French Patent Oil is prepared for Carriages, Harness, Boots, Shoes, and all articles that require a good polish on the surface; it will give any article of Leather and at the same time from its oily properties tends much to preserve. It will always be moist and pliant, at the same time free from grease when handled; there is not a spirit of such an oil invented that would give one-half the brilliancy to the leather to which this is applied, and will never get mouldy. It may be exposed to water or washed, and will not lose its brilliancy.

[It] Harness as well as all other articles made of leather, when polished with the above oil, will never be injured by rats or mice;—likewise dust has no effect on it, and it is not to be feared that any crust will settle on said leather preserved with the above oil.

Instructions—Drop a few drops upon a piece of sponge, and all that is required is, to apply it lightly on the leather to obtain the finest lustre.

[It] Price, 62 1/2 cts per bottle, or $6 per dozen. Manufactured by Messrs. Salomon & Co from Paris.

For sale by H. A. RANSOM & Co.

POETRY.

By Request.
RESIGNATION.
BY H. W. LOGGIFELLOW.

There is no flock, however watched and tended,
But one dead lamb is there!
There is no fireside, however defended,
But has one vacant chair!

Let us be patient! these severe afflictions
Not from the ground arise,
But oftentimes celestial benedictions
Assume this dark disguise.

We see but dimly through the mists and vapors;
Amid these earthly damps
What seems to us but dim, funeral tapers,
May be Heaven's distant lamps.

There is no Death! what seems so is transition;
This life of mortal breath
Is but a suburb of the life Elysian,
Whose portals we call Death.

She is not dead—the child of our affection—
But gone unto that school
Where she no longer needs our poor protection,
And Christ himself doth rule.

In that great Cloister's stillness and seclusion,
By guardian angels led,
Safe from temptations, safe from sin's pollution,
She lives, whom we call dead.

Day after day we think what she is doing
In those bright realms of air:
Yea, after year her tender steps pursuing,
Behold her grown more fair.

Thus do we walk with her, and keep unbroken
The bond which Nature gives,
Thinking that our remembrance, though unspoken,
May reach her where she lives.

Not as a child shall we again behold her;
For when, with raptures wild,
In our embraces we again enfold her,
She will not be a child;

But a fair maiden, in her Father's mansion,
Clothed with celestial grace;
And beautiful with all the soul's expansion
Shall we behold her face.

And though at times, impetuous with emotion
And language long suppressed,
The swelling heart heaves moaning like the ocean,
That cannot be at rest;

We will be patient, and assuage the feeling
We cannot wholly stay;
By silence sanctifying, not concealing
The grief that must have way.

CHILDREN IN HEAVEN

My Lord hath need of these flowerets gay,
The reaper said, and smiled;
Dear tokens of the earth are they,
When he was once a child!

In the broad fields of heaven—
In the immortal bowers,
Dwelling by Life's clear river,
Amid undying flowers—

Myriads of beauteous spirits,
Fair children of the earth,
Linked in bright bands celestial,
Sing of their human birth.

They sing of earth and heaven—
Divine voices rise
In thanks and praises unto Him
Who called them to the skies.

The golden-haired—the blue-eyed,
That lifted up our life,
And folded were within our hearts,
From all the world's rude strife—

The blessings of our bosoms,
The stars upon our sky,
The flowers springing in our path,
Too beautiful to die—

They're all there—in Heaven—
Safe, safe, and sweetly blest;
No cloud of sin can shadow
Their bright and holy rest.

ANECDOTES.

A countryman sowing his ground, two smart fellows riding that way, one of them called to him with an insolent air, "Well, honest fellow, 'tis your business to sow, but we reap the fruits of your labor." To which the farmer replied, " 'Tis very likely you may for I am sowing hemp."

A black servant being examined in the church catechism by the minister of the parish, was asked, "What are you made of?" Cato answered, "Of mud, massa." On being told he should, of dust, he replied, "No, massa, it no do—no stick together."

A voter, deficient in personal beauty, said to Sheridan, "I mean to withdraw my countenance from you." Many thanks for the favor, replied the candidate, "On being told he should, of dust, he replied, 'No, massa, it no do—no stick together.'"

A wag was jogging home rather late and a little happy, when, passing by a dark alley, a large two-footed fellow stepped out, and, seizing him by the collar, demanded his money. "Money!" said the wag, "money! I have none—but if you wait a moment, I will give you my note at thirty days."

Said a Missouri Judge to a witness on the stand, "How do you know the plaintiff was intoxicated on the evening referred to?" "Because I saw him a few minutes after the muss trying to pull off his trousers with a boot jack!"

A broker, anxious to ascertain the rate of rents in a certain village, accosted a loafer whom he met and received in reply from the witty fellow,—"Look here, sir, (lifting his arm and placing his hand upon his coat, nearest his heart, thus displaying his tattered garment,) rents in this place are enormous."

J. A. Holden, Tailor,

SCHOOL STREET, QUINCY,

WOULD inform the inhabitants of Quincy and vicinity, that owing to an increase of business he has found it necessary to MAKE LARGE ADDITIONS to his former stock, and can now offer to his patrons

A Good and carefully selected Stock,

among which are to be found a good assortment of

GERMAN, ENGLISH, and AMERICAN BROADCLOTHS, of various prices and quality;

TWEEDS, EMERETS and CASHMERETS, both CHEAP and COSTLY, suitable for Men's and Boys' Clothes;

In PANTALONERY, new DOESKIN FABRICS and other denominations of Fancy Weavings, which he offers as

Particularly acceptable and Splendid, for Summer wear.

He would also ask attention to an AMPLE ASSORTMENT of

VESTINGS, of the most Rich and Beautiful Styles, both as regards quality and pattern.

J. A. HOLDEN employs Workmen of EXPERIENCE and ABILITY to make his Garments, and the securing of so large a business in so short a time is proof conclusive of his ability to serve his patrons.

Also, an assortment of Caps, Stocks, Cravats, Bosoms, Collars, and READY MADE CLOTHING.

He invites the attention of those who wish to obtain Garments cut and made in the most EASY AND ELEGANT STYLE, trusting as he confidently does to his ability to please those who may favor him with their custom. He has only to add that all his goods will be sold at the LOWEST CASH PRICE.

Quincy, June 9.

Encourage your Own.

To the People of Quincy—
THE following is a well known motto, and strictly true:

"That County or Town that gives the most liberal encouragement to its own manufactures of every kind is well known to thrive, and increase in wealth and population."

There are a few interesting facts, of which we wish to remind you, and which we are inclined to think have slipped from the memory of some, and which it will be for your advantage as well as ours to remember.

1st. That at the QUINCY BOOKSTORE you will find all the

in use in this and the neighboring towns.

2d. That at the same place you will find every kind of

Blank Account Book,
RECORD or MEMORANDUM BOOK.

3d. That there you will find a great assortment of Miscellaneous, Juvenile and Toy Books.

4th. That there you will find all kinds of STATIONERY.

5th. That there you will find an innumerable variety of
FANCY GOODS.

6th. That all the above will be sold at the very Lowest Market Prices.

7th. That we are entirely disinterested when we say that you will be much better satisfied with your selves and your bargains if you trade at home, in preference to "out of town."

8th. That there you will find a GOOD LIBRARY where you can procure reading on reasonable terms.

9th. That the Proprietors are agents for all the popular MAGAZINES, receiving the subscriptions themselves and furnishing the numbers on their own responsibility, free of any expense. Many have forgotten this of late, preferring to subscribe of some travelling agent, to one in their own town.

10th. That they RE-BIND old Books, Pamphlets, Periodicals, Music, etc., as cheap as they can afford to and as quick as anybody.

These things we wish to call to your memory, because while we have been moving on in a quiet kind of way, you seem partly to have forgotten the old place, thinking perhaps that we did not keep up with the times in the variety of our goods and also in prices. Our rule, like that of many others, is, "quick sales and small profits," therefore call in and we will supply you most satisfactorily.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.

The unparalleled and astonishing WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY, for which it is recommended many cases after the skill of the most unavailing, has effected a large and increasing sale. This fact has caused unprincipled and imitators to palm off spurious similar name and appearance, for the sake of "Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry" genuine. The rest merely imitate the original, while they possess none of its GENUINE.

The genuine Balsam is put up in words "Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry" in the glass; each bottle bears front, with the signature of H. W. WISTAR, 1844; on which will be written signature of I. BUTTS.

Be careful and get the genuine BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY. Less signed by BUTTS. Address all W. FOWLE, Boston, Mass.

DR. BRIGGS'S SHOULDER BRACES are acknowledged by the Faculty of New York to be the best. Read the following letter from Prof. SON, A. M., M. D., Teacher of Electro-

Dr. Briggs: Dear Sir—You ask me to say a few words in regard to your Shoulder Braces. I have no idea that your Braces will ever be as a preventive of disease, I have considerable experience and observation, that such a preventive of disease, as the digestive organs, lungs and spine; as the muscles of the back, neck and arms, and the operations of nature. "Blessed right" body as well as mind; and the equally true—Cursed are the crooked.

I have applied this brace to a great many cases, male and female, old and young, of these cases with decided benefit, especially of feeble constitutions and slender form, particularly pleased with its structure, it does so, entirely to the physical and mental health, which account it commends itself to common sense, as well as to science. I have a good many articles of a somewhat aeter and purpose, but consider yours any of them; as it differs, in some important particulars, from all others. Allow me to hope that resort to any of the too common mode purchasers; only give it fair trial to persons, and they will need no other recommendation.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS AND IMITATIONS.

The unparalleled and astonishing efficacy of DR. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY, in all the diseases for which it is recommended; curing many cases after the skill of the best physicians was unavailing, has effected a large and increasing demand for it. This fact has caused unprincipled counterfeiters and imitators to palm off spurious mixtures, of similar name and appearance, for the genuine Balsam. "Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry" is the only genuine. The rest merely imitate the name of the original, while they possess none of its virtues. LOOK WELL TO THE MARKS OF THE GENUINE.

The genuine Balsam is put up in bottles, with the words "Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, Philadelphia, 1844" blown in the glass; each bottle bearing a label on the front, with the signature of H. WISTAR, M.D. This will be enveloped with a new wrapper; copyright secured, 1844; on which will always appear the signature of H. WISTAR. Be careful of the genuine DR. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY. None genuine unless signed by I. BUTTS. Address all orders to SETH W. FOWLE, Boston, Mass.

Agents—Mrs. E. HAYDEN, Quincy; Oliver Perkins, Braintree. 2w July 21.

A sure cure for Dyspepsia and Costiveness.
HARRISON'S PERISTALTICS have had 12 years' trial by the Medical Faculty and the public generally. This medicine is in Lozenges, pleasant to the taste, and may be given to children. The Peristaltics are gently laxative, and by their tonic qualities improve the digestive organs and invigorate the whole system. They cure Constipation, Headache, Dizziness, Sleeplessness, Jaundice, Oppression after Eating, Liver Complaint, Diarrhea, Piles, Dropsy, Debility, Faintness, Weak Stomach, Heartburn, Palpitation, Rheumatism, Pains in the Bones, Scrofula, Tic-Douleur, Worms, etc., etc.

These Lozenges are excellent in all Nervous complaints and Dyspeptic symptoms, Female Suppressions and Irregularities, especially in the young. This medicine contains no preparation of Mercury whatever, and no ingredient which may not safely be given to the most delicate female and under any circumstances.

This preparation is also put up in bottles for seafaring persons, who should always have a supply. An occasional use of the Peristaltics prevents Fevers, Biliac complaints, and cholera or East India Diarrhea. They are admirably adapted to the complaints incident to the coast of Africa, Sumatra, West Indies and South America.

These Lozenges are recommended by some of the best Physicians in Boston, who use them in their families and general practice. All afflicted with oppression after eating, or rising of food will find great relief. They are the best medicine for children known.

For sale in Quincy by Mrs. E. HAYDEN. Seth W. Fowle, 135 Washington street, Boston, General Agent. 1y Dec. 16.

DR. BRIGGS'S SHOULDER BRACES AND SUPPORTERS are acknowledged by the Medical Faculty of New York to be the best ever invented. Read the following letter from Prof. C. P. BRONSON, A. M., M. D., Teacher of Education and Music.
Dr. Briggs: Dear Sir—You ask my candid opinion of your "Suspenders and Shoulder Brace." I am not apt to be carried away with new things, nor accustomed to receive whatever comes highly recommended. I care but little for theory; practice, or use, is the great test; hence I abide by this motto—"Prove all things, and hold fast that which is good." I have no idea that your brace is a remedy for any disease; but as a preventive of disease, I find by considerable experience and observation, that it is very valuable; particularly such diseases as are incident to the digestive organs, lungs and spine; because it pleasantly compels a person to be straight, and thereby aids the operations of nature. It is the upright; body as well as mind; and the opposite is equally true—"Cursed are the crooked."
I have applied this brace to a great variety of persons, male and female, old and young; and in most of these cases with decided benefit, especially those of feeble constitutions and slender forms. And I am particularly pleased with its structure, conforming, as it does, so entirely to physiological principles; on which account it commends itself to reason and common sense, as well as to science. I am acquainted with a good many articles of a somewhat similar character and purpose, but consider yours preferable to any of them; as it differs, in some important respects from all others. Allow me to hope that you will not resort to any of the too common modes of alluring purchasers only give it fair trial with reasonable persons, and they will need no other recommendation. Yours truly, C. P. BRONSON.

French Patent Oil for Leather.
THIS French Patent Oil is prepared for Carriages, Harness, Boots, Shoes, and all articles that require a good polish on the surface; it will give any article of Leather A MOST BRILLIANT APPEARANCE, and at the same time from its oily properties tends much to preserve. It will always be moist and pliant, at the same time free from grease when handled; there is not a spirit of such an oil invented that would give one-half the brilliancy to the leather to which this is applied, and will never get mouldy. It may be exposed to water or washed, and will not lose its brilliancy. Harness as well as all other articles made of leather, when polished with the above oil, will never be injured by rats or mice; likewise dust has no effect on it, and it is not to be feared that any crust will settle on said leather preserved with the above oil. Instructions.—Drop a few drops upon a piece of sponge, and all that is required is, to apply it lightly on the leather to obtain the finest lustre. Price, 62 1/2 cts. per bottle, or $6 per dozen. Manufactured by Messrs. Salomon & Co. from Paris. For sale by H. A. RANSOM & Co. Quincy, June 23. 1f

Circassian Oil.
THIS Oil promotes the growth of the hair, and renders it beautifully soft and moist, keeping the hair in place after combing, brushing, or curling. This Oil is highly recommended, and is considered almost an indispensable article at the toilet. Making the Hair what it is, then comb or brush it immediately after, and it will produce the most brilliant lustre imaginable. A fine head of hair is one of the greatest personal ornaments one can boast. Among all the various components of loveliness it stands preeminent. The face may be destitute of the beauty of form, the head may be badly shaped, but by the aid of the hair the defects may be removed, and by its skillful arrangement, stamp of elegance placed upon the whole person. Nature, it seems, intended it for our finishing stroke, the crowning and beautifying of all the personal charms. The lovers of grace and beauty, knowing well the value of this ornament, have ever paid the most attention to its health and preservation; but for only of late that the physiology of the hair has been well understood, and for that reason their efforts heretofore have not met with but poor success. Recent discoveries have substantiated the facts, that the life and growth of the hair is strictly analogous to that of vegetables, and that its nourishment and beauty depends upon a secretion of a peculiar oily substance which emanates from the scalp. This substance not only supports the hair but preserves its color and brilliancy, and prevents its falling or falling out. But when it happens that this secretion is deficient the hair immediately loses its brilliancy, it becomes coarse, faded and falls out. Some time ago my attention was turned to this subject and I labored a long time in preparing an article similar to that naturally secreted for the hair, so that when the powers of nature failed it might be supplied as a substitute. After a series of trials and experiments, I at last succeeded in my discovery of the Circassian Oil, which answers admirably as a substitute for the natural secretion. Physicians who have examined the Oil, pronounce it the best and most natural remedy for the hair ever prepared, and its unprecedented success so far, fully warrants the claims bestowed upon it. To prevent fraud, each bottle will bear the signature of the inventor, Dr. W. B. BUGBEE. Quincy, May 12. 3m

For Sale.

MISCELLANY.

THE YOUNG WIFE.

Dr. Lawrence Bell had one grievous fault; he would go to Boston every few months, and be away from home a week. And somehow it was in his absence old chronic diseases and rheumatic pains would clinch the tighter. But what took him there? 'Ah, there's the rub.'

As a set-off to this public grief, however Dr. Bell had many, very many virtues. He was kind to the poor. The needy had often cause to bless the bounty of his hand. Where sorrow and sickness were was he, soothing the one and robbing the other of its pangs. He was the good angel of many a heavy heart and the feet of infancy grew lighter in his presence. Indeed, he was a very 'darling of a man'; and it puzzled the wits of all to say, which loved him most the venerable matrons, or the amiable young misses of his native town.

His parents were long since dead; but the doctor still lived in the quaint old homestead. It was an ancient pile, both out and in. Its dormitories, with lights of seven by nine; its massive doors of oak; its low broad chimneys; its flattened enough to reflect her pretty face, and not encased in gold, at that. The drooping ceiling hung above her with an appalling lowness; and a huge eight day clock, as old as the 'oldest inhabitant,' standing alone in the corner, with a full moon above its face, was ticking the pulsations of time as regularly as if no one were executing it at all.

Weeks and months passed pleasantly by. The Doctor pursued the even tenor of his way—healing the sick and spreading the sunshine of gladness around the path of poverty. Charlotte, who was accounted a belle in the city, got along bravely in her new position. Her visitors were kindly treated, and her hospitality was the theme of general praise. All they could say about her was, that she was a little proud—just a little—and this was uttered or whispered in strict confidence to friends alone.

The Doctor was a quiet man. If he said a little he thought a great deal—in the common parlance of the village—he knew a thing or two. Charlotte was sly and cunning as a fox, the little rogue; and began to hint to him something about a fine brick house, with marble front and folding doors; crown-glass windows, and full length portraits; Brussels carpet and mahogany chairs, rosewood tables and yielding divans, et cetera, et cetera. She served him with a dish of these in simple style at first; but as the symptoms became more favorable, increased the dose, until the Doctor felt himself ready to cry peccavi, and yield at discretion.

Weeks and months passed by and poor Charlotte was beginning to despair of realizing her pleasant dreams. She would look at times a little sad at Dr. Bell. 'Tis even said the Doctor once surprised her in a flood of tears. But she was always kind and gentle, and an ungenerous thought towards him, were treason in her breast. She loved him with her young heart's best and purest love, and seemed to live upon his smiles, yet, when alone, she could not help contrasting the rough and unseemly house in which she lived, with the stately mansion of her father, in which she passed her former years.

'This won't do,' thought Dr. Bell. 'I must school that gentle heart; for I know the soil is there to grow the choicest flowers—flowers whose fragrance will cheer the duldest hours of her life; add sweetness and adornment to her being, and yield their rich perfumes wherever she may set her feet.' And the Doctor drew on his second glove.

There is a peculiarity in the climate of the old Bay State. A native can snuff the air, and though there be a cloudless sky, tell within an hour of the time of rain. It was a sober, golden afternoon in autumn. Surged by the sultry breeze, the yellow leaf rustled in 'melancholy eloquence.' Eddying gusts were sporting on the hills, and the valleys sent up their plaintive murmurs to the ear. A thousand birds, of every hue and song, were abroad.

le ones, and a saintly smile of Christian resignation beamed from her half tearful eyes. Charlotte stood for a moment in the door of that miserable looking sanctuary, unnoticed by the inmates, and at a single glance saw their painful destitution of the comforts of life. In one corner was a sad apology for a bed, close to which stood a plain uncovered stand, supporting a well thumbed bible. Not a thread of carpet was to be seen. A half-quenched fire was struggling into life upon the hearth; an old and homely cupboard, without doors, exhibited a meagre account of knives, forks and dishes. Recognizing Dr. Bell, she sprang towards him and clasped his hand in hers with feelings akin to emotion. Charlotte was not a little astonished at such a reception; but they were introduced—and the poor woman at once took her by the hand and led her to the chair which she had just left.

'You are welcome, my dear madam, to such shelter as the God of the shelterless has provided for me. But you are cold—very cold,—and she laid her hand upon Charlotte's shawl.

'Yes—a little—I am—but—and it came to Charlotte's mind that the poor woman, too, was cold, with her plain and unseasonable dress; and it were cruel in her to complain in her presence. Charlotte looked her full in the face. Never had she seen such beams of tenderness. There was something heavenly in her eyes which awakened the most painful admiration. Then, in the countenance of her children there was a sweet sadness which made her sick at heart. She asked of them their several names, and was promptly and modestly answered.

After some time was spent in broken conversation, the storm began to abate, and it was not long till the clouds disappeared from the face of heaven. The Doctor stepped out to prepare for leaving; and as if to seize the opportunity, the widow poured into Charlotte's ears a strain of eloquent and enthusiastic praise of her husband, rapid and full of feeling, such as she had not expected to hear.

'Good, kind creature,' she added, 'he never permits me to thank him as I should. Oh! he so generous indeed; you know not how much we owe him for the amount of happiness we have in life.'

'By what means, may I inquire, has he secured so large a claim upon your gratitude?'

'Many—by his constant and untiring labors around the couch of my poor, dead husband; by his attention to my most pressing wants when he breathed his last; by his regular visits since his decease, and the consolations he has afforded from his words of kindness; by the most substantial evidence of his goodness of heart, in leaving me the means of subsistence, from day to day, until I was able to provide for myself; by—'

'No more, no more, interrupted Charlotte—such a house as this?'

A GENUINE YANKEE.

'Hullo, my good friend, can you inform me how far it is to the next house?'

Jonathan started up—leaned on his hoe handle—resting one foot on the gambrel of his sinister leg, and replied:

'Hullo, yourself! how'd do! wall I guess I can. Taint near as far as it used to be afore they cut the woods away—then it is generally reckoned four miles, but now the sun shrivels up the road, and don't make mo'n' tew. The fust house you cum to is a barn, and the next is a haystack; but old Hoskin's house is on beyond. You'll be sure to meet his gals long before you get there; tarmal rompin critters, they plague our folks mo'n' a lute. His sheep git into our orchard. Dad sets the dog arter the sheep and me arter the gals—and the way he makes the wool, and I the petticoats fly, is a sin to snakes.'

'I see you are inclined to be factious, young man—pray tell me how it happens that one of your legs is shorter than the other?'

'I never 'lows any body to meddle with my grass tangles, mister, but seein' it's you, I'll tell you, I was born so at my tictler request, so that when I hold a plow, I can go with one foot in the furrow, and t'other on land, and not lop over; besides, its convenient when I mow round a side hill.'

'Very good, indeed—how do your potatoes come on this year?'

'They don't come on at all; I digs 'em out and there's an everlastin' snarl of 'em in each hill.'

'But they are small, I perceive.'

'Yes, I know it. You see we planted some whoppin' blue noses over in that ere patch there and they flourished so alired that these ere stopt growin' just out of spite, caus they know'd they couldn't begin to keep up.'

'You appear to be pretty smart, and I should think you might afford a better hat than the one you now wear.'

'The looks ain't nothin'; it's all in the behavior. This ere hat was my religious Sunday-go-to-meetin' hat, and it's chuck full of piety now. I've got a better one at hum, but I don't dig taters in it, no how.'

'You have been in these parts some time, I should guess.'

'I guess so tew. I was born'd and got my bro'n up in that ere house; but my native place is down in Pordunk.'

'Then you say it is about three and half miles to the next house?'

'Yes sir; 'twas a spell ago, and I don't believe it's grow'd much shorter since.'

'Much obliged—good bye.'

'Good-bye to ye. That's a darn slick mare of yours.'

There reader—there is a Jonathan of the first water for you. You don't find his equal every where. He is said to have been discovered among the Green Mountains of Vermont, in all its native simplicity!

POSSIBILITIES AND PROBABILITIES.

'One evening after listening to a long lecture on physical anatomy, and after dissecting a large negro, fatigued in body and mind, I went to my lodgings—'

'Well!' said the captain.

'I went to my room, it being then after one o'clock—'

'Well!'

'I placed the light on the table, and commenced undressing. I had hardly got my coat off when my attention was attracted to a frock and a quantity of petticoats lying on a chair near the bed—'

'Well!' said the captain, who began to show signs that he was getting deeply interested.

'And a pair of beautiful small shoes and stockings on the floor. Of course I thought it strange, and was about to retire—but then I thought as it was my room I had at least a right to know who was in my bed—'

'Exactly,' nodded the captain, 'well!'

'So I took the light, went softly to the bed, and with trembling hand drew aside the curtain. Heavens! what a sight! A young girl! I should say angel, of about eighteen, was there asleep—'

'Well!' said the captain, giving his chair a hitch.

'As I gazed upon her, I thought that I had never witnessed anything more beautiful. From underneath a little night-cap, rivaling the snow in whiteness, fell a stray ringlet over a neck and shoulders of alabaster—'

'Well!' said the excited captain, giving his chair another hitch.

'Never did I look upon a bust more perfectly formed. I took hold of the coverlid and softly pulled it down—'

'Well!' said the captain, betraying the utmost excitement.

'To her waist—'

'Well!' said the captain, dropping the paper, and reversing the position of his legs.

'She had on a night dress, buttoned up before, but softly I opened the two first buttons—'

'Well!' said the captain, wrought to the highest excitement.

'And then, ye gods! what a sight to gaze upon—a Hebe—pshaw! words fail. Just then—'

'WELL!' said the captain, hitching his chair right and left, and squirting his tobacco juice against the stove so that it fairly fizzed again.

'I thought that I was taking a mean advantage of her, so I covered her up, seized my coat and boots, and went and slept in another room.'

'It's a lie!' shouted the excited captain, jumping up and kicking over his chair. 'It's a LIE!'

'S'A-A-RCH THE SKRIPTERS-AH! An illiterate Methodist minister at the West, one night at a class meeting, related the following affecting circumstance:—'

'It is but a little while-ah, since I was travelling along one of your great rivers-ah, surrounded by the deep forest; I stopped at a rude shanty by the low river side-ah, and there I found a poor family in gre-a-t affliction-ah. They were all sick; their children were shivering and starving; their heads frowzy and dirty; and I was informed by the mother that they had lost their fine tooth comb-ah! They was ignorant of the go-ospel, and didn't seem to care about it 'ther; for when I reasoned with 'em-ah, the woman was all the time lamenting the loss of her comb-ah!'

'Have you the Bible in your cabin?' said I to her, says I-ah; says she, 'Yes, ther it is, up there on the catch-all-ah,' pointing to a narrow shelf over the smoky fire-place, 'but we don't often read into it-ah; ha'n't read any on't but once-ah, when our little Bill died with the ager, for as much as tew months-ah!'

'I got onto a dic-tub, my friends, that stood in the corner, and reached up and took down the blessed Book, all covered with dust-ah; and what do you think it was that I opened to-ah?'

'What do you think it was that I found there-ah, to satisfy the longings of that poor woman-ah? It was the long-lost, the long-wanted, fine-tooth comb-ah! Oh, my hearers, s'a-a-rch the skripters-ah! If she had only s'arched the skripters, how her mind would 'a been eased-ah!'

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, AUG. 4, 1849.

BATHING. The hydropathists believe that water, in its various applications, to be a sovereign remedy for all the ills that "flesh is heir to", and the professors of every school of medicine recommend bathing for certain diseases. However beneficial as a curative water may be, no one who uses it freely in health, can fail to remark its beneficial effects on the human organism, in keeping it in healthy action, and in preserving the system from cutaneous and other diseases. The writer of this paragraph, although he has made diligent enquiry, in New York and elsewhere, is not acquainted with a single case of cholera, in families, or among individuals who make in health daily ablutions, or live according to the principles laid down by the hydropathists.

These remarks have been suggested by the efforts of Mr. GEORGE VEAZIE 2d, to establish on the beautiful and quiet stream that winds its modest way through the heart of our flourishing village, a bath house, with suitable apartments supplied with all necessary conveniences for our citizens of either sex. There are many who will bear willing testimony to the benefit they have derived from the daily use of Mr. Veazie's establishment. The softness of the water is well calculated to penetrate and cleanse the pores and surface of the body, and its mild temperature, admirably adapts it to the most delicate and feeble constitution. We regard Mr. Veazie, as a public benefactor; and we earnestly hope that he may be remunerated for the efforts he has thus made to diffuse among our citizens the benefits, which are neither few nor small, of bathing.

THE EMPIRE STATE.—This noble steamer has arisen "Phoenix like" from her ashes in renewed beauty, power and strength. Of all the steamers that ply between New York, north, south, east or west, take her all in all, the Empire deservedly ranks as the No. One. A friend who travels enough to know and to judge impartially, assures us that she is unsurpassed in all those particulars that render traveling agreeable. The moment you place your foot upon her planks or promenade, her spacious saloons, you feel the safety and enjoy the comfort of your position, and all fear of mishaps are banished from your mind. There is nothing gaudy in her appointments, (due reference being had to the skill and strength of her workmanship,) every thing is arranged for ease and comfort, and these combined assure us of safety. It is, in fact, a presentiment, or more properly an embodiment of the character, sentiment and idea of her commander—Capt. Jos. J. Comstock—who combines in his person the noble bearing of the naval hero with the cool moral courage of the man of science and the philosopher. The views of the head of this noble boat are seconded and carried out by all in authority on board. Mr. Hinman, the steward, displays equal skill and judgment in catering for the physical wants of the passengers—for the comfort of their repose and the luxury of their board. Of Mr. Chase, the accomplished Clerk, we need only add—he understands his business, and carries it out with precision.

LETTER FROM HON. HENRY CLAY.
We publish below an autograph letter from this distinguished statesman, addressed, as will be seen, to Freeman Hunt, the Editor and Proprietor of the Merchants Magazine, now on a visit to this, his native, place.

ASHLAND, 20th July, 1849.

DEAR SIR:—I wish to express to you the gratification I derived, on receiving the July number of the Merchants Magazine and Commercial Review, from viewing your portrait in the beginning and from reading your address to your friends at the end of it. When we feel under obligations to those, who have contributed to our information and amusement, we are naturally desirous to possess all the knowledge of them, of their appearance, of the features of their countenance, and of the character and habits of their mind, which we can acquire. You have placed your numerous readers, (at least you have me, if I may not speak for them) under those obligations; and the number of your valuable work now before me, in some degree, satisfies the desire to which I have alluded.

I have become quite familiar with the Magazine and Review, and have no hesitation in expressing my humble opinion that it is eminently entitled to the public regard and support. It collects and arranges, in good order, a large amount of valuable Statistical and other information, highly useful, not only to the Merchant, but to the Statesman, to the Cultivator of the earth, to the Manufacturer, to the Mariner, in short to all classes of the business and reading community.

Entertaining this opinion, I am glad that it has been, and hope that it may long continue to be, liberally patronized.

Offering you cordial assurances of my high esteem and regard,

I am truly Your friend
And obedient Servant
H. CLAY.

ACCIDENT ON OLD COLONY RAILROAD. On Thursday afternoon last, John G. T. C. Morse, formerly of Framingham, in this State, and about twenty-one years of age, met with an accident at South Braintree, which resulted in his death after twelve hours of excruciating suffering. He was crushed between two cars while adjusting the "shackles" by which they were connected. A few years since he was an attendant in the refreshment room at South Braintree, and latterly fireman on the locomotive John Elliot, of which John S. Pickering is engineer. He was warned of his danger but a moment before the catastrophe and no blame is attached to any one present. For the last eighteen months he has been in the employ of the Old Colony Corporation in the capacity of fireman, where he gained the good will and esteem of all his associates, by his correct deportment, amiable manners, and social feelings. Mr. Pickering, with whom, in business, he came in close contact, speaks of him in the highest terms.

A NEIGHBORLY VISIT. On Tuesday night last, the Braintree Band, on invitation of Harvey Field Esq., of this town, visited that gentleman's residence and entertained their friends and those specially assembled.

NOBLE BEQUESTS. The late Theodore Lyman has bequeathed a legacy of fifty thousand dollars to the Reform School at Westboro', of which he was the founder. He has also given ten thousand dollars to the Farm School, of which he has been an active member for several years, and ten thousand dollars to the Horticultural Society, in whose labors he always took a deep interest.

KEEP IN THE COUNTRY. Gov. Briggs and Secretary Calhoun, give it as their opinion, after much diligent inquiry, that ninety out of one hundred of the young men who emigrate from the country to the city, fail of success, and a large portion of them ignominiously.

MILITARY. Nine new Companies have been organized by Adj. Gen. Devereux, and added to the First Regiment, First Brigade. The "Massachusetts Volunteers" will be mustered into the Regiment as Company L. William Schouler, Esq., of the Atlas, has been chosen Lieutenant Colonel, and S. Abbott Lawrence, Esq., Major of the Regiment, and have accepted.

FIRE IN HINGHAM. A dwelling house near the steamboat landing, owned by A. C. Hersey, and occupied by Irish families, was consumed on Monday.

BROWN UNIVERSITY. Medals have been recently awarded in this Institution to—William E. Tolman of Dorchester, for best Dissertation on Political Economy; Edward L. Pierce of Milton, premium for best Dissertation on Physical Science, for best English Dissertation and for best Latin Dissertation.

THE NEW COMPANY. The Massachusetts Volunteers, Capt. Poore, met on Tuesday evening for drill and business, after which they marched to the Hanover House, and partook of an excellent collation tendered by the host and boarders of that house.

FATHER MATHEW'S PLEDGE. The following is the pledge he administers, those receiving it kneeling, and repeating the words after him:

After the words have been repeated, he says, "May God bless you, my children. May he give you grace and strength to keep the pledge." He then goes to each individual and gives them the benediction, and all the children he kisses. Tomorrow, Father Mathew will be at St. Mary's Church, Charlestown.

OUTRAGE. A brass cannon loaded with six balls, was fired off at the house of a black man named King, in Portland, Me., on the 27th ult. and one of the balls passed through the head-board of the bed where he and his wife was sleeping, and she received a slight wound from a splinter.

SWIMMING. "The Science of Swimming," is the title of a neat and very useful little work, published by Fowlers & Wells, Chilton Hall, N. Y. Price 12 1/2 cents.

EFFECT OF DRESS. It is an observation I have always made, that dress has a moral effect upon the conduct of mankind. Let any gentleman find himself with dirty boots, old surt-out, soiled neck-cloth and a general negligence of dress, he will in all probability find a corresponding disposition to negligence of address. He may, en dishabille, curse and swear, speak roughly and think coarsely; but put the same man in full dress, and he will be a different man.

AMERICAN, ENGLISH AND IRISH WOMEN. We have many handsome women. We have more pretty ones. Our very young girls are nearly all prettier than those of the mother country. But we have few beautiful women. The proportion of such among the English is incomparably greater than with us. Our women, belonging to different classes of society,—for we too, all democratic as we are, have classified the people, have "our first society," "the upper ten thousand," and so forth,—present no approximation to the startling extremes of personal appearance observable in those of England. The greater part of English women of the lower classes are ugly; have a coarse skin; seem made of coarse materials. In Ireland, which may probably boast of women of greater charms of person than any other section of the globe, this contrast is even more striking, if possible. But in America, you see women, well-nigh as pretty, as handsome, as beautiful, at work in cotton factories, as among those who flaunt their silks in Washington street or Broadway.—Lynn Pioneer.

WEALTH. Those who become wealthy, in this country, as a general thing, are men of frugal and industrious habits, and moderate desires; and men who spend less than their income. It will readily be seen how a man may become rich, or poor, by the following facts. If a man spend 23 1/4 cents a day (a very small sum,) it amounts in a year to $10 00, in ten years to $130, and in fifty years to $2 900. If he spend 5 1/4 cents a day, it amounts in a year to $20, in ten years to $260, and in fifty years to $5 800! If he spend 27 1/2 cents a day, it amounts in a year to $100, in ten years to $1300, and in fifty years to $29 000! If a man spend $1 37 a day, which is not large for these times of extravagance, it amounts in a year to $500, in ten years $6 500, and in fifty years to $145 000! Now suppose a person saves these small sums daily, instead of spending it, is it not easy to see, how simple the process is, of growing rich? Suppose a man lays up $1 37 a day for fifty years, he then has a fortune of $145 000! The above facts solve the whole mystery. They explain how a man may make himself poor and how he may make himself rich.

Miss Burdett Coutts has received an accession of £10,000 [$48,500] a year to her already almost countless income, besides a large store of rich plate and other valuables.

A LOSE WOMAN'S LAMENT. "When the war broke out my old man went to Mexico; he got back safe from that heat with his eighty acres of land gin him by ole General Taylor that's President; he's drunk up the whole on't; an' when the gold fever broke out he started for Californy, and left me to support the childer by washin' for a livin'. They say the colery's broke out 'mong the Californicators and the next thing I expect I'll hear is that my old man's gone to a hotter climate than 'ither Mexico or Californy; but I spose I must be resigned."

THE ROSE. Among flowering plants the rose is a universal favorite, the ornament and charm of both the palace and the cottage. It is symbolical of love and beauty, and innocence, and has furnished lovers and poets with more comparisons and imagery than all other flowers taken together. For unknown ages it has been admired, sung of, and cultivated in Europe and Asia; nor does time seem to weaken man's love for his favorite, or to lessen his devices for rearing it in perfection.

"SODA DASH!" The Boston Washingtonian says that "the devil has put on a new coat, brushed up his boots, and coiled his long tail away within the folds of his nether garments, and now takes his stand behind the marble counter of some of our most fashionable soda fountains." The plain English of which is that a "Son" was invited to take a dash of brandy in a glass of soda water.

GUN COTTON. Important discoveries relative to the properties of gun cotton, are announced in the scientific journals abroad. Among other things it is said that when dissolved in an alkali it has been shown to have the property of precipitating metals from their solutions; and by floating over glass plates solutions of silver, or mercury, to which the gun cotton solution has been added, mirrors of a very fine description are in this way readily manufactured.

A BROTHER'S LOVE. Nothing affords such satisfaction, and nothing entwines a sister so effectually among his sympathies and interest as profound reliance on her virtue and an abiding conviction of her diffidence and delicacy. As these two latter are far the most defensible qualities of a female, they are the strongest spells for enticing away the affections of the sex. A female without delicacy, is a woman without principle; and as an innate and shrinking perception of virtue is a true characteristic of a pure-hearted creature, so it is the most infallible union between hearts that truly beat in repose to each other.

ENDURING GRIEF OF WIDOWS. A young Tipperary widow, Nelly McPhee, I think he called her, was courted, and actually had an offer from Tooley O'Shane, on the way to her husband's funeral. "She accepted, of course," said Grosman. "No she didn't," said Smith. "Tooley, dear," said she, "y're too late; four weeks ago it was, I shook hands wi' Pat Sweeney upon it, that I would have him a decent time arter poor McPhee was underboard." "Well," said Grosman, widows of all nations are very much alike. There was a Dutch woman, whose husband, Diedrick Von Pronk, died and left her inconsolable. He was buried on Coop's-hill. Folks said that grief would kill that widow. She had a figure of wood carved that looked very like her late husband, and constantly kept it in her bed for several months. In about half a year she became interested in a young shoemaker who took the measure of her foot, and finally married her. He had visited the widow not more than a fortnight, when the servants told her they were out of kindling stuff, and asked what should be done. After a pause, the widow replied in a very quiet way—'Maybe it ish well enough now to split up old Von Pronk up stairs.'"

SHAKER FLUID EXTRACT OF V.

This invaluable preparation is signal in Nervous and Hysterical affections, Sleep Sickness, Headache, producing quiet and leaving no unpleasant sensations after its use. It is the inevitable result of opiate, etc., and is a process approved by the able and Physicians known, from the root in the rejecting the dead Valerian root of impurities. Dr. Bell, of the McLean Asylum, has used this preparation, and has written a favorable notice, scarcely littered with a mother earth, and other unmitigated evidence that it was a house of the—a puritan structure—a monument and more honest days. ## MISCELLANY.

THE YOUNG WIFE.

Dr. Lawrence Bell had one grievous fault; he would go to Boston every few months, and be away from home a week. And somehow it was in his absence old chronic diseases and rheumatic pains would clench the tighter. But what took him there? 'Ah, there's the rub.'

As a set-off to this public grief, however Dr. Bell had many, very many virtues. He was kind to the poor. The needy had often cause to bless the bounty of his hand. Where sorrow and sickness were his, soothing the one and robbing the other of its pangs. He was the good angel of many a heavy heart and the feet of infancy grew lighter in his presence. Indeed, he was a very 'darling of a man'; and it puzzled the wits of all to say, which loved him most the venerable matrons, or the amiable young misses of his native town.

His parents were long since dead; but the doctor still lived in the quaint old homestead. It was an ancient pile, both out and in. Its dormitories, with lights of seven by nine; its massive doors of oak; its low broad chimneys; its fluted roof, scarcely fifteen feet from 'mother earth,' and other unmistakable marks, evidenced that it was a house of the olden time—a puritan structure—a monument of other and more honest days. And the doctor really and truly loved that homely dingy house.

The little village of W—arose from its breakfast table, one morning and found itself in commotion. What could it mean? Why a painter was seen at work on that old building of Dr. Lawrence Bell, the carpets were stretched upon the garden paths, and the waiting maid was dusting, and washing and cleansing everything before her. Conjecture mounted her swift winged steed, and flew from door to door; and that most innocent of all innocences, village gossip, flattered by in her many colored robes, in extatic rapture. She knew all about it; the Doctor was about to leave for Boston, for the fortieth time, and desired to have his cottage renovated while away, that he might avoid the annoyances which generally attended such an operation.

Well, the Doctor went to Boston. A week rolled by, and so did a dainty little carriage, and reined up short at the Doctor's house. Many an eye followed it until it stopped, eager to discover what it might contain. The blacksmith poised his hammer in his hand; matron and maid crowded the windows; the teamster halted his oxen; the merchant left his counter, and the clerk his quill—all, all anxious to see what was to be seen. The doctor alighted, and the next thing presented was a neat little foot, in a glossy little gaiter, pressing the step of that neat little carriage; then came a modest little hand, encased in a lustrous little glove, of which the Doctor modestly took possession; next a rose colored bonnet, plumed, and as gay as a bird of Paradise; then a fashionable shawl with as many hues as a peacock's tail; and finally, half a web of satin, containing a woman!

True, the Doctor had thus unceremoniously taken him a wife. And a very beauty she was too, with roguish big black eyes, and cherry lips, which, when parted, displayed two rows of teeth as white as Ceylon's ivory. A shower of glossy ringlets deluged her snowy neck.

"And Dian's grace was in her step—Apollo's music in her voice."

She was in the very spring of life, and never did the sun unfold a lovelier blossom. 'Our future home, my dear.' It was all the Doctor said, as he handed her to the little parlor of twelve by fourteen. Charlotte Bell was not thunderstruck by any means; but slightly bewildered. She looked and probably felt like a newly caged canary bird. There were the windows, with small ridged lights and an uncouth sash. There were mirrors, but barely long enough to reflect her pretty face, and not encased in gold, at that. The drooping ceiling hung above her with an appalling lowness; and a huge eight day clock, as old as the 'oldest inhabitant,' standing alone in the corner, with a full moon above its face, was ticking the pulsations of time as regularly as if no one were executing it at all.

Weeks and months passed pleasantly by. The Doctor pursued the even tenor of his way—healing the sick and spreading the sunshine of gladness around the path of poverty. Charlotte, who was accounted a belle in the city, got along bravely in her new position. Her visitors were kindly treated, and her hospitality was the theme of general praise. All they could say about her was, that she was a little proud—just a little—and this was uttered or whispered in strict confidence to friends alone.

The Doctor was a quiet man. If he said a little he thought a great deal—in the common parlance of the village—he knew a thing or two. Charlotte was sly and cunning as a fox, the little rogue; and began to hint to him something about a fine brick house, with marble front and folding doors; crown-glass windows, and full length portraits; Brussels carpet and mahogany chairs, rosewood tables and yielding divans, et cetera, et cetera. She served him with a dish of these in simple style at first; but as the symptoms became more favorable, increased the dose, until the Doctor felt himself ready to cry peccati, and yield at discretion.

Weeks and months passed by and poor Charlotte was beginning to despair of realizing her pleasant dreams. She would look at times a little sad at Dr. Bell. 'Tis even said the Doctor once surprised her in a flood of tears. But she was always kind and gentle, and an ungenerous thought towards him, were treason in her breast. She loved him with her young heart's best and purest love, and seemed to live upon his smiles, yet, when alone, she could not help contrasting the rough and unseemly house in which she lived, with the stately mansion of her father, in which she passed her former years.

'This won't do,' thought Dr. Bell. 'I must school that gentle heart; for I know the soil is there to grow the choicest flowers—flowers whose fragrance will cheer the duldest hours of her life; add sweetness and adornment to her being, and yield their rich perfumes wherever she may set her feet.' And the Doctor drew on his second glove.

There is a peculiarity in the climate of the old Bay State. A native can sniff the air, and though there be a cloudless sky, tell within an hour of the time of rain. It was a sober, golden afternoon in autumn. Sturred by the sultry breeze, the yellow leaf rustled in 'melancholy eloquence.' Eddying gusts were sporting on the hills, and the valleys sent up their plaintive murmurs to the ear. A thousand birds, of every hue and song, were clamping in the sombre woods.

Charlotte, slip on your bonnet, and go along with me this afternoon,' said Dr. Bell. And in thirty minutes they were jaunting slowly and pleasantly along the road. Now and then the clear and silver laugh of Charlotte rang through the woods. The Doctor cracked a joke or two, and talked with a volubility which was rare to him. 'How would you like to live in such a house as that,' said he, pointing to a lowly hovel near the road. Charlotte cast a furtive glance in the direction of the hut, and would have doubted that it contained a human being, had she not seen the smoke curling lazily from its roof. 'Some miserable drunkard or prowling thief, I dare say, makes that his home to screen him from the eyes of honest men,' said Charlotte, in reply. 'We'll see, thought Dr. Bell. And they travelled on.

An hour had not closed, when the Doctor remarked—'I perceive my dear we are to have a little rain, and may be caught before we can reach home.' Charlotte looked back towards the west, and discovered that heavy clouds were rushing wildly up the heavens. At this moment a deafening peal of thunder startled her. The Doctor turned the steed homewards. It was a sublime scene that now presented itself to the trembling Charlotte. The approaching storm was in full view, and the clouds, 'marshalling themselves like bloody giants in the sky, were tossed to and fro by the storm breath of the Almighty.' The electric fluid shot forth in lived flame, and the thunder shook the earth. The sobbing winds swept furiously through the howling woods, and the leaves darkened the light of heaven. Then came a calm, and big drops of rain. The Doctor plied the lash; and before the storm burst forth in its fury, he arrived at the little hut to which he had before called the attention of his wife there, as they alighted from the carriage to seek shelter, the rain fell—

—in sheeted floods,
That slanted not before the baffled winds,—
But with an arrowy and unwavering rush
Dashed hissing earthwards.

There indeed in that wretched hovel, were objects of melancholy interest. Charlotte, who was already drenched with rain and shivering with cold, saw instead of a bloated sot, and cowering thief, a care worn mother, surrounded by four trembling children, seated in the centre of the loose floor—the only dry spot in that frail tenement.

A little girl was repeating, in sweet and plaintive tones, our Lord's prayer; the heads of the others were severally reclined upon that mother's lap. As she gazed upon their devotions, her countenance betrayed that she felt all of Nature's dearest, tenderest, sympathies for her little ones, and a saintly smile of Christian resignation beamed from her half tearful eyes. Charlotte stood for a moment in the door of that miserable looking sanctuary, unnoticed by the inmates, and at a single glance saw their painful destitution of the comforts of life. In one corner was a sad apology for a bed, close to which stood a plain uncovered stand, supporting a well thumbed bible. Not a thread of carpet was to be seen. A half-quenched fire was struggling into life upon the hearth; an old and homely cupboard, without doors, exhibited a meagre account of knives, forks and dishes. Recognizing Dr. Bell, she sprang towards him and clasped his hand in hers with feelings akin to emotion. Charlotte was not a little astonished at such a reception; but they were introduced—and the poor woman at once took her by the hand and led her to the chair which she had just left.

'You are welcome, my dear madam, to such shelter as the God of the shelterless has provided for me. But you are cold—very cold,—and she laid her hand upon Charlotte's shawl.

'Yes—a little—I am—but—' and it came to Charlotte's mind that the poor woman, too, was cold, with her plain and unseasonable dress; and it was cruel in her to complain in her presence. Charlotte looked her full in the face. Never had she seen such beams of tenderness. There was something heavenly in her eyes which awakened the most painful admiration. Then, in the countenance of her children there was a sweet sadness which made her sick at heart. She asked of them their several names, and was promptly and modestly answered.

After some time was spent in broken conversation, the storm began to abate, and it was not long till the clouds disappeared from the face of heaven. The Doctor stepped out to prepare for leaving; and as if to seize the opportunity, the widow poured into Charlotte's ears a strain of eloquent and enthusiastic praise of her husband, rapid and full of feeling, such as she had not expected to hear.

'Good, kind creature,' she added, 'he never permits me to thank him as I should. Oh! he so generous indeed; you know not how much we owe him for the amount of happiness we have in life.'

'By what means, may I inquire, has he secured so large a claim upon your gratitude?'

'Many—by his constant and untiring labors around the couch of my poor, dead husband; by his attention to my most pressing wants when he breathed his last; by his regular visits since his decease, and the consolations he has afforded from his words of kindness; by the most substantial evidence of his goodness of heart, in leaving me the means of subsistence, from day to day, until I was able to provide for myself; by—'

'No more, no more, interrupted Charlotte—how can you live—such a house as this?'

'Oh, you know not how happy I am here, with God and these dear little children to live for. I am taught in that blessed book to be of good cheer, and I know he is able to provide for me according to my wants. The very storms prepare my heart to enjoy the sweetness of the calm that follows.'

'This was a strange part of the philosophy of living to Charlotte's mind. She became engrossed with what she had heard and seen. She felt that she was in presence of a superior nature; and that true excellence and refined morality were not confined to marble halls. The doctor's flowers were beginning to germinate.

Just before leaving, Charlotte slipped half an eagle into the widow's hand, and whispered—'you shall hear from me again.' They were soon on their way home—the doctor studiously avoided any allusion to the scene they had just witnessed; and Charlotte recalling to her mind everything that had occurred since they first set out. When he helped her from the carriage to her room, she was almost paralyzed with cold. The transition was enchanting. There was a warm room, and a warm fire blazing cheerfully on the hearth. The windows and mirrors looked larger than when she left them; the ceiling appeared higher; the carpets felt as soft and rich as any Brussels her little foot had ever pressed; and even the face of the old clock was transformed with pleasant smiles. In short everything stood out in luxuriant relief, combining comfort with utility. Tears of gladness really stole in her eyes.

A few days afterward, the doctor and Charlotte were sitting together in their little parlor. The winds were howling mournfully around the house, and a cheerful fire crackling on the hearth. She felt that she was surrounded with every conceivable comfort. 'In the course of the ensuing spring,' said Dr. Bell, 'we will lay the foundation for a new house, my dear—what do you say to it?' 'I think doctor, the foundation has been already laid,' answered Charlotte, pressing her hand upon her heart, and smiling most bewitchingly on her delighted husband, 'our house is good enough; and may I never want a better one.' The doctor's flowers were in bloom, shedding an infant freshness about his heart.

Do as you Promise. There is no necessity of breaking your word. In the first place, never promise a thing unless you know it to be in your power to fulfil; and in the second place, make up your mind before you promise that when you do promise, you will fulfil. When such a character is established, it will be of more value than ermine, gold, or princely diamonds.

A GENUINE YANKEE.

'Hallo, my good friend, can you inform me how far it is to the next house?'

Jonathan started up—leaned on his hoe handle—resting one foot on the gambrel of his sinister leg, and replied:

'Hallo, yourself! how'd do! wall I guess I can. Taint near as far as it used to be afore they cut the woods away—then it is generally reckoned four miles, but now the sun shrivels up the road, and don't make mor'n tew. The fuss house you cum to is a barn, and the next is a haystack; but old Hoskin's house is on beyant. You'll be sure to meet his gals long before you get there; tarna! rompin critters, they plague our folks mor'n a little. His sheep git into our orchard. Dad sets the dog arter the sheep and me arter the gals—and the way he makes the wool, and I the petticoats fly, is a sin to snakes.'

'I never lows any body to meddle with my grass tangles, mister, but sein' it's you, I'll tell you, I was born so at my tictler request, so that when I hold a plow, I can go with one foot in the furrow, and t'other on land, and not lop over; besides, its convenient when I mow round a side hill.'

'Very good, indeed—how do your potatoes come on this year?'

'They don't come on at all; I digs 'em out and there's an everlastin' snarl of 'em in each hill.'

'But they are small, I perceive.'

'Yes, I know it. You see we planted some whoppin' blue noses over in that ere patch there and they flourished so affired that these ere stopt growin just out of spite, 'caus they know'd they couldn't begin to keep up.'

'You appear to be pretty smart, and I should think you might afford a better hat than the one you now wear.'

'The looks ain't nothin'; it's all in the behavior. This ere hat was my religious Sunday-go-to-meetin' hat, and it's chuck full of piety now. I've got a better one at hum, but I don't dig taters in it, no how.'

'You have been in these parts some time, I should guess.'

'I guess so tew. I was born'd and got my bro'n up in that ere house; but my native place is down in Pordunk.'

'Then you say it is about three and half miles to the next house?'

'Yes sir; 'twas a spell ago, and I don't believe it's grow'd much shorter since.'

'Much obliged—good bye.'

'Good-bye to ye. That's a darn slick mare of yours.'

There reader—there is a Jonathan of the first water for you. You don't find his equal every where. He is said to have been discovered among the Green Mountains of Vermont, in all its native simplicity!

POSSIBILITIES AND PROBABILITIES.

'One evening after listening to a long lecture on physical anatomy, and after dissecting a large negro, fatigued in body and mind, I went to my lodgings—'

'Well!' said the captain.

'I went to my room, it being then after one o'clock—'

'Well!'

'I placed the light on the table, and commenced undressing. I had hardly got my coat off when my attention was attracted to a frock and a quantity of petticoats lying on a chair near the bed—'

'Well!' said the captain, who began to show signs that he was getting deeply interested.

'And a pair of beautiful small shoes and stockings on the floor. Of course I thought it strange, and was about to retire—but then I thought as it was my room I had at least a right to know who was in my bed—'

'Exactly,' nodded the captain, 'well!'

'So I took the light, went softly to the bed, and with trembling hand drew aside the curtain. Heavens! what a sight! A young girl! I should say angel, of about eighteen, was there asleep—'

'Well!' said the captain, giving his chair a hitch.

'As I gazed upon her, I thought that I had never witnessed anything more beautiful. From underneath a little night-cap, rivaling the snow in whiteness, fell a stray ringlet over a neck and shoulders of—diabaster—'

'Well!' said the excited captain, giving his chair another hitch.

'Never did I look upon a bust more perfectly formed. I took hold of the coverlid and softly pulled it down—'

'Well!' said the captain, betraying the utmost excitement.

'To her waist—'

'Well!' said the captain, dropping the paper, and reversing the position of his legs.

'She had on a night dress, buttoned up before, but softly I opened the two first buttons—'

'Well!!!' said the captain, wrought to the highest excitement.

'And then, ye gods! what a sight to gaze upon—a Hebe—pshaw! words fail. Just then—'

'WELL!!!' said the captain, hitching his chair right and left, and squirting his tobacco juice against the stove so that it fairly fizzed again.

'I thought that I was taking a mean advantage of her, so I covered her up, seized my coat and boots, and went and slept in another room.'

'It's a lie!' shouted the excited captain, jumping up and kicking over his chair. 'It's A LIE!'

S'A-A-RCH THE SKRIPTERS-AH! An illiterate Methodist minister at the West, one night at a class meeting, related the following affecting circumstance:—'It is but a little while-ah, since I was travelling along one of your great rivers-ah, surrounded by the deep forest; I stopped at a rude shanty by the low river side-ah, and there I found a poor family in gre-a-at affliction-ah. They were all sick; their children were shivering and starving; their heads frowzy and dirty; and I was informed by the mother that they had lost their fine tooth comb-ah! They were ignorant of the go-ospel, and didn't seem to care about it t'her; for when I reasoned with 'em-ah, the woman was all the time lamenting the loss of her comb-ah! 'Have you the Bible in your cabin?' said I to her, says I-ah; says she, 'Yes, t'her it is, up t'her on the catch-all-ah,' pointing to a narrow shelf over the smoky fire-place, 'but we don't often read into it-ah; ha'n't read any on't but once-ah, when our little Bill died with the ager, for as much as tew months-ah! I got onto a die-tub, my friends, that stood in the corner, and reached up and took down the blessed Book, all covered with dust-ah; and what do you think it was that I opened to-ah? What do you think it was that I found there-ah, to satisfy the longings of that poor woman-ah? It was the long-lost, the long-wanted, fine-tooth comb-ah! Oh, my hearers, s'a-a-reh the skripters-ah! If she had only s'arched the skripters, how her mind would 'a been eased-ah!'

EFFECT OF DRESS. It is an observation I have always made, that dress has a moral effect upon the conduct of mankind. Let any gentleman find himself with dirty boots, old surcoat, soiled neck-cloth and a general negligence of dress, he will in all probability find a corresponding disposition to negligence of address. He may, en dishabille, curse and swear, speak roughly and think coarsely; but put the same man in full dress, and he is a different man.

AMERICAN, ENGLISH AND IRISH WOMEN. We have many handsome women. We have more pretty ones. Our very young girls are nearly all prettier than those of the mother country. But we have few beautiful women. The proportion of such among the English is incomparably greater than with us. Our women, belonging to different classes of society,—for we too, all democratic as we are, have classified the people, have "our first society," "the upper ten thousand," and so forth,—present no approximation to the startling extremes of personal appearance observable in those of England. The greater part of English women of the lower classes are ugly; have a coarse skin; seem made of coarse materials. In Ireland, which may probably boast of women of greater charms of person than any other section of the globe, this contrast is even more striking, if possible. But in America, you see women, well-nigh as pretty, as handsome, as beautiful, at work in cotton factories, as among those who flaunt their silks in Washington street or Broadway.—Lynn Pioneer.

WEALTH. Those who become wealthy, in this country, as a general thing, are men of frugal and industrious habits, and moderate desires; and men who spend less than their income. It will readily be seen how a man may become rich, or poor, by the following facts. If a man spend 23 4 cents a day (a very small sum,) it amounts in a year to $10 00, in ten years to $130, and in fifty years to $2 900. If he spend 5 1-4 cents a day, it amounts in a year to $20, in ten years to $260, and in fifty years to $5 800! If he spend 27 1-2 cents a day, it amounts in a year to $100, in ten years to $1300, and in fifty years to $29 000! If a man spend $1 37 a day, which is not large for these times of extravagance, it amounts in a year to $500, in ten years $6 500, and in fifty years to $145 000! Now suppose a person saves these small sums daily, instead of spending it, is it not easy to see, how simple the process is, of growing rich? Suppose a man lays up $1 37 a day for fifty years, he then has a fortune of $145 000! The above facts solve the whole mystery. They explain how a man may make himself poor and how he may make himself rich.

A LONE WOMAN'S LAMENT. "When the war broke out my old man went to Mexico; he got back safe from that heat with his eighty acres of land gin him by ole General Taylor that's President; he's drunk up the whole on't an' when the gold fever broke out he started for California, and left me to support the childer by washin' for a livin'. They say the colery's broke out 'mong the Californicators and the next thing I expect I'll hear is that my old man's gone to a hotter climate than 'tither Mexico or California; but I spose I must be resigned."

THE ROSE. Among flowering plants the rose is a universal favorite, the ornament and charm of both the palace and the cottage. It is symbolical of love and beauty, and innocence, and has furnished lovers and poets with more comparisons and imagery than all other flowers taken together. For unknown ages it has been admired, sung of, and cultivated in Europe and Asia; nor does time seem to weaken man's love for his favorite, or to lessen his devices for rearing it in perfection.

"SODA DASH." The Boston Washingtonian says that "the devil has put on a new coat, brushed up his boots, and coiled his long tail away within the folds of his nether garments, and now takes his stand behind the marble counter of some of our most fashionable soda fountains." The plain English of which is that a "Son" was invited to take a dash of brandy in a glass of soda water.

GUN COTTON. Important discoveries relative to the properties of gun cotton, are announced in the scientific journals abroad. Among other things it is said that when dissolved in an alkali it has been shown to have the property of precipitating metals from their solutions; and by floating over glass plates solutions of silver, or mercury, to which the gun cotton solution has been added, mirrors of a very fine description are in this way readily manufactured.

A BROTHER'S LOVE. Nothing affords such satisfaction, and nothing entwines a sister so effectually among his sympathies and interest as profound reliance on her virtue and an abiding conviction of her diffidence and delicacy. As these two latter are far the most delightful qualities of a female, they are the strongest spells for enticing away the affections of the sex. A female without delicacy, is a woman without principle; and as an innate and shrinking perception of virtue is a true characteristic of a pure-hearted creature, so it is the most infallible union between hearts that truly beat in response to each other.

ENDURING GRIEF OF WIDOWS. A young Tipperary widow, Nelly McPhee, I think he called her, was courted, and actually had an offer from Tooley O'Shane, on the way to her husband's funeral. "She accepted, of course," said Grosman. "No she didn't," said Smith. "Tooley, dear," said she, "y're too late; four weeks ago it was, I shook hands wi' Pat Sweeney upon it, that I would have him a decent time after poor McPhee was underboard." "Well," said Grosman, widows of all nations are very much alike. There was a Dutch woman, whose husband, Diedrick Von Pronk, died and left her inconsolable. He was buried on Coop's-hill. Folks said that grief would kill that widow. She had a figure of wood carved that looked very like her late husband, and constantly kept it in her bed for several months. In about half a year she became interested in a young shoemaker who took the measure of her foot, and finally married her. He had visited the widow not more than a fortnight, when the servants told her they were out of kindling stuff, and asked what should be done. After a pause, the widow replied in a very quiet way—"Maybe it ish well enough now to split up old Von Pronk up stairs."

BATHING. The hydropathists believe that water, in its various applications, to be a sovereign remedy for all the ills that "flesh is heir to," and the professors of every school of medicine recommend bathing for certain diseases. However beneficial as a curative water may be, no one who uses it freely in health, can fail to remark its beneficial effects on the human organism, in keeping it in healthy action, and in preserving the system from cutaneous and other diseases. The writer of this paragraph, although he has made diligent enquiry, in New York and elsewhere, is not acquainted with a single case of cholera, in families, or among individuals who make in health daily ablutions, or live according to the principles laid down by the hydropathists.

These remarks have been suggested by the efforts of Mr. GEORGE VEAZIE 2d, to establish on the beautiful and quiet stream that winds its modest way through the heart of our flourishing village, a bath house, with suitable apartments supplied with all necessary conveniences for our citizens of either sex. There are many who will bear willing testimony to the benefit they have derived from the daily use of Mr. Veazie's establishment. The softness of the water is well calculated to penetrate and cleanse the pores and surface of the body, and its mild temperature, admirably adapts it to the most delicate and feeble constitution. We regard Mr. Veazie, as a public benefactor; and we earnestly hope that he may be remunerated for the efforts he has thus made to diffuse among our citizens the benefits, which are neither few nor small, of bathing.

THE EMPIRE STATE.—This noble steamer has arisen "Phoenix like" from her ashes in renewed beauty, power and strength. Of all the steamers that ply between New York, north, south, east or west, take her all in all, the Empire deserves ranks as the No. One. A friend who travels enough to know and to judge impartially, assures us that she is unsurpassed in all those particulars that render traveling agreeable. The moment you place your foot upon her planks or promenade her spacious saloons, you feel the safety and enjoy the comfort of your position, and all fear of mishaps are banished from your mind. There is nothing gaudy in her appointments, (due reference being had to the skill and strength of her workmanship,) every thing is arranged for ease and comfort, and these combined assure us of safety. It is, in fact, a presentiment, or more properly an embodiment of the character, sentiment and idea of her commander—Capt. Jos. J. Comstock—who combines in his person the noble courage of the naval hero with the cool moral courage of the man of science and the philosopher. The views of the head of this noble boat are seconded and carried out by all in authority on board. Mr. Hinman, the steward, displays equal skill and judgment in catering for the physical wants of the passengers—for the comfort of their repose and the luxury of their board. Of Mr. Chase, the accomplished Clerk, we need only add—he understands his business—and carries out the ideas of the gallant Comstock. The Fall River line is deservedly popular. Its safety ensures the favor of the timid; its comfort, the support of the luxurious, and its quiet and order, are agreeable to the sedate.

HATS. Wm. H. Beebe & Co., the most accomplished manufacturers of hats in this country, have recently made some improvements in their manufacture that has secured for them the very highest rank in that branch of industry. For lightness, fineness of texture, durability and beauty, the hats produced at their establishment in New York, are unrivaled.

THE PATENT OFFICE. The Commissioner of public works at Washington, has contracted with the proprietors of a granite quarry near Sykesville, (upon the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad) for the requisite quantity of granite to construct the basement and end walls of the two new wings of the Patent Office.

NEW USE OF GRANITE. In Scotland, a method has been discovered of calcining granite to a fine clay of extraordinary strength for pottery, especially for making water pipes.

KENTUCKY MANNERS. Another rencontre occurred in Kentucky on the 9th ult., between Judge Campbell and Benedict Austin. It was an electioneering quarrel. They began by giving the lie; then proceeded to blows, and finally, Campbell drew a pistol and shot Austin dead. The magistrates who examined the case discharged the assassin.

COMMON SCHOOL CONVENTION. The National Common School Convention, which was to take place in Philadelphia on the 22d inst., has been postponed until the 17th of October.

THE AUGUST ELECTIONS. Nine States hold their elections this month, as follows: Tennessee on the 2d, Alabama, Kentucky, Indiana, Iowa, Missouri, on the 6th; North Carolina on the 9th, and Rhode Island, to fill a vacancy in Congress, on the 28th. In all these State members of Congress are to be elected, except in Iowa and Missouri. In the last named State the legislature is elected, which is to elect a United States Senator in Col. Benton's place.

LETTER FROM HON. HENRY CLAY.

We publish below an autograph letter from this distinguished statesman, addressed, as will be seen, to Freeman Hunt, the Editor and Proprietor of the Merchants Magazine, now on a visit to this, his native, place.

DEAR SIR:—I wish to express to you the gratification I derived, on receiving the July number of the Merchants Magazine and Commercial Review, from viewing your portrait in the beginning and from reading your address to your friends at the end of it. When we feel under obligations to those, who have contributed to our information and amusement, we are naturally desirous to possess all the knowledge of them, of their appearance, of the features of their countenance, and of the character and habits of their mind, which we can acquire. You have placed your numerous readers, (at least you have me, if I may not speak for them) under those obligations; and the number of your valuable work now before me, in some degree, satisfies the desire to which I have alluded.

I have become quite familiar with the Magazine and Review, and have no hesitation in expressing my humble opinion that it is eminently entitled to the public regard and support. It collects and arranges, in good order, a large amount of valuable Statistical and other information, highly useful, not only to the Merchant, but to the Statesman, to the Cultivator of the earth, to the Manufacturer, to the Mariner, in short to all classes of the business and reading community.

Entertaining this opinion, I am glad that it has been, and hope that it may long continue to be, liberally patronized.

Offering you cordial assurances of my high esteem and regard,

I am truly Your friend
And obedient Servant
H. CLAY.

FREEMAN HUNT, Esq.

ACCIDENT ON OLD COLONY RAILROAD. On Thursday afternoon last, John G. T. C. Morse, formerly of Framingham, in this State, and about twenty-one years of age, met with an accident at South Braintree, which resulted in his death after twelve hours of excruciating suffering. He was crushed between two cars while adjusting the "shackles" by which they were connected. A few years since he was an attendant in the refreshment room at South Braintree, and laterly fireman on the locomotive John Elliot, of which John S. Pickering is engineer. He was warned of his danger but a moment before the catastrophe and no blame is attached to any one present. For the last eighteen months he has been in the employ of the Old Colony Corporation in the capacity of fireman, where he gained the good will and esteem of all his associates, by his correct deportment, amiable manners, and social feelings. Mr. Pickering, with whom, in business, he came in close contact, speaks of him in the highest terms.

A NEIGHBORLY VISIT. On Tuesday night last, the Braintree Band, on invitation of Harvey Field Esq., of this town, visited that gentleman's residence and entertained their friends and those specially assembled, with music that added greatly to the enjoyment of the evening. Mr. Field, with his characteristic liberality bountifully entertained them; and after an hour or more passed in the most agreeable manner the festivities were closed, each and every one being highly gratified.

HENRY CLAY. Mr. Clay arrived at Saratoga, on the 31st, where he intends remaining a week or ten days, and then go direct to Newport, via, Troy and Boston. His reception at each stopping place on his route is of the most enthusiastic character. Mr. Clay is accompanied by his son James B. Clay, Charge d' Affairs to the Kingdom of Portugal.

A SERENADE. It affords us pleasure to tender our acknowledgements to our friends of the Weymouth Band for the delightful Serenade they gave us on Tuesday evening last. Their exquisite music, so rang in our ear that it lingered around our slumbers, and was first in our thoughts on our awaking. Every piece in the Band, told more effectively than we can well express, of the artistic skill of its members.

Our guests from New York were equally delighted with the performances, and join with us, in tendering to the members of the Band, one and all, cordial wishes for their perpetual harmony and prosperity.

FEMALE COUNTERFEITER. Margaret O'Conor, a young lady of considerable beauty, has been arrested, in Boston, for passing one dollar bills of the Eagle Bank, Bristol, (R. I.) altered to tens. She had deceived several shopkeepers, and was bound over for trial.

MILITARY VISIT. The City Grays of Boston will start for this town on Tuesday next, visiting the Old Colony House, Hingham, where they will dine; and thence come to this place, sup at the Hancock House, take up their quarters at Franklin Hall, and, on Wednesday morning, after breakfast, will march to the camp ground at Billings's Plain.

A WORKING MAN. Dexter Ballou, the first cotton manufacturer of Woonsocket, died in that village a few days since, at the age of 61 years. He commenced manufacturing in Smithfield, and in 1817 went to Woonsocket and hired a small building where he began with two spinning frames, one mule and a few cards—the last of which were made by himself. In the year 1820, he first used power looms. In 1823, the mill he then occupied was destroyed by fire, and he lost nearly all his property. Nothing disheartened, he rebuilt his works, enlarged them from time to time, and the latter part of his life was extensively engaged in the manufacturing business.

NOBLE REQUESTS. The late Theodore Lyman has bequeathed a legacy of fifty thousand dollars to the Reform School at Westboro', of which he was the founder. He has also given ten thousand dollars to the Farm School, of which he has been an active member for several years, and ten thousand dollars to the Horticultural Society, in whose labors he always took a deep interest.

KEEP IN THE COUNTRY. Gov. Briggs and Secretary Calhoun, give it as their opinion, after much diligent inquiry, that ninety out of one hundred of the young men who emigrate from the country to the city, fail of success, and a large portion of them ignominiously.

MILITARY. Nine new Companies have been organized by Adj. Gen. Devereux, and added to the First Regiment, First Brigade. The "Massachusetts Volunteers" will be mustered into the Regiment as Company L. William Schouler, Esq., of the Atlas, has been chosen Lieutenant Colonel, and S. Abbott Lawrence, Esq., Major of the Regiment, and have accepted.

FIRE IN HINGHAM. A dwelling house near the steamboat landing, owned by A. C. Hervey, and occupied by Irish families, was consumed on Monday.

BROWN UNIVERSITY. Medals have been recently awarded in this Institution to—William E. Tolman of Dorchester, for best Dissertation on Political Economy; Edward L. Pierce of Milton, premium for best Dissertation on Physical Science, for best English Dissertation and for best Latin Dissertation.

THE NEW COMPANY. The Massachusetts Volunteers, Capt. Poore, met on Tuesday evening for drill and business, after which they marched to the Hanover House, and partook of an excellent collation tendered by the host and boarders of that house.

FATHER MATHEW'S PLEDGE. The following is the pledge he administers, those receiving it kneeling, and repeating the words after him:

After the words have been repeated, he says, "May God bless you, my children. May he give you grace and strength to keep the pledge." He then goes to each individual and gives them the benediction, and all the children he kisses. Tomorrow, Father Mathew will be at St. Mary's Church, Charlestown.

OUTRAGE. A brass cannon loaded with six balls, was fired off at the house of a black man named King, in Portland, Me., on the 27th ult. and one of the balls passed through the head-board of the bed where he and his wife was sleeping, and she received a slight wound from a splinter.

SWIMMING. "The Science of Swimming," is the title of a neat and very useful little work, published by Fowler & Wells, Clinton Hall, N. Y. Price 12 1-2 cents.

BOSTON EVENING MUSEUM. The publication of this little sheet has been suspended until the first of September, when it will again appear enlarged and otherwise improved.

IMPORTS. The duties on Boston imports for the quarter ending June 30th, amount to $1,114,756,17—an increase over the corresponding quarter last year, of over $100,000.

This invaluable preparation is singular in Nervous and Hysterical affections, Sleep Sickness, Headache, producing quiet and leaving no unpleasant sensations after use. It is the inevitable result of opium, etc. It is prepared by a process approved by the able and Physicians known, from the root in rejecting the dead Valerian root of impurities. Dr. Bell, of the McLean Asylum, Mass., using this preparation, and authorities use a favorable opinion of it, believing it all the properties of Valerian, and recover much more convenient than any other form. [From the distinguished Dr. George Chas. Hospital, Worcester, we are favored following kind letter:]

State Lunatic Hospital, Worcester, Mass., Aug. 15, 1848. Dear Sirs—Your favor of the 3d has been received. We have used of late of your "Pure Fluid Extract of Valerian" a mild form of Digitalis, which we used it, the agitation and rest calmed by one hundred drop dose of it, able to say something in favor of the Valerian. It is an elegant preparation.

Yours very truly, GEORGE CHANDLER. Sold by EDWARD BRINLEY & Co., Sole Proprietors, and their appointed Agents—Mrs. E. HAYDEN, Quincy, Mass., Braintree.

A sure cure for Dyspepsia and Costiveness. HARRISON'S PERISTALTICS has years' trial by the Medical Faculty and the public. This medicine is in Lozenges, pleasant, and may be given to children. A sure cure for Dyspepsia and Costiveness.

HARRISON'S PERISTALTICS have had 12 years' trial by the Medical Faculty and the public generally. This medicine is in Lozenges, pleasant to the taste, and may be given to children. The Peristaltics are gently laxative, and by their tonic qualities improve the digestive organs and invigorate the whole system. They cure Costiveness, Headache, Dizziness, Sleeplessness, Jaundice, Oppression after Eating, Liver Complaint, Diarrhea, Piles, Dropsy, Hysteria, Catarrhs, Weak Stomach, Heartburn, Palpitation, Rheumatism, Pains in the Bones, Scrofula, Tic-Douleur, Worms, etc., etc.

These Lozenges are excellent in all Nervous complaints and Dyspeptic symptoms. Female Suppressions and Irregularities, especially the young, find medicine contains no preparation of Mercury whatever, and no ingredient which may not safely be given to the most delicate female and under any circumstances.

This preparation is also put up in bottles for seafaring persons, who should always have a supply. An occasional use of the Peristaltics prevents Fevers, Bilious complaints, and Chronic or East India Diarrhea. They are admirably adapted to the complaints incident to the coast of Africa, Sumatra, West Indies and South America.

These Lozenges are recommended by some of the best Physicians in Boston, who use them in their families and general practice. All afflicted with oppression after eating, or cramping of food will find great relief. They are the best medicine for children known.

DR. BRIGGS'S SHOULDER BRACES AND SUPPORTERS are acknowledged by the Medical Faculty of New York to be the best ever invented. Read the following letter from Prof. C. P. BRONSON, A. M., M. D., Teacher of Education and Music.

Dr. Briggs: Dear Sir—You ask my candid opinion of your "Suspenders and Shoulder Braces." I am not apt to be carried away with new things, nor accustomed to receive whatever comes highly recommended. I care but little for theory; practice, or use, is the great test; hence I abide by this motto—"Prove all things, and hold fast that which is good." I have no idea that your Brace will cure many diseases; but as a preventive of disease, I find by considerable experience and observation, that it is very valuable; particularly such diseases as are incident to the digestive organs, lungs and spine; because it pleasantly compels a person to be straight, and thereby aids the operations of nature. "Blessed are the upright, body as well as mind; and the opposite is equally true."—Cursed are the crooked!

I have applied this brace to a great variety of persons, male and female, old and young; and in most of these cases with decided benefit, especially those of feeble constitutions and slender forms. And I am particularly pleased with its structure, conforming, as it does, so entirely to physiological principles, which account it commends itself to reason and common sense, as well as to science. I am acquainted with a good many articles of a somewhat similar character and purpose, but consider yours preferable to any of them; as it differs, in some important respects from all others. Allow me to hope that you will not resort to any of the too common modes of "alluring purchasers"; only give it fair trial with reasonable persons, and they will need no other recommendation. Yours truly,

C. P. BRONSON.

POETRY.

A SONG.

When the Puritans came over
Our hills and swamps to clear,
The woods were full of entoments,
And Indians red as deer,
With tomahawks and scalping knives,
That make folks' heads look queer;
O the ship from England used to bring
A hundred wigs a year!
The crows came cawing through the air
To pluck the pilgrim's corn,
The bears came snuffling round the door,
When'er a babe was born,
The rattlesnakes were bigger round
Than the butt of the old ram's horn
The croaker blew at meeting time
On every Sabbath morn.

But soon they knocked the wigwams down,
And pine tree trunk and limb
Began to sprout among the leaves
In shape of steeples slim;
And out the little wharves were stretched Along the ocean's rim,
And up the little schoolhouse shot
To keep the boys in trim.

And when at length the College rose,
The sachem cocked his eye
At every tutor's meager rib,
Whose coat-tails whistled by;
But, when the Greek and Hebrew words
Came tumbling from their jaws,
The copper-colored children all
Ran screaming to their spaws.

And who was on the Catalogue
When College was begun?
Two nephews of the President,
And the Professor's son, (They turned a little Indian by,
As brown as any bun.)
Lord! how the seniors knocked about
The freshman class of one!

They had not then the dainty things
That commons now afford,
But succotash and hominy
Were smoking on the board;
They did not rattle round in gigs,
Or dash in long-tail blues,
But always on Commencement days
The tutors blacked their shoes.

God bless the ancient Puritans!
Their lot was hard enough;
But honest hearts made iron arms,
And tender minds are tough;
So love and faith have formed and fed
Our true born Yankee stuff,
And keep the kernel in the shell
The British found so rough!

THE DAWN OF LOVE.

A maiden stood
In thoughtful mood,
Beside a mountain stream;
Her heart went pit and then went pat
So strangely—you would reason that
She must be in a dream.

And at her side,
In manly pride,
A youth was whispering low,
His heart went pat, and then went pit,
So strangely—you would think that Could never flutter so.

A willing ear,
A trickling tear,
Was all the maiden gave;
While hearts went pit and then went pat,
So strangely—you would reason that
The subject must be grave.

An instant more,
And doubt was o'er,
A voice from Heaven above
Hath soothed each pining, pining heart, Declared they never more would part—
And—'t was the Dawn of Love.

THE VILLAGE CHURCH.

When the country lies in Sabbath rest,
And the fields are in golden beauty drest;
When the church-bell's notes o'er the valley
Come,
Like the voice of a father inviting home;
When the aged man is thoughtful seen,
Where the grave of his early friends lie green
Round the village church in many a heap,
Each with its tenant in slumber deep—
To that humble church in hope repair,
And the spirit of peace shall meet you there.

ANECDOTES.

A convivial gentleman while petambulating the streets in a state of "Oh-be-joyfulness," was brought in contact with the pavement, from some cause. Gathering himself up with difficulty, he indignantly exclaimed: "Why the d—d don't they put ashes on the sidewalk?—it's the law, and they ought to do it!"

A spruce young man, in Lowell, gallanting his intended, conversing upon the future, remarked, "Oh, yes, I wished he was able to maintain all the factory girls for six months. He would do it to prevent their returning to the mills." His fair one, who had been a silent listener to his patriotic speech, replied with a sigh: "Ah, sir, I wish you were able to maintain one of them."

"My dear," said an affectionate spouse to her husband, "am I not your only treasure?" "Oh, yes," was the cool reply, "and I would willingly lay it up in Heaven." The "insinuating" wretch!

"Oh, doctor," said an elderly lady to Dr. B., in describing the effect of a diseased spine, "I can neither lay nor set." "I should recommend, then," replied he, "the propriety of roasting."

A shop sign in Baltimore reads—"Kakes and beer, sold here." An addition was made to inform the public that "I make my sign a little wider, to let the people know I sell wider."

THIS Institution insures both males and females against disease or accident, according to the rates specified in their tables. The former, by depositing a given sum yearly, may insure a return of four-fifths of that deposit, for each and every week within that year, during which he may be so disabled by illness as to be prevented from pursuing his usual occupation, such allowance not to exceed four hundred dollars in any one year. Females, insured against all maladies common to both sexes, are entitled to return allowances equal to three-fourths of their yearly payments, for every week's sickness. Thus, an investment of $5 a year by the former, or of $5.33 by the latter, will, if deprived of health, secure to the party insured, a repayment of $4 per week. An advance payment of not less than one dollar will be required of each applicant at the time of making the proposal; which sum, in case of rejection, will be refunded, or allowed in case of acceptance. The applicant is thereby insured, if the proposal be approved, for the term of thirty days, and no longer, unless the policy be taken, and the balance of premium paid within that time.

Persons insured by this Company become members thereof, so far as to entitle them to a proportion of all dividends of its annual profits, in the ratio of their respective premiums, and according to the duration of their policies. The renewal of any policy may be secured, on notice given to the Secretary within three months of its expiration, and on furnishing proof of sound health at the date of such notice.

THE BROKEN MERCHANT.

CHAPTER I.

"Will you take another cup of coffee?" said Mrs. M. to her husband, as he leaned, in an abstract manner, over the breakfast table.
"No, I thank you," he answered in a half peevish tone, and raising abruptly, took his hat and left the room.
To the eye of the careless observer that house was the abode of plenty, contentment and happiness. Mr. M. had been married about two years. His wife, one of a thousand, and one little smiling cherub, who was beginning to exhibit those winning and playful ways that parents of all others find so attractive. And if their establishment was not splendid according to the ideas of modern nabobs, there was something throughout which bespoke the refinement and elegance of the owners. They knew how to apply and enjoy rationally the wealth where Providence had blessed them. The time they had spent together had rather strengthened than diminished their attachment, formed as it was on mutual worth and highly cultivated endowments.

But to return: Mrs. M. followed the retreating form of her husband with an anxious and tearful eye, and then leaning her head upon her hand, gave vent to her agonized feelings in a flood of tears. She did not hope for her husband's return before the hour for dinner, and having for several days marked his altered demeanor, she had in vain striven to fathom the cause, and had hoped ere this to have had some explanation; it was plain he shunned her society and for the first time shut her out from his confidence. Yet he was certainly not at ease, and evidently anxious to evade any conversation on the subject. She had preserved her equanimity, nay, even appeared gay, in his presence; but now that she was alone her long suppressed anxiety broke forth in an agony it took her long to subdue. Yet she had in some measure regained her tranquillity, when Mr. H. suddenly entered. His heart smote him for his conduct to his wife, yet he dreaded to tell her that he was a bankrupt!

He knew her worth and confiding tenderness, but he wished her dream of happiness to last as long as possible, and he in vain essayed to tell her unshrinkingly that an unfortunate speculation had reduced them from affluence to poverty. Yet the traces of anxiety and suffering which lingered on the countenance of Mrs. M. determined him, and seating himself beside her he made a candid and full disclosure of his altered fortunes.

"And is this all," said Mrs. H. in a gay tone; "is it the loss of a few thousands—the probable sacrifice of a few superfluities, that you have feared to tell me?"
"But consider, Helen," said Mr. M., "you as yet know nothing of poverty from actual comforts of life—we feel that there is more of bitterness than poetry in his actual presence."

"We shall see," she said gaily, and seating herself by the piano poured forth such a glad strain of harmony that Mr. M. himself yielding to its influence, and confessed that they might even yet be very happy."

"But," said he, "should you be compelled to relinquish even this?"
"Then my voice will be left, see how I can sing." And she did sing so sweetly that she convinced her sceptic husband that something there was that poverty could not rob them of. He felt relieved already of half his misfortunes, now that his wife knew his circumstances, and bore his altered fortunes so calmly. He ate his dinner with composure, and returning to his store set himself to a thorough investigation of his affairs. He found them not so bad as he at first feared; and though his business must be and his style of living contracted, yet he hoped to pay all his debts, and trusted to the future to retrieve the present.

Such were his communications to Mrs. M.

"And yet," he said, "when I think of the advantages you must relinquish—the privations you may yet have to encounter, I confess my spirit sometimes misgives me at the prospect."

"We will see," said Mrs. M. "First here is a large house for three of us; I have often thought, in passing a neat, snug house, how comfortable it looked."

"Well,"
"Then, here is a quantity of useless furniture which I can seldom trust a servant to keep in order. Some are careless and some do not know how. Then, the house and furniture disposed of we shall not want the servants,—another perplexity gone, we shall not be expected to give parties and dinners,—another material in the vexations of life. Again, in our snug little house, none but our real friends will ever take the trouble to find us out,—more time saved. So, you perceive, on every hand we must be gainers."

But though Mrs. M.'s affection for her husband, and her own excellent understanding prompted her to treat the present posture of affairs so lightly, and though she held herself ready to make any sacrifice with cheerfulness which circumstances might require, yet she knew and felt keenly that the draught which adversity compels us to swallow is indeed bitter. She knew enough of society to be well aware that in the circle which prosperity draws around us there are always some who look with envious eyes on our condition, and would exult at our fallen fortunes; but, whatever she felt, she saw that her husband felt more, and resolved that no repinings on her part should add one atom to his perplexities.

CHAPTER II.

Ring, ding! went the bell at an early hour, at the house of Miss Deborah Greenwood; and the servant ushered in Mrs. Marshall.

"Have you heard the news?" said she after a few preliminaries.
"What news?"

"Oh, what that Mr. M. has failed,—positively lost every thing!—a great speculator, they say. But, do you know that it is hinted that his habits are in secret, quite dissipated, and that he has lost heavy sums at the gaming table?"

"But," chimed in Miss Greenwood, "what is to become of poor Mrs. M.? she will have to lower her pretensions, I'm thinking."
"After all, it is not such great pity," observed Mrs. Marshall; "I never could see what there was in her more than in any other folks, that every one should go mad about Mrs. M.'s good taste, and Mrs. M.'s good temper, and Mrs. M.'s surprising abilities. Trust me, that when it is known that Mrs. M. is poor, she will be no more courted than any of us."

This very charitable tete-a-tete was interrupted by the arrival of another visitor. Mrs. Bell. She had more genuine kindness in her nature, and heard of Mr. M.'s misfortunes with unfeigned regret, not excepting his habits of dissipation and the suggestions of wanton extravagance on the part of Mrs. M. "I have been a frequent visitor at their house," said Mrs. Bell, at all hours, and have thought their domestic arrangements among the best I have ever seen; and I have looked upon them as a pattern of conjugal happiness."

After a few unimportant and miscellaneous conversation Mrs. Bell apologized for her short stay, saying that "as she had but just heard of Mrs. M.'s misfortunes, she felt inexcusable in appearing to neglect her,—at a time, too, when her mind must be exceedingly sensitive on the subject."

"Just like yourself," said Mrs. Marshall and by your leave I will bear you company,—for really I am quite curious to see how she carries herself at present."

"And I too," said Miss Greenwood, "as the morning is fine, will be of your party."

We will not scan more minutely the motives which severally prompted the trio as they started together for a call on Mrs. M. They found her at home, dressed neatly but plainly, and were received with so much politeness and cheerfulness, and she conversed with so much affability and even vivacity, that Mrs. Marshall and Miss Greenwood often exchanged glances, as much as to say "Poor thing she either does not know her husband's condition, or hopes to conceal it." Not so Mrs. Bell: as the others rose to depart, she excused herself for remaining by the remark that as Mrs. M. was fortunately alone, and not having any particular engagement, she would spend the day with her.

This was a most welcome communication to Helen; for she felt that the judgment and experience of Mrs. Bell would materially aid her in maturing her private plans for the future. To her therefore, she made a plain and candid statement of their circumstances; adding that though Mr. M. hoped by giving up all his effects, to satisfy all just demands, yet there would be but a slender pittance left, and that considerable time must elapse before he could be engaged in any profitable business.

"And now, my dear friend," continued Mrs. M., "I am going to communicate a little plan of my own, which, in Mr. M.'s present state of feelings, I have deemed best not to communicate to him; for he is not yet sufficiently reconciled to his condition to think calmly of my submitting to any exertion for a livelihood. But, why not? I know of no laws of equity which fix a stigma on any effort a wife may make, however severely the husband's ingenuity may be taxed. Briefly, then, I have thought of turning to some account those accomplishments which some have thought proper to complement me on possessing. I think I could be content in a small house in a less expensive part of the town, and that besides attending to our little domestic duties, I could find leisure to instruct a few young ladies in music and drawing. And I must throw myself upon the generosity of my friends for patronage."

Mrs. Bell warmly seconded the views of her friend, and promised to use the utmost of her influence in her behalf.

CHAPTER III.

It was a pleasant morning in the month of June when Mrs. Bell's carriage drove up to a small but genteel-looking house in the upper part of the city, and having alighted, gave orders to the coachman not to call for her until evening.

She was shown into a neat parlor, where a genteel and happy-looking woman was engaged with a group of young ladies, whom she was instructing in some elegant fancy work; but as the lesson seemed nearly concluding, she begged that she might not be an interruption to her; and gently seating herself on the sofa, took a leisure survey of the scene around her. The apartment to some would have seemed plainly furnished, but yet there was such an air of elegance and refinement throughout that it puzzled her to think of any thing lacking. Then there was such a display of neatness and order in the arrangement, as at once suggested to the mind the idea of comfort and contentment.

Mrs. M.,—for she was the lady of the mansion,—soon dismissed her little company, and prepared to entertain her guest with the same cheerfulness and urbanity which had distinguished her most prosperous days. I will not say she felt more happy, but it was evident the pleasing consciousness of performing her duty, and lessening the cares of a husband deservedly dear to her, more than counterbalanced the trouble of performing it. She was one who did not place her dignity in the mere equipage of wealth; and it would not have been less conspicuous even in the most abject poverty.

As the dinner hour approached, Mrs. M. apologized for a short absence, saying in a playful manner that her domestic establishment was not extensive. But little did her friend imagine, when the well dressed dinner appeared together with the neatly attired and elegant hostess that a single servant constituted her whole establishment. At dinner Mr. M. appeared—not the dejected, broken-spirited man, but the happy husband and father, whose home was of all places on earth the one happy place for him.

It was true their house was no longer the resort of promiscuous visitors; for "they lived so far, so very far up town," that it was not possible for their fashionable friends to visit them often; but then the little circle who knew and appreciated that worth which could survive the decay of fortune, made up enough of society to a couple mutually happy in each other and contented in their lot.

Months, and even years passed away; children grew up around; friends were multiplied, and wealth increased; and Mr. M. is now among the wealthiest of our citizens; but he has often declared that but for the praiseworthy magnanimity of his wife, he should never probably have risen; that if he had been met with impatience or repining, when his spirit was already goaded to madness, it had probably destroyed its elasticity forever; or if, in the commencement of his second career, he had been subjected to what might have been deemed the justifiable demands of his wife, instead of the careful husbanding of their slender resources, the road to his ascent had been rendered difficult,—perhaps forever inaccessible.

POLICY FOR THE YOUNG.

It is said there is policy in taking advantage of circumstances, and turning them to the accomplishment of those objects one wishes to secure. Policy is therefore necessary for those young ladies who wish to secure good husbands. But the policy which most of them pursue is exceedingly enormous they seem to think that it is degrading to them to be seen about their household affairs. But this is the very condition in which every young man, who is worth securing, would prefer to find them if he were seeking a wife. A foolish simpering fop who is more indebted to his tailor and barber, for importance, than to his brains, may wish to find young ladies dressed in silk and shut up in the parlor like dolls in a show case. But a sensible man wants a wife who knows something and can make herself useful. A judicious writer advises all young men to seek their companions for life, from the class who are willing to be found in the kitchen without making apologies for it. This is sage advice, and if young ladies were aware that those young men who are worth their seeking generally acting upon it had rather find them at the wash tub than weeping over "the last new novel," they would not run away from their work and hide when a young man is approaching the house, as they often do. They would let him know they are worth something more than mere play-things—that they are not butterflies, very pretty to look upon, but if handled, perish with the touch. Nothing recommends a young lady like industry. To understand labor and to perform it well is one of the finest qualifications. Ladies should never be ashamed of being caught at work.

THE CIRCASSIAN SLAVE TRAFFIC.

In a moral point of view, all slave traffic is of course odious and reprehensible, but that of Circassia differed from other commerce of the kind, in so far that all parties were benefited by it, and consented to the contract. The Turks obtained from Caucasus handsomer and healthier wives than those born in the harem; and the Circassian beauties were delighted to change the poverty and toil of their fathers' mountain huts for the luxurious far-nine of the seraglio, of whose wonders and delights their ears were regaled, from childhood upwards, with the most glowing description. The trade, although greatly impeded, and very hazardous, still goes on. Small Turkish crafts creep up to the coast, cautiously evading Russian cruisers, enter creeks and inlets, and are dragged by the Circassians high and dry upon the beach, there to remain till the negotiation for their live cargo is completed, an operation that generally takes a few weeks. The women sold are the daughters of serfs and freemen; rarely does a work consent to dispose of his sister or daughter although the case does sometimes occur. But while the sale goes on, the slave ships are anything but secure. It is a small matter to have escaped the Russian frigates and steamers. Each of the Kreposts possesses a little squadron of rowboats, manned with cossacks, who pull along the coast in search of Turkish vessels. If they detect one, they land in the night, and endeavor to set fire to it, before the mountaineers can come to the assistance of the crew. The Turks, who live in profound terror of these Cossack coast-guards, resort to every possible expedient to escape their observation; often covering their vessels with dry leaves and boughs, and tying fir branches to the masts, that the scouts may take them for trees. If they are captured at sea by the cruisers, the crew are sent to hard labor in Siberia, and the Circassian girls are married to the Cossacks, or devalued as handmaidens amongst the Russian staff officers. From thirty to forty slaves compose the usual cargo of each of these vessels, which are so small that the poor creatures are packed almost like herrings in a barrel. But they patiently endure the misery of the voyage, in anticipation of the honeyed existence of the harem. It is calculated that one vessel out of six is taken or lost.—Layard's Nineteenth and its Remains.

ASSAYING METALS. The assaying is the most curious and scientific of all the business in the mint. The melters take the gold dust, melt it and cast it into a bar, when it is weighed accurately, and a piece is cut off for the assayer. He takes it, melts it with twice its weight of silver, and several times its weight of lead. It is melted in small cups made of bone ashes which absorb all the lead; a large part of the silver is extracted by another process, and the sample is then rolled out to a thin shaving, coiled up, and put in a sort of glass vial called a matras, with some nitric acid. The matras is put in a furnace, and the acid is boiled again. This is done several times, till the acid has extracted all the silver and other mineral substances, leaving the sample pure gold. The sample is then weighed, and by the difference between the weight before assaying and after, the true value is found. All the silver over and above five pennyweights for each lot, is paid for by the mint as its true value. The gold, after it has been assayed, is melted, refined, and being mixed with its due proportion of alloy, is drawn into long strips, (not unlike an iron hoop for a cask.) the round pieces cut out with a sort of punch, each piece weighed and brought to right size and put into a stamping press, whence it comes forth a perfect coin.—Scientific American.

SONG BIRDS. The delightful music of song birds is perhaps the chief cause why these charming little creatures are in all countries so highly prized. Music is a universal language; it is understood and cherished in every country; the savage, the barbarian, and the civilized individual are all passionately fond of music—particularly of melody. But delightful as music is, perhaps there is another reason that may have led man to deprive the warblers of the woods and fields of liberty, particularly in civilized states, where the intellect is more refined, and consequently the feelings more adapted to receive tender impressions—we mean the associations of ideas. Their sweet melody brings him more particularly in contact with the groves and meadows—with romantic banks or beautiful sequestered glades—the cherished scenes, perhaps, of his early youth. But, independent of this the warble of a sweet song bird is in itself very delightful, and to men of sedentary habits, confined to cities by professional duties, and to their desks most part of the day, we do not know a more innocent or more agreeable recreation than the rearing and taming of these little feathered musicians.

BLACK LEAD. The lead from which pencil points are made, comes from the principal plumbeo mine in the world, at Borrowdale, Cumberland, England. It is situated in a hill, and instead of being worked constantly, like other mines, it is opened only once a year, when a sufficient quantity is taken to supply the world for a year to come, and it is again closed with strong doors, bars and locks until the next annual supply is required. From the time of Queen Elizabeth it is said that all the fine pencils in the world have been made of the black lead from this mine.

MEETING OF THE WATERS. "We sat down upon the curbstone and laughed some, the other night—we did—to witness the operations of Tommy S. with a pump, which he mistook for a former friend of his, and with whom he was anxious to make friends. The night was rather dark, and Tommy more than usually 'tea'd'."

"Hul-low!" said Tommy addressing the wooden, faithful servant of the public; "I thought it was you when I first see you standing here on the corner. You aint nothin agin me; have you? Did I ever injure you in the least? Have I ever said anything agin you character as a good citizen? You don't say Yes nor No, eh? Now look here, Frank—let's shake hands an' make up."

With that he caught the handle of the pump, and with a perpendicular shake, caused a few drops of water to trick from its spout.

"It's a trying time, I know," said Tommy; "but there's no use of sheddin' tears on the 'casion. We're just as good friends now as we ever was."

Partially recovering from our laughing fit, we rose and begged of him to cease molesting a harmless, unoffending pump.

"Then that's a pump, is it?" remarked Tommy, with evidence surprise; well, skin me, if I didn't begin to think it was a—d—d pump, and nobody else!"

OPINIONS OF US ABROAD. The ignorance abroad, respecting this country, is very general, and by no means confined to the uneducated. There is scarcely a boy of fifteen in the United States, who does not know more of France or England than the great men there know of us. When Daniel Webster went to England, he was frequently mistaken for Noah Webster the author of the Dictionary. A correspondent of the Boston Atlas says, that in a late interview with Beranger, the French poet, he was astonished at the ignorance of that illustrious man respecting America. Beranger had read a translation of Mrs. Trollope's work—heard that bloodhounds were used to hunt Indians in the Florida war—thought that Pennsylvania had cheated a great many people, and that we had a just estimation of General Lafayette's character. Of our political writers he knew nothing, except of Hannah F. Gould, one of whose poems he had met with in a translation.

RICHARD HENRY LEE. Mr. Lee was a native of Virginia, but educated in England. He was remarkable, during his minority, for acuteness of perception and expansiveness of views. He was among the earliest that raised the voice of opposition to British tyranny, and originated positive resistance to it when the Stamp Act was passed, in 1765. In the Virginia House of Burgesses he proposed the formation of Committees of Correspondence, in 1773, and was a delegate from that State in the Continental Congress. He introduced the resolution in Congress, declaring the Colonies free and independent States in 1776, and was one of the signers of the Declaration, to that effect, adopted on the 4th of July, of that year. He was a very active member of Congress, and, in 1784, was elected president of that body. He was a Senator from Virginia in the first Congress under the Federal Constitution. He resigned his office in 1793, and died, 1784, aged 62 years.

A POINTED BLOW. An invalid sent for a physician, the late Dr. Wheelman, and after detailing him for some time with a description of his pains, aches, &c., he thus summed up—"Now, Doctor, you have humbugged me long enough with your good-for-nothing pills and worthless syrups; they don't touch the real difficulty. I wish you to strike the cause of my ailment, if it is in your power to reach it." "It shall be done," said the Dr., at the same time lifting his cane, and demolishing a decanter of gift that stood upon the sideboard!

A DRILL COMPARISON. A learned and ingenious foreigner, having visited England, and being asked how he liked the English, said: "They resemble a butt of their own favorite beverage" ale—frothy at the top, dregs at the bottom, but the middle part excellent."

REMEDY FOR CRAMPS. It consists in tying a handkerchief around the forearm, a little distance above the wrist, and then placing a stick underneath and twisting the handkerchief tightly. In a minute the cramp will depart, if the handkerchief hurts let it be slackened, and on a recurrence of the cramp tighten again.

PAST SCENES. Past scenes are generally recollected with a solemn sadness, caused by the thought that the time is gone, which will never return. Our days must be well and profitably spent, we would remember them with pleasure.

THE CHOLERA.

Dr. Bettner, an experienced cholera physician, gives the following description of the character of this disease:

Cholera is a disease of the vascular system. An inverted action of the fluids of the body takes place; they are thrown inwardly upon the stomach and bowels, and with such force, in violent cases, that the blood is deprived of its serum, the muscles are contracted, the whole system emptied of its fluid contents, and collapse and death speedily ensues. These facts explain at once the rationale of the treatment which should be adopted. The indication is to re-establish the normal action of the fluids, and to divert them back to the surface, whether they most naturally tend. The most proper medicines are those which restrain the action of the bowels, and by their stimulating and diffusible character, produce a prompt determination to the skin. External applications and frictions which aid in producing a healthy surface action, are included in those remedies which are known to possess efficacy in arresting the disease.

The peculiar nature of the malady, and its effect upon the vascular system, give rise to many useful and instructive suggestions. Fluids in the system are in general governed by the same hydrostatic laws as fluids out of the system. Some of the wisest and most salutary provisions of nature have reference to the disposition, distribution, and regulative action of fluids. These laws are all based upon the profoundest wisdom, and it is remarkable that fluids out of place, either in the body or out of it, always occasion more or less inconvenience or injury. In regard to the human system, if they are thrown suddenly upwards upon the brain, they produce apoplexy; if abnormally upon the kidney, they cause diabetes; if upon the cavities and cellular structure, dropsy; if too much upon the surface sweating sickness; and if upon the bowels, cholera.

In every human frame the fluids predominate in volume over the solids, but in some constitutions the excess is much greater and more apparent than in others; that is, with those who possess sanguinous, and especially with the phlegmatic or watery temperaments. In this class must be included children, who are very vascular, and universally predisposed to bowel affections.

Moisture is an element of growth. Vascularity favors luxuriance both in animals and vegetables. Children from their vascularity, are in a growing state, and plethoric persons in mature life are no less so, and increase in size, not by height, but by breadth or continual enlargement and expansion. There is an opposite condition of things, namely, with the nonvascular, or the attenuated, who lose instead of gaining; these decline and waste away. They grow small by degrees, but not beautifully less. Strong, able bodied individuals have their vascular system in harmony with their powerful physical developments; hence these, as well as all others of full habits or robust health, are prone to severe visitations by any violent disease, such as cholera, plague, or yellow fever.

In the East Indies, where the cholera commences fearful ravages, and is remarkably quick in its course, I was struck with the plump, round and vascular forms of the inhabitants in that portion of the world.

Such generally are the Irish, and of this description are the blacks of the South, who suffer more from this scourge than the whites. The poriferous structure of their skins not only favors perspiration, but likewise admits the escape of animal effluvia, and when interrupted in its functions, exposes them at once to a danger of this kind, while, on the contrary, it exempts them under ordinary circumstances from febrile attacks.

Again, cholera is always rendered worse by moist, close, vapory and oppressive weather, a condition of the atmosphere which predisposes to languor and debility, and a general relaxation of the tissues, and was precisely the kind of weather experienced in New Orleans during the last winter during the epidemic there; for, although it was the winter season, the temperature was generally that of summer, or that kind of cold which aggravates a disease without arresting it.

We are now commencing the worst month in the year, (August,) when bowel affections are always numerous and more common than any other complaints, and to diminish the violence of the epidemic, those persons who, from constitutional liabilities and peculiarities are most exposed to it, require to exercise the strictest precautions. The tone of the system should be maintained by exercise—by wholesome fare, and such regimen as will promote the elastic vigor and counteracting power of the system. Abstinence and close living are out of place, as we are not contending against inflammatory action. Dry frictions and rubbing the body, night and morning, act with more efficacy than bathing. The latter should never be used to such a degree as to occasion paleness and debility. Many persons do not seem to be aware that bathing can be carried to excess.

In cases of debility, or where there is a discolored condition of the bowels, it should be immediately interrupted, either warm or cold, and applications of alcohol, cologne or brandy, with peregoric or laudanum, made, with dry frictions over the stomach, loins, etc. They should be rubbed in, and briskly rubbed in. If the system increases the liability to them. In this respect it is like the influenza, but unlike many other epidemics, such as small pox, measles, the plague, yellow fever, etc.

HONEY-MOON CONVERSATION. A person writing from Brandywine Springs, gives the following report of a conversation between a newly married couple from Virginia. There is a depth of affection in it, which is quite refreshing to contemplate:

'William—dear William,' said the wife, with a world of affection in her eyes.
'Speak, heavenly charmer,' replied the new husband, returning with interest the expressive glances of his spouse.
'Dear William!'
'Adored Eliza!'
'Sweet flatterer!'
'Angelic creature!'
'Dear—dear William, pardon me—but do you think a short walk would hurt us, as the divine Willis says?
'I fear, loveliest of thy sex, that thou may be fatigued.'
'Fear not, dearest!'
'Heavenly emanation—bright dreams of my precarious existence—but I cannot help fearing.'
'Sweet William!'
'Celestial Eliza!'

Here they fell to violent kissing, which lasted about fifteen minutes. Almost breathless, the lady exclaimed—
'William, dear William, why are you so sweet? Oh, the joy, the ecstasy of wedded bliss! Best beloved, will you ever love me thus?'
'By yonder fearful—I say tremendous orb—I swear,' he exclaimed, pointing to the setting sun.
'And as a memento of our wedding day, will you yearly bring me here—will you, cherished idol?'
'Yes, my only pet—my life—my love—I will bring you here every year—if my capital holds out!'

'Oh! bravest and best of thy noble sex, talk not of capital in this, our hour of bliss.'
How much longer they talked the writer cannot say, for he was called away at this moment. But he is firmly of the opinion that none but married people know what real happiness is. While the above happy couple were talking, he felt as if immersed in molasses, and everything since has looked, felt and smelt sweeter.

FAMILY GATHERING. The descendants of Richard Haven, of Lynn, are to have a great 'family party' at Framingham, in this State, on the 30th inst. Five years since they had the second centennial celebration of the family, and it was then voted that a committee be raised to call the family together in 1849. At the meeting in 1841, some fifteen hundred of the cousins dined together, and it is supposed that a much larger number will meet at Framingham this month. An oration and other services proper to the occasion—to say nothing of a good dinner—will be furnished. All the family, and all those who are or that expect to be connected with it by marriage, are invited.

EXQUISITE NONSENSE. We doubt not that every one who has read the letters from the fashionable resorts published in some of the city papers, have been thoroughly disgusted by their sickening twaddle. Some of the precious effusions go very fully into the details of the rank, family, wealth, and personal appearance of the 'lions,' dwelling on this latter theme—especially in relation to the ladies—with a degree of minuteness and circumstantiality rather transcending the bounds of strict delicacy. That shallow fops and mushroom aristocrats should write or cause such stuff to be written is not very strange, though we marvel that there should be in the community a taste to read it.

THE PRESENT FASHIONS AND THE PURITANS. The Puritan fathers watched over not only the conduct of persons, but the cut of their garments. The present style of dress, it will be seen by the following order, was not much admired by that straight laced sect:—'July 7th, 1639. No garment shall be made with short sleeves whereby the nakedness of the arm may be discovered in the wearing thereof, and such as have garments already made with short sleeves, shall not hereafter wear the same, unless they cover their arms to the wrist with linen or otherwise; and that hereafter no person whatever shall make any garment for women, or any of their sex, with sleeves more than half an ell wide in the widest place thereof, and so proportionally for bigger or smaller persons.'

THE DIFFERENCE. A gentleman from Boston chanced to find himself among a little party of young ladies away down east, last summer, and while in the enjoyment of some innocent play, he carelessly placed his arm about the slender waist of as pretty a damsel as Maine can boast of, when she started and exclaimed: 'Be done, sir! don't insult me!' The gentleman instantly apologized for the seeming rudeness, and assured the half offended fair one that he did not intend to insult her. 'No!' she replied archly, 'Well, if you didn't—you may do so again,' she added, to the no small amusement of the company.

ANSWER. Should the gloom and loneliness of the grave, and the uncertainty of life move us to inaction; should we wear downcast looks and brood mournfully over the fate that awaits us; should we hesitate to labor lest our task be left unfinished by our destruction? No! This would be the fool's policy. Should we then reize upon the passing hour as a time for reckless rioting, should we waste it in fashion's follies, in wine bibbing and those mean vices that some call pleasures? Assuredly not. This madmen only do.

HUMORIST. The Duke of Montague was a great humorist. Among other original modes in which he contrived to minister to his own amusement, he had a defective looking-glass suspended in his drawing-room, so that all the noble guests who chanced to dine at Montague House were induced, on passing the treacherous mirror, to adjust their wigs away. In that day a full-dressed wig was as essential as a full dressed coat; and his grace's dinner table commonly presented an assemblage of noble lords with their perukes dragged down into the right eye, each wondering at his neighbor's disorderly appearance, and congratulating himself that in settling his own wig in the drawing-room he had escaped from the absurdity disfiguring the rest of the company.

TAKE EXERCISE LADIES. The way English ladies live in the open air, the daily fatigue they endure, and the pleasure they find in it, would astonish some of the delicate dames here, not more, however, than the healthy feelings and good looks they reap would.

PRUSSIC ACID. A German paper says that suspension of life caused by prussic acid is only apparent; life is immediately restored by pouring acetate of potash and common salt dissolved in water on the head and spine. In this country rabbits have been at once restored from the effects of prussic acid by this means.

TOTAL ABSTINENCE. An old revolutionary soldier, was present on the fourth of July celebration in Bridgeport, (Ct.) and stated that he was in his ninety third year, and had never been sick a day, and never drank a glass of spirits in his life.

TEMPTATION. That temptation which at first is but a little cloud, as big as a man's hand, may quickly overpread the whole heaven. Our engaging to sin the motion of a stone down hill—it strengthens itself by going, and the longer it runs, the more violently. Beware of the smallest beginnings of temptation. No wise man will neglect or slight the smallest spark of fire, especially if he sees it among barrels of gunpowder about you—O, take heed of sparks!

USEFUL KNOWLEDGE. The education of our children is never out of my mind. Train them to virtue, habit them to industry, activity, and spirit. Make them consider every vice as shameful and unmanly. Fire them with ambition to be useful. Make them disdain to be destitute of any useful knowledge.—John Adams to his wife.

"OLD MAIDS." Some one has unjustly said that "among the legion of that unregarded sisterhood whom you coldly call old maids, are often seen the world's chief almoners of warm, unselfish sympathy, generous in mind if not in means and blooming with the immortal youth of charity and kindness."

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, AUG. 11, 1849.

TAKING THE PLEDGE. On Thursday of last week, Rev. Caleb Stetson presented himself at the Catholic church in Boston, for the purpose of taking the Pledge of Father Mathew, and received it with all the solemn ceremonies employed in the case of Catholics, at his own request. He said to Father Mathew that he could see no impropriety in any person professing to be a Christian recognizing the significance of the sign of the cross as the emblem of man's redemption.

CONGRESSIONAL ELECTION. The Governor has issued his precept for another trial for a choice of a Representative in the Fourth District, on the 10th day of September next.

INCREASE OF NEW ORLEANS. New Orleans had a population of 102,000 in 1840; now she has probably over 150,000. The exports during the year 1842, amounted $28,404,149, and the imports were $8,032,590. For the year ending in June, 1848, the exports were $40,971,361, and the imports $9,190,439.

YANKEE GIRLS. When a Yankee girl is courted, says the Rochester Magnet, she wants to be courted in right down earnest, with all the speed that is practicable; and, on the other hand, she is ready to "tread up" on her side as fast as her lover sets the example.

HOLDEN'S MAGAZINE. The August number well sustains the high character of the work. In variety and richness it is unsurpassed by any other work.

WATER CURE JOURNAL. The table of contents of the number for this month, which has come to hand, presents a large list of interesting papers on subjects of importance to every one.

PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL. The number for this month has a likeness of Rev. Theobald Mathew, with a biography and description of phrenological character. The contents, as usual, are very useful reading.

DENOMINATIONAL STATISTICS. The following is a summary of the principal denominations in this State:

Trinitarian Congregationalist Churches,	465
Calvinist Baptist	230
Methodist	207
Unitarian	167
Universalist	138
Episcopalian	57
Roman Catholic	27

FATHER MATHEW AT DEDHAM. We have been requested to publish the following correspondence. It will be seen by a notice in another column, that Friday the 17th inst., has been fixed upon as the day for Father Mathew's meeting in this County. He will be in Roxbury on the 15th inst., at the Catholic Church, probably. Up to Tuesday 7th inst., twenty three thousand persons had taken the Pledge from him since he entered the state.

Dedham, Mass., July 24, 1849.

Sir, I am instructed, by the government of the Washington Total Abstinence Society in Norfolk County, to invite you to visit the friends of Temperance in that county at such time as may be convenient and agreeable to you during your stay in Massachusetts.

I trust you will not deem it improper for me to add, that while the citizens of our county have watched with deep interest and admiration the results of your efforts, in your own land, in the great reform to which you have devoted your life, they in common with their countrymen, yearn to take you by the hand, to listen to your voice, and, it may be to catch something of the spirit which has thus rendered every new step you have taken in the cause a triumph.

Should it be in your power to visit our county, (Dedham is but ten miles distant from Boston,) I should be glad to receive a communication from you at some early day.

Very respectfully,

E. K. WHITAKER, In behalf

Rev. Theobald Mathew, of County Society.

Acams House.

Boston July 25th, 1849.

MY DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your esteemed letter and feel grateful for the very kind invitation conveyed on behalf of the Washington Total Abstinence Society of Norfolk County.

Whilst I attribute no merit to myself, I am not the less unmindful of the terms of approbation you have expressed, of my exertions.

I should be happy to have an opportunity of complying with the wishes of my friends in your County; but at present, I cannot name a day for the purpose—I hope to be able to do so before my departure from Boston. In haste I am, dear Mr. Whitaker, Yours very devotedly,

THEOBALD MATHEW.

HUNT'S MERCHANTS MAGAZINE. We translate from the "Courrier Des Etats Unis," edited by M. Paul Arpin, the following well merited tribute to an American periodical of standard and sterling value and interests:—Boston Courier.

This monthly review commences with the present month, July 1849, its eleventh year, established in 1839 by M. Freeman Hunt, who is still the editor. This work has won for itself a distinguished rank among publications of the highest utility. It is an authority upon all subjects connected with commerce; and its excellent statistical articles are studied to advantage by all who desire to understand the United States. We know of no work in which can be traced more clearly year by year, we might almost say month by month, the progress of the Union in population, in prosperity, in commerce and industry, since the great crisis of 1837.

THE SECRET FOUND AT LAST. Much time and temper have been expended in discussing the condition of Ireland, its causes and remedies. A recent number of a Dublin paper of strong radical tendencies, and as anti-British as the most inveterate repealer could desire, gives the following wholesome counsel to its readers.

"If you think that sitting with your hands crossed, reading the Irishman of any other National journal, will serve your country, you are woefully mistaken. That is not the patriotism we want. We wish to see you with the spade, or the flail, or the plough or the axe, or the saw or the hammer in your hand. We wish to see you working with the earnest resolution of a man; and if, after the day's toil, you need mental relaxation, then take up a book or a paper; read, read slowly, diligently, and thoughtfully. Examine every word; and if the writer state what you think false, reject it, even though he be a learned and able writer, clothing himself in the grand mystery of the editorial 'we,' and you an humble man, who cannot understand aught but 'plain words and simple doctrine.'"

OLD COLONY RAILROAD. The receipts on the Old Colony Railroad for eight weeks ending July 25, 1849, were nearly twenty-eight per cent. larger than the corresponding eight weeks of 1848.

ACCIDENT. On Wednesday, Mr. Marcus Morton, Jr., of Boston, was sitting on the platform at the Encampment, when the cars came along, striking his knees and throwing him to the ground. He was rescued by the by-standers.

FREE SOIL CONVENTION. A State Convention of the free soil party of this State is to be held in Worcester, on the 12th of next month.

RECAPTURED. Thayer, who escaped from the State Prison, last month, has been re-arrested in Maine and returned to his old quarters.

NEW STATES. There seems to be no doubt that California and New Mexico will apply at the next session of Congress for admission to the Union. New Mexico already has a population of seventy five thousand.

ACCIDENT. The engine and several cars of a train on the South Shore Railroad, were thrown off the track yesterday afternoon, in consequence of coming in contact with a bull or some other large animal. No one was seriously injured.

CHOLERA IN BOSTON. A number of cases of cholera have occurred in the city during the past week, a portion of which terminated fatally. The number remaining in the Cholera Hospital yesterday was twenty four. The number of death reported for the day was ten.

THE ELECTIONS. In Tennessee, it is probable that the democrats have elected the Governor and a majority of the Legislature.

The returns from Kentucky and Indiana have not been received, sufficient to judge of the result.

THE ENCAMPMENT. The Encampment of the first Division of the Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, was held in this town on Wednesday and Thursday last. The troops, as a general thing, appeared well although wanting in numbers, we should say; and the concourse of spectators was quite large, and the grounds around the parade enclosure were well furnished with booths and tents, together with gaming tables in any quantity. Much fault was found with the arrangements for admitting spectators within the lines. A large number were fortunate enough to obtain a "pass," while others who thought themselves equally as much entitled to the privilege, had to be come off with an indistinct view from the outside. Such favoritism is not exactly the thing.

AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY. We invite the attention of all concerned to the advertisement of the Norfolk County Agricultural Society. The time for the Exhibition approaches and it is hoped the friends of the Society will take sufficient interest in it to make it a creditable as well as a useful affair.

THE PRESIDENT'S JOURNEY. President Taylor arrived at Baltimore on Thursday evening last.

There has been a public secession from the German Catholic Church, in Buffalo, of between two and three hundred individuals.

A Swamscot fisherman, the other day, found a huge turtle floating on the water, which had been shot. Its weight was six hundred pounds.

Mrs. Ludlow Patten, (Abby Hutchinson) has been dangerously ill at Milford, (N. H.)

The city Council of Lowell have made arrangements to receive the President during his visit, and have appropriated one thousand dollars to that purpose.

Hon. Stephen Longfellow,—known as the compiler of the first sixteen volumes of the Massachusetts Reports, and the first twelve of the Maine Reports,—died at Portland on the 3d inst., aged 73.

Eight paper mills at Newton Lower Falls, have stopped for want of water power.

The valuation of property in the city of Worcester, amounts to $10,500,000—an advance of a million and a half from last year.

Almy's Gas Works, at Providence, blew up with a terrific explosion, on Friday of last week, injuring several persons.

An article in Blackwood's Magazine says that at least 250,000 persons perished by famine in Ireland in 1847, in consequence of the loss of the potato crop, notwithstanding the British Government expended fifty millions of dollars in purchasing food for the population, and extensive donations were received from abroad.

The Secretary of War has sold four thousand flint cock muskets, out of use in the United States, for five dollars each.

A man had a gold watch, worth sixty dollars stolen from him, the other day, while taking a nap in the Public Garden in Boston.

A Norwegian bark arrived at Boston last week, with a quantity of decayed fruit on board, which the city authorities ordered to be thrown into the channel.

Samuel T. Edwards, city crier of Boston, fell dead in the Street on Sunday last. The physician pronounced it a fit.

The city of Roxbury will apply to the Supreme Court for a writ compelling the Boston and Providence Railroad Corporation to bridge that road at the crossing of the Tremont road and Washington Street, in that city.

Three young men, clerks in stores in Boston, robbed the safe of a firm where one of them was employed, of three hundred dollars, and started west. They were arrested at Albany and brought back.

A writer speaking of the rapid growth of Shelbyville, (la.) says, 'There is one thing about it that will do more to increase its population than all others combined—that is, the handsome ladies.' Goodness! Graciously!

The allopathic physicians of Milwaukee refuse to make reports to the Board of Health, because their secretary is a practitioner of the homoeopathic order.

Ripe Peaches were sold in Cincinnati on the 1st, at $1.20 per peck.

The port of Essex has recently been annexed to the district of Gloucester.

Horrell, who killed Dr. Bellinger, in Pulaski, (Mo) a year ago, has been acquitted—the defence being justifiable homicide, because Bellinger had slandered Horrell's wife.

A writ has been brought at Columbus, (Geo.) to procure the freedom of a white girl who has been a slave several years. She is seventeen years of age.

Conclude your dinner with a mouthful of hard crust. It aids digestion, and scours the teeth better than any tooth powder.

Signor De Begnis died at New York, last week, leaving twenty thousand dollars in the banks, without an heir, at least in this country.

Thomas Sturge, the anti slavery man of England, has sent one hundred pounds to Francis Jackson of Boston, for the cause in America.

Two men were arrested on Monday evening in the act of placing some long poles across the track of the Providence Railroad, in Roxbury. They are in Dedham jail awaiting a trial.

Sweet Oil, it is said, occasionally rubbed over bedsteads, etc., will entirely prevent the appearance of bed bugs.

A lady in Hinchell, on the 14th ult., presented her husband with their twenty-fourth child, about one month after the twenty third anniversary of their wedding day!

Hon. Charles H. Warren of Boston, George S. Boutwell of Groton, and Joseph Cabot of Salem, have been nominated by the Governor as Bank Commissioners.

There are about one hundred and forty settled ministers of the Universalist persuasion in this State. Henry A. Buckingham, a writer of some note, died in Brooklyn on the 31st ult., of cholera.

Wire-work, galvanized to prevent corrosion, is now substituted for laths in the ceilings of houses.

The Maine free territory resolutions which the Governor returned, have been passed by the House of Representatives by a very large vote. They had previously passed the Senate unanimously.

The British and Foreign Bible Society have distributed one hundred bibles to poor colored people.

The President the other day collected of the port of Newark applicant for the office, but deferred his appointment.

Dr. Robert Hare of Pennsylvania Gallatin of New York, Dr. Benj. Conneticut, and Washington New York, have been elected honorar Smithsonian Institute.

Notwithstanding all the labors and other philanthropists, it is estimated that seven million gallons of ardent spirits are consumed in the United States, and the whole country.

The 710,000 tons of water which pour over the precipice of Niagara carry away a foot of the cliff every year.

In the Senate of Maine on the 10th hour of last session was reported 15 to 10.

New Orleans, now is, undoubtedly the healthiest cities in the Union.

A Female College is about to be founded in Cincinnati.

So far the present year, the Bangor is 22 million feet short of sequence of the drought.

NOTICES

Father Mathew in D.

The County Society extends its friends of Total Abstinence, and to all of the towns in the County.

On this occasion a spontaneous assembly of Father Mathew from all towns in the County.

The meeting will be called to order at the forenoon.

Addresses will follow by numerous vocates of Total Abstinence.

At 1 o'clock P. M., the assembling refreshments.

At 2 o'clock P. M. the Pledge will be taken by Father Mathew.

EDWIN THOMPSON, Pres.

CHARLES MARSH, Secretary.

A meeting of the Union Board, the house of Mr. John Hardwick, EVENING, at eight o'clock, to discuss a full and prompt attendance is requested. JAMES M. WADE, S.

MORE FACTS AS TO DR. CO.

CENTRATED SYRUP OF S.

The severe suffering of Freeman place, was well known to me and I was induced to try the use of Dr. C.'s Concentrated Syrup of S.

After I had used it, I was greatly benefited, and have been troubled with the Liver Complaint for twelve years with an aggravated bowels and diarrhoea of the bowels, one dozen bottles of Dr. C.'s Syrup of S. has been fully restored me. No health I know of, even health of Dr. C. has been restored, and has been most valuable medicine, and has been the cause of my recovery, as I had medicine since commencing the use of it.

I know of several others in this city, and now are, taking this Syrup of S. with the most beneficial results. It is highly recommended by Dr. Knight and other eminent physicians.

POETRY.

LEXINGTON.

Slowly the mist o'er the meadow was creeping,
Bright on the dewy buds glistened the sun,
When from his couch, while his children were sleeping,
Rose the bold rebel and shouldered his gun.
Waving her golden veil
Over the silent date,
Blithe looked the cottage and spire;
Hushed was his parting sigh,
While from his noble eye
Flashed the last sparkle of liberty's fire.

On the smooth green where the fresh leaf is springing,
Calmly the first-born of glory are met;
Hark! the death-volley around them is ringing!
Look! with their life-blood the young grass is wet!
Faint is the feeble breath,
Murmuring low in death,
"Tell to our sons how their fathers have died," Nervous the iron hand,
Raised for its native land,
Lies by the weapon that gleams at its side.

Over the hill sides the wild knell is tolling,
From their far handlets the yeomanry come;
As through the storm-clouds the thunder-burst rolling Circles the beat of the musing drum.
Fast on the soldier's path
Darken the waves of wrath,
Long have they gathered and loud shall they fall;
Red glares the musket's flash,
Sharp rings the rifle's crash,
Blazing and clanging from thicket and wall.

Gaily the plume of the horseman was dancing,
Never to shadow his cold brow again;
Proudly at morning the war steed was prancing,
Reeking and fainting he drops on the rein;
Pale is the lip of scorn,
Voiceless the trumpet horn,
Torn is the silken-fringed red cross on high;
Many a belted breast
Low on the turf shall rest,
Ere the dark hunters the herd have passed by.

Snow-girdled crags where the hoarse wind is raving
Rocks where the weary floods murmur and wail,
Wilds where the fern by the furrow is waving,
Ruled with the echoes that roared on the gale;
Far as the tempest thrills
Over the darkened hills,
Far as the sunshine streams over the plain,
Poured by the tyrant hand,
Woke all the mighty land,
Girded for battle, from mountain to main.

Green be the graves where her martyrs are lying!
Shoulders and tombless they sunk to their rest,
While o'er their ashes the starry fold flying
Wraps the proud eagle they roused from his nest.
Borne on the northern pine,
Long o'er the foaming brine
Spread her board banner to storm and to sun;
Heaven keep her ever free,
Wide as o'er land and sea
Floats the fair emblem her heroes have won.

WHAT I LOVES.

I loves to talk of laughing girls,
I loves the smiles of widows,
I loves the croaking of green frogs
Among the marshy meadows.
But O! I loves them cruetters best Divided in the middle—
When their hind parts are nicely cooked
In butter on the griddle.
Well I does.
I loves the lily and the rose,
The laurel and the myrtle;
But O! I better loves by far
A whopping big mud turtle,
I loves 'em when I notions make,
To live on fancy wittles;
O, how I'd love one big enough
To fill a dozen kettles.
Well I would.

A TRUTH.

Fatal effects of luxury and ease,
We drink our poison, and we eat disease,
Indulge our senses at our season's cost,
Till sense is pain, and reason's hurt or lost.

ANECDOTES.

On Sterne's entering a coffee-room at York, a Mr. A. starting him full in the face, said, "he hated a parson?" Upon which Sterne replied—"And so, sir, does my dog, for as soon as I put on my gown and cassock, he falls a barking." "Indeed," replied A., "how long has he done so?" "Ever since he was a puppy, sir," answered Sterne, "and I still look upon him as one!"

A member of the Louisiana Legislature, some time ago, arose and said—"Sir, I am here, the proud representative of my constituents; I am here from the Parish of Assumption, and while I stand upon this floor I and Assumption are of a piece." "Yes," said an honorable opposite, "and you are the d—dest piece of Assumption that was ever heard of!"

An aristocratic Irishman, speaking of his native country, said it was an execrable place; in fact, the only thing worth owning in it was whiskey. "You mean to say, then," said a wagish friend, "that, with all her faults, you love her still?"

"The little darling—he did not strike Miss Smith's baby a purruss, did he? It was a mere accident, wasn't it, dear?" "Yes, mar, to be sure it was, and if he don't believe himself I'll crack him again."

"Why will you persist in using ardent spirits," said a Son of Temperance to one of his friends, "you had better aid us in a crusade against alcohol, and crush the traffic." "That's just what I'm doing," answered the toper. "No man does more to put down liquor than I do. I want to get the stuff out of the country."

"Well, farmer, you told us your woods was a good place for hunting; now we've tramped through it for three hours and found no game."
"Just so—well I calculate as a general thing, the less game there is, the more hunting you have."

French Patent Oil for Leather.

THIS French Patent Oil is prepared for Carriages, Harness, Boots, Shoes, and all articles that require a good polish on the surface; it will give any article of Leather

A MOST BRILLIANT APPEARANCE, and at the same time from its oily properties tends much to preserve. It will always be moist and pliant, at the same time free from grease when handled; there is not a spirit of such an oil invented that would give one-half the brilliancy to the leather to which this is applied, and will never get mouldy. It may be exposed to water or washed, and will not lose its brilliancy.

It is as well as all other articles made of leather, when polished with the above oil, will never be injured by rats or mice;—likewise dust has no effect on it, and it is not to be feared that any crust will settle on said leather preserved with the above oil. Instructions—Drop a few drops upon a piece of sponge, and all that is required is, to apply it lightly on the leather to obtain the finest lustre.

Price, 62 1/2 cts. per bottle, or $6 per dozen. Manufactured by Messrs. Salomon & Co. from Paris. For sale by
H. A. RANSOM & Co.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

United States

HEALTH INSURANCE COMPANY,
Office No. 17 State Street, Boston.

Incorporated by the Legislature of Massachusetts, May 10, 1848.

Capital, $50,000.

Directors.

Sam'l Aspinwall, Lemuel M. Barker, John Bigelow, Jonas Chickering, George Darracott, James Clark, Heman Lincoln, Samuel H. Jenks, Benj. Lamson, Joseph Lewis, Elijah Mears, S. P. Meiman, Joseph B. Pince, Thomas Restieaux, N. Sturtevant, Simeon P. Taylor, Charles H. White, D. W. Wiswell, Dan. Leverett, Charlestown. J. L. Lord, New York

President and Treasurer—JAMES CLARK.

Secretary—SAMUEL H. JENKS.

Consulting Physicians—D. Humphrey Storer, M. D., 14 Winter St.; Augustus A. Gould, M. D., 15 West St.

Superintendent of Agencies—Simeon P. Taylor.

THIS Institution insures both males and females against disease or accident, according to the rates specified in their tables. The former, by depositing a given sum yearly, may insure a return of four-fifths of that deposit, for each and every week within that year, during which he may be so disabled by illness as to be prevented from pursuing his usual occupation;—such allowance not to exceed four hundred dollars in any one year. Females, insured against all maladies common to both sexes, are entitled to return allowances equal to three-fourths of their yearly payments, for every week's sickness. Thus, an investment of $5 a year by the former, or of $5.33 by the latter, will, if deprived of health, secure to the party insured, a repayment of $4 per week.

An advance payment of not less than one dollar will be required of each applicant at the time of making the proposal; which sum, in case of rejection, will be refunded, or allowed in case of acceptance. The applicant is thereby insured, if the proposal be approved, for the term of thirty days, and no longer, unless the policy be taken, and the balance of premium paid within that time.

Persons insured by this Company become members thereof, so far as to entitle them to a proportion of all dividends of its annual profits, in the ratio of their respective premiums, and according to the duration of their policies.

The renewal of any policy may be secured, on notice given to the Secretary within three months of expiration, and on furnishing proof of sound health at the date of such notice.

For rates of insurance and other information, apply to the Agents in this town.

Encourage your Own.

To the People of Quincy—
THE following is a well known motto, and strictly true!

"That County or Town that gives the most liberal encouragement to its own manufactures of every kind is well known to thrive, and increase in wealth and population."

There are a few interesting facts, of which we wish to remind you, and which we are inclined to think have slipped from the memory of some, and which it will be for your advantage as well as ours to remember.

1st. That at the QUINCY BOOKSTORE you will find all the

SCHOOL BOOKS

in use in this and the neighboring towns.

2d. That at the same place you will find every kind of

Blank Account Book,

RECORD & MEMORANDUM BOOK.

3d. That there you will find a great assortment of Miscellaneous, Juvenile and Toy Books.

4th. That there you will find all kinds of STATIONERY.

5th. That there you will find an innumerable variety of

FANCY GOODS.

6th. That all the above will be sold at the very Lowest Market Prices.

7th. That we are entirely disinterested when we say that you will be much better satisfied with your selves and your bargains if you trade at home, in preference to "out of town."

8th. That there you will find a GOOD LIBRARY where you can procure reading on reasonable terms.

9th. That the Proprietors are agents for all the popular MAGAZINES, receiving the subscriptions themselves and furnishing the numbers on their own responsibility, free of any expense. Many have forgotten this of late, preferring to subscribe of some travelling agent, to one in their own town.

10th. That they RE-BIND old Books, Pamphlets, Periodicals, Music, etc., "as cheap as they can afford to and as quick as anybody."

These things we wish to call to your memory, because while we have been moving on in a quiet kind of a way, you seem partly to have forgotten the old place, thinking perhaps that we did not keep up with the times in the variety of our goods and also in price.

Our rule, like that of many others, is, "quick sales and small profits," therefore call in and we will supply you most satisfactorily.

C. GILL & Co.,

QUINCY BOOKSTORE,
Hancock Street, Quincy.

MISCELLANY.

HAVING BAD NEIGHBORS.

"So you have bought the pleasant farm where Mr. Dalton used to live," said Mrs. Emory to Mrs. Austin. "It is a pretty place, but after all I shall not envy you for there will be the Watsons right under your elbow, and worse neighbors you never found. Watson you know spends all he can get for liquor, and his wife is little better than herself; indeed, some say if she was the woman she should be her husband would be a better man. And their children, the pests of the neighborhood—brought up to idleness and mischief, they bid fair to perpetuate their parents' characters."

"Poor children!" said Mrs. Austin mournfully. "What better can you expect of them than that they will perpetuate their parents' characters, unless there be a redeeming influence cast around them. Their poor mother has much to harden her heart. She was an orphan cast out on the world in infancy. Her heart never unfolded the buds of its affections beneath the genial smiles of parental love. Every thing in her that was good was checked and blasted by the evil influences that surrounded her. How can we expect one to be good and kind, who never knew what kindness was herself. We do not know; Mrs. Emory, what we should have been if our fate had been like hers."

"True," replied Mrs. Emory, "but it does seem as if she might know enough to let her neighbors' property alone; you know they say she will steal."

"She don't know that she ought not to steal. But you and I ought to thank heaven, that strong as we think our principles to be they have not yet been tried by temptations like hers. We do not know what it is to be hungry and cold, and to see our little ones shivering about us, while our neighbors have enough and to spare."

"Very well," said Mrs. Emory, rather indignantly. "I shall see how you like to have your clothes line and your fruit trees robbed every now and then."

"That will be very unpleasant if it occurs," was the quiet reply. "But I believe that society is guilty for a great deal of the mischief it suffers from such persons. They are educated in poverty and vice. No smile of love falls on their cheerless childhood—no kind voice warns them of the evil that surrounds their path—no kind hand is extended to raise them up when they are falling; but they are often repelled with aversion and contempt by those who profess to be Christians and philanthropists."

"You have singular notions, Mrs. Austin," rejoined her friend. "For myself, I must confess I cannot help feeling an aversion for such people, wishing them as far off as possible."

A few days after the above conversation, Mr. and Mrs. Austin took possession of their new home. They were humble, unpretending people but they were Christians and they had learned to believe it their duty to imitate the example of their master who came to seek and save that which was lost. They were not among those whose sympathies are inactive, when excited by the miseries which pass before their eyes.

They had entered upon a sphere which was to give a trial to their patience, and an opportunity for the exercise of their Christian benevolence. As soon as they were settled, Mrs. Austin called on the Watsons. It was not without a feeling of loathing that she entered their ruinous hovel, but she was resolved to become acquainted with them, and if possible to do them good. The children, poor little dirty half naked creatures, ran away to hide when she entered, and Mrs. Austin with a look of surprise rose up and offered her a broken chair.

"We have just come into the place," she said, "and I am anxious to become acquainted with my neighbors and have taken the liberty to call."

"I am much obliged," said Mrs. Watson, "people seldom take so much notice of us." Mrs. Austin kindly inquired respecting her health and found that the poor woman was far from being well. The children began to creep around her. She displayed a handful of apples which she took from her pocket and they soon gathered around her. She gave each an apple and patted their curly heads with kind and gentle words. The little creatures looked wildly at her as if unable to comprehend the cause of such unwonted kindness.

When the kind lady rose to depart, she asked Mrs. Watson to let Mary a child of seven years old, accompany her home, that she might send her back with some medicine. The child sprang forward with a cry of pleasure, and placing her hand in Mrs. Austin's, looked affectionately in her face; then starting back she looked at her mother, who she remembered had not given her consent. Mrs. W. told her she might go but promised her a whipping if she was not back soon.

Mrs. Austin took the child by the hand and departed. It was a cold day in November, and the wind fluttered poor Mary's frock, and blew back the tangled curls from her naked brow. Mrs. Austin tied her handkerchief over her head.

"Are not your feet cold dear?" she said as she looked down and saw that she had no shoes on.

"Yes ma'am," said Mary, "but mother says we shall get no shoes this winter, for father spends all he can get for drink."

They reached home, and Mrs. Austin found a hood, a pair of shoes, and a shawl for Mary, and some medicine for her mother.

The child had never been so happy before as she was when she tripped home that night. She was not only delighted with the presents she had received, but the kind words and looks of her new friend had fallen like sunshine on her little heart.

When Mr. Austin came home, his wife informed him of the call she had made. "The situation of the family is truly deplorable," she added; "is there nothing that we can do for them?"

"Indeed, I do not know," replied her husband. "If there is I doubt not you will think of it. Watson is terribly besotted. I met him to-night reeling home probably to abuse his family—and yet they say when he is sober he is a fine hearted peaceable man."

"He has a good trade, and if he could be prevailed on to work without drinking he might support his family well. His poor indolent and hopeless wife; but if she could see prospects of better days, she would no doubt be changed."

"To be sure," replied Austin thoughtfully, "he has a good trade, and was once considered the best workman in town but he has become so intemperate that none will employ him. I don't know what supports his family—they must often be in wretched destitution."

"Wretched destitution indeed!" exclaimed his wife. "And now I think how we can help them. Employ him, and perhaps by keeping him away from temptations and encouraging him, we may help him to break off his brutal habits."

"That is a good idea, Jane, and I will see him tomorrow, and try to engage him."

The next morning the Watsons were not a little surprised to see Mr. Austin enter their dwelling. His heart grew sick at the prospect of sin and misery around. The shivering children were eagerly pressing round a table on which there was no food except a few potatoes. The father was standing at the shelf preparing his morning potatoes, and Mrs. W., with uncombed hair and dirty face, stood in a menacing attitude, upbraiding him with loud and angry words.

"Good morning, sir," replied the poor man, with a hiccup. "I don't feel well this morning, and I was about to take some bitters."

"Don't take them—they will do you no good and I want to talk to you on business."

Watson looked at him with surprise, and pushing the glass from him, seated himself to hear what he had to say.

"I wish you to work on my house," continued Mr. A. "We have several unfinished rooms, and if you will come I will pay you at Mr. Foster's store, where you may obtain groceries and clothes for your family."

There was something so different in the kind polite manner of Mr. Austin, from the rude contempt with which he was usually treated that he felt his heart expand. He was again a man among men.

The bargain was soon closed, and the next morning true to his promise, Watson came to his work. He commenced but his hand was unsteady and his manner restless. Mr. Austin noticed it, and kept him in cheerful conversation. Before noon he asked for cider, but was told he could have none; but Mrs. Austin sent him a mug of hot ginger beer, which he drank eagerly, for his thirst was intense. He kept at his work, but evidently suffered much for the want of his accustomed stimulant.

When night came, Mr. Austin took him to the store and paid him for his work in some articles necessary for his family; and with kind encouraging words bade him good night.

When he got home, and exhibited a large salt fish, and a bag of flour, the children shouted for joy. It takes but little to make children happy. Alas! that this little is so often denied them! Mrs. W.'s face wore an expression of pleasure quite unnatural to her, while she went to work to prepare supper.

"Dear papa," said little Mary, pressing close to his side. "I wish you would always work for Mr. Austin if you would I am sure Johnny would get some shoes."

A tear came into the father's eye, as he looked upon his half naked children, and witnessed the joy which one day's labor conferred upon them. He placed the child upon his knee, and kissed her cheeks with parental tenderness. His past life came up before him. He remembered his own neglected and hopeless childhood; for he was a drunkard's child. He saw that the evil habits which he then contracted, were working the ruin of himself and family; and the question came home in his heart, whether he should entail a like curse upon his posterity, and make the little ones around him miserable outcasts from society, like himself. He resolved that for one week he would not drink. He laid down on his pillow that night with a feeling of satisfaction which he had not experienced before for years.

The next day Mrs. Austin sent for little Mary to come and spend the day with her, and take care of the baby. Poor little Mary! she was not pretty. How could she be, with that cold hungry look, and those dirty rags about her! She was not good; for she had seen nothing but evil all her days. The air she had breathed in the cradle was polluted with the breath of drunkenness and blasphemy. Yet to Mrs. Austin she was an interesting child; for she was gentle and affectionate, and her little shut up heart seemed to open and expand, when a smile of love fell on it, as the convulsions unfolded its blossoms to the rays of the rising sun.

Mrs. Austin washed her face and combed her hair. She had pretty yellow curls and a fair complexion, and the kind lady putting on her clean apron, thought her really beautiful. The woe begone expression had vanished from her pale face; and her blue eyes sparkled with delight. She seemed for the first time to enjoy the buoyancy of spirit which belongs to children. All day long she was busy as a bee, and when night came, and her father's work was done, she went to Mrs. Austin to have her apron taken off.

"Would you like to keep it?" said the lady. "Oh, yes ma'am," said the child, a tear coming into her eye, "I should like to keep it very much but it is not mine."

"You may keep it then, and be sure you keep it clean."

Sweet and happy were her thoughts that night as she tripped home by her father's side, and when she lay down on her bed, a princess might have envied her the beautiful dreams that filled her little head. Thus day after day passed away—the work on Mr. Austin's house went on, and not less visible among the Watsons. The children were comfortably clothed and sent to school, and their mother, with renewed health and courage, sat about cleaning the cottage. The broken windows were repaired a few articles of furniture purchased and their home assumed an appearance of comfort, which it never wore before.

But the work was at last done and paid for, and poor Watson's heart sank within him as he left the house. His appetite had been checked and he tasted the delights of industry; he felt weak, and he hated to leave the roof where he had seen so much of purity and peace, and go forth among his former associates. He knew their power over him, and he feared they might lead him into his old habits, and make him again as miserable as he had been.

It was with such thoughts as these that he sat by his fireside the evening after he finished his work, when a gentleman entered and respectfully inquired if he was Mr. Watson the carpenter. Being answered in the affirmative, he said that Mr. Austin had recommended him as a good workman, and he wished to employ him for several months.

The offer was received with joy and the reformed inebriate was again placed under circumstances favorable to his good purpose; and not long after he was induced to join a temperance society of which he has ever since been a respectable member.

A year has passed away since the first commencement of our story, and Mrs. Emory came one day to visit her friend Mrs. Austin. In the course of the afternoon, a well dressed and decent looking woman came in leading a little child. Great was the surprise of Mrs. Emory on being introduced to this woman, to find that she was no other than Mrs. Watson. When she rose to depart, Mrs. Austin said to her, "If you can spare little Mary, I wish you would send her here this afternoon, I want her to help me."

"Yes indeed," was the reply. "Mary shall come, for she is never so happy as when she is here."

When she was gone, Mrs. A. said to her friend, "You remember your fears that we should have a great deal of trouble with those Watsons but there is not a family in the neighborhood that has afforded us more pleasure."

"This is strange indeed. Mrs. Watson is so changed that I did not recognize her. I am sure I should know her in her former rags and dirt."

"The whole family are changed since Watson left off drinking. They are industrious and honest as any people among us; but you will soon see little Mary, who is one of the sweetest children in the world."

"But tell me what has brought this mighty change to pass? Are you the Magician whose magic wand has brought around this great revolution?"

"I believe there has been no magic employed," said Mrs. A. smiling. "We have given them little except kind words, and a good deal of kind advice."

"Well," said Mrs. Emory, "you never had bad neighbors, and I don't think you ever will have if you have made good neighbors of the Watsons."

TREATMENT OF CHILDREN.

As the child grows up, it is naturally desired by every anxious parent that it should be healthy and robust, but it very commonly happens that the reverse of that course best adapted to secure this important object is pursued. From an erroneous idea that the children of the poor are characteristically hardy and healthy, we frequently see parents inflicting upon their offspring certain of the conditions of poverty in the hope of assuring the same result. Hence the display of little naked calves and bare shivering necks that we see parading our streets and public walks under the charge of servents or nursery-governesses, even in the coldest and bitterest of our severe winters. All this originates in a delusion. In the first place it is not true that the children of the poor are more healthy and robust than those of the rich, but rather the reverse. Any one who will take the trouble to inspect the registers of mortality, will find that a far greater proportion of the children of the poor die during infancy and childhood, than of the rich or middle classes. Hunger, want of decent clothing, exposure, and semi-starvation, make dreadful havoc amongst the squalid and ragged bands of children that swarm in our large towns. And in the second place, it is not true that exposure to unnecessary hardship in early youth is the likeliest means of insuring a robust and hardy condition at a later period of life, but again the reverse. A wise parent will take every precaution, while avoiding all effeminate coddling, petting, and indulgence, to protect his offspring from sudden and violent changes of temperature from heat and cold, from damp and dirt, as from the immediate causes of disease. It is the absence of all severe effects from such agencies as these which can only be secured by continual care and attention to the personal comfort of the child, that is the surest means of securing a good sound constitution. The longer the period during infancy that children can be preserved from the attack of any disease, no matter what it may be, the likelier they are to grow up in sound and robust state of body. It is during entire freedom of morbid action of every kind, and while every breath and every motion is fraught with pleasure and delight, that the constitution acquires strength and hardiness—not, as the folly of too many parents would lead us to suppose, while the tender limbs are shivering from contact with the frosty air or shrinking from the blast of winter. That numbers of the poor and wretched do eventually arrive at a robust state of vigor and manliness, I am not going to deny; but these are exceptions to the general rule, and plainly owe their good fortune, not to the elements of distress and suffering amid which they were reared, but rather to that native vigor of constitution which has enabled them to surmount and survive them all.—Thomas James, M. D.

AN ALLIGATOR STORY.

The following is a strange account of a Lake full of alligators in the East Indies, taken from an Anglo Indian paper:

"We made an excursion lately to what is here called the Muggar Tank, a lake of alligators, which lies in a small and beautifully situated grove of trees, surrounded by a range of low hills, about nine miles from Kurrachee. After having breakfasted, we proceeded to the spot where these hideous monsters were congregated. They are held sacred by the natives of the country, and are regularly fed by the contributions of devotees. The tank is more like an overflow meadow than a lake, having deep channels intersecting each other, and is literally alive with these huge 'muggars,' some basking on the knolls and ridges, others floating on the surface of the deeper water. They were of all sizes, from a foot or two to twenty-five feet in length, and bulky in proportion. Having purchased a kid, and cut it up on the banks, there was a universal opening of their capacious jaws, which they kept distended in expectation of having a piece of flesh thrown into them, and are too lazy to make any further demonstration. The native keeper who feeds them then began calling to them when they came one by one lazily along, and waddling on to the shore, each took what was given to him. The rapidity with which the poor kid vanished, head and heels, was truly astonishing. They know the keeper quite well; and if any one should take up what is not thrown to him the keeper makes him drop it by striking him over the snout with his stick. The jaws are certainly dreadful clasp-traps, and the crash they make when brought together is horrible, crushing the bones even of the head of their prey like so much mush. It is probable, setting aside motives of superstition, that the inhabitants now find it necessary to feed these voracious monsters, for were the supplies to be stopped, they would become dangerous neighbors. In fact, they do at times pick up and devour a stray child left on the banks by accident or design. There are here three hot springs, one of which supplies the tank, and is of a temperature of about sixty-six degrees. The two others have a temperature of one hundred and eighty degrees. The water issues from the rock as pure as crystal, and in great abundance."

NAPOLEON.

"When Napoleon for the second time quitted France, it was asserted that he ought to have buried himself under the ruins of his last battle. Lord Byron in his satirical ode against Napoleon, says:

"To die a prince—or live a slave.
Thy choice is most ignobly brave."

This was an innocent estimate of the hope still kindling in a soul accustomed to dominion and thirsting after the future. Lord Byron imagined that the dictator of kings had abdicated his fame with his sword, that he was about to die away in utter oblivion. Lord Byron should have known that the destiny of Napoleon was a muse, like all other great destinies; his muse knew how to change an abortive catastrophe, into a sudden turn of fortune, which would have revived and imparted a fresh youth to his hero. The solitude of Napoleon, in his exile and in his tomb, has thrown another kind of spell over a brilliant memory. Alexander did not die in sight of Greece; he disappeared amid the pomp of distant Babylon; Bonaparte did not close his eyes in the presence of France; he passed away in the gorgeous horizons of the torrid zone. The man who had shone himself in such powerful reality vanished like a dream, his life which belonged to history, co-operated in the poetry of his death. He now sleeps forever, like a hermit on a prairie, beneath a willow, in a narrow valley. Surrounded by steep rocks, at the extremity of a lonely path. The depth of the silence which presses upon him can only be compared to the vastness of the tumult which had surrounded him. Nations are absent; their throning has retired. The bird of the tropics, harnessed to the car of the sun, as Buffon magnificently expresses it, speeding his flight downwards from the planet of light, rests alone for a moment over ashes, the weight of which has shaken the equilibrium of the globe. Bonaparte crossed the ocean to repair to his final exile, regardless of that beautiful sky which delighted Columbus, Vasco de Gama, and Camoens; stretched upon the ship's stern, he perceived not that unknown constellations were sparkling over his head; his powerful glance for the first time encountered their rays. What to him were stars which he had never seen from his bivouacs, and which had never shone over his empire? Nevertheless, not one of them has failed to fulfill its destiny: one half of the firmament spread its light over his cradle; the other half was reserved to illuminate his tomb."

Good Advice. Never cut a piece out of a newspaper until you have looked on the other side, where you may find something more valuable than that which you intended to appropriate.

Never put salt in your soup before you have tasted it. I have known gentlemen very much enraged by doing so.

Never burn your fingers if you can help it. People burn their fingers every day, when they might have escaped it if they had been careful.

Let no gentleman ever quarrel with a woman. If you are troubled with her, retreat. If she abuse you, be silent. If she tear your cloak off, give her your coat. If she box your ears, bow. If she tear your eyes out, feel your way to the door—but fly.

If you form one of a large mixed company, and a diffident stranger enter the room and take his seat among you, say something to him for heaven's sake, even though it be only "Fine evening, sir." Do not let him sit bolt upright, suffering all the apprehensions and agonies of bashfulness, without any relief. Ask him how he has been; tell him you know his friends, and so on; any thing will do to break the icy stiffness in which very decent fellows are sometimes frozen in their debut before a new circle.

GEOLOGICAL DEFINITIONS.—The primitive earths are four; clay, sand, lime, and magnesia. Clay, is called by geologists, alumina, alumine or argillaceous earth. Sand, is called siliceous earth, or earth of flints. Lime, as it exists in the soil, is commonly called calcareous earth. The term calcareous is not properly applied to any soil unless it will effervesce with acids. Each of these earths answer a determinate and specific purpose in the economy and growth of plants; and the perfection of soil lies in a mixture of the whole.

Basin of the whole.—The primitive earths which enters into its composition. Vegetable matter. All Vegetable substances in decaying or rotting state. Animal matter. All animal substances in a putrifying state. Organic matter. A term applicable to both animal and vegetable substances in a putrifying state.

Vegetable mould.—The earthly remains of vegetable substances which have either grown or decayed on the soil, or have been conveyed thither in the progress of cultivation. Loam, is a combination of vegetable mould with primitive earths. Lime, is a substance consisting of lime, with a small portion of clay, and some peat, with a marine sand and animal remains. It is useful as manure, and is distinguished by shell, clay and stone marle.

CONDENSED ARGUMENT. A very celebrated Scotch divine says: "The world we inhabit must have had an origin; that origin must have consisted in a cause; that cause must have been intelligent; that intelligence must have been efficient; that efficiency must have been ultimate; that ultimate power must have been supreme; and that which always was and is supreme, we know by the name of God."

FEMALE CHARACTER.

If the female who flirts and plays the coquette could but realize the detriment to her reputation which is sure to follow upon her thoughtless levity, there would be less cause for, and less actual coquetry, among the fair sex, than one meets with, at this time, in every day life! Could every lovely woman feel and believe how differently the sensible of the opposite sex enjoy the society and smiles of the sober minded and well-informed female, as compared with the silly, giddy, heartless "belle" of the day—how different would be the deportment of thousands of society, who are now reared only for display and coquetry.

And yet, such is the present formation of society, that woman is not over-cautious in regard to her good name; in the above particular. She has been taught the art of aiming to please the other sex, and she flirts, and chats, and smiles, and frowns with but one object—that of rivalling some other "belle" in the coquetry where she flirts for the time being; and this is fashion. Well and truly does a contemporary remark that "to woman, reputation is indeed a jewel so intimately connected with her true happiness, that to barter it for any consideration, were a loss eventually irreparable."

There is a certain something in the ordination of human affairs, in the organization of society, which demands from the female sex the highest tone of purity and strictest observance of duties pertaining to woman's sphere. There has always existed a marked difference in the measure of reproach cast upon the sexes for similar faults. Woman must suffer in the dust, she may be cast down in an instant, from the loftiest eminence, for trivial faults, while man walks proudly upright, and penetrates the highest circles, though covered with his vices. Reputation is all to woman, yet a breath may soil it. Would she preserve the priceless jewel, she cannot be too cautious in her deportment, or in choosing her associates. By all means should she avoid giving encouragement to a long train of different admirers.

ENLIGHTENING AN ENGLISHMAN. Campbell, a contractor and engineer on the Vermont Central Railroad, says the Boston Post, is a man of considerable humor, is intensely patriotic in his views and feelings, and take him for all in all, "a decided trump." Falling in one day, at a public house, with an English baronet, who, in company with his valet, was travelling through the country "in search of information," C. determined to give him some. Having learned, by inquiry of the landlord, which was the "master" and which was the "man," he whispered to his companions who sat near him, "There, boys, is a genuine, live sir—let's enlighten him!" and immediately fell to haranguing on "the great and growing prospects of this immense and rapidly enlarging country." "Why, sir," said the baronet, turning to the speech maker, "do I understand you to say that you mean to add, Canada to your possessions?" "To be sure we do," said Campbell; "we must have it, you see!" "I don't quite see that," said "my lord"; but, pray, how far do you propose to extend your boundaries?" "Why, sir, we're pretty much settled in this fashion," said C. earnestly; "South, by all the water there is round Cape Horn—west, by the Pacific Ocean—east, by the Atlantic (outside of Cuba, mind you)—and north, by the regions of eternal congelation!" The baronet gazed at the calm face of the speaker for an instant, made a brief "men" in his note-book, and retired to his chamber.

HE HAS NO TRADE. Many a young man is ruined by not fixing his mind on some regular business or pursuit, because he has in prospect a rich legacy from his parents. It was remarked by a lawyer, in his argument to the jury, in the case of a young man who had broken the laws of his country—"He has no trade; he was rioting in idleness; contracting habits of a depraved tendency, such as are ever attendant on idleness." Is not this the secret of the fall of many a noble youth? He has no regular business to follow and so he spends his time among the vicious and abandoned, until he is completely lost to virtuous society. It would be better for parents to give their children trades, or bring them up to mercantile pursuits, even though they have property sufficient to give them all a handsome support through life. A man with something to do, will be kept from a thousand temptations, into which he would fall, if left to wander about the streets—attend theatres and visit fashionable places of vicious resort. If rich as Cæsar, our advice is, keep your children employed. They better have no moments of leisure than be in a situation where time hangs heavy on their hands.

EARL CORNWALLIS. Charles Marquis Cornwallis was born in 1738. He was educated at Westminster and Cambridge, and succeeded to his titles in 1761. He was a conspicuous British commander in our Revolution, particularly in the southern States, and was doubtless the ablest and most active general which the British government sent here. He surrendered, with his whole army, to Washington at Yorktown, on the 19th of October, 1781. From 1786 to 1792, he was Governor-General of British India. He was Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, from 1798 till 1801, and was very efficient in bringing order out of confusion there. He was again appointed Governor-General of India, in 1804, and died there in October of that year, aged sixty six.

WORTH REMEMBERING. He who is passionate and hasty, is generally honest. It's your cool, dissembling hypocrite, of whom you should beware. There is no deceit about a bull dog. It's only the cur that sneaks up and bites you when your back is turned. Again, we say, beware of the man who has cant in his looks.

PAYING CASH FOR A SERMON. The following incident recently occurred in a church at Saratoga Springs:—Rev. Mr. Locke had just finished his first head, when a man near the door rose and walked down the aisle directly in front of the pulpit, then deliberately and politely handed up in front of a bank note to the Rev. speaker, who quietly received it, and went on with his discourse. "Who? What? Why?" asked excited curiosity in the minds of the puzzled audience. Quite a number, and among them ladies not a few, lingered after the benediction, to obtain a "solution of the mystery. It seemed that the man was a son of the late Judge —, a generous fellow, but accustomed to look too much 'on the wine when red.' He was heard to say to his friends near, 'I like that man's preaching; it's worth the cash down; I don't believe he'll half get paid for it, so here goes a picture for him.' Whereupon he rose, and with a "brick in his hat" and a bill in his hand, he made his way through the wondering congregation to the speaker, cashed over, and quietly returned to his seat.

LEGERDEMAIN. Some time ago a professor of legerdemain performed before an audience in an English village, which was principally composed of colliers. After "astonishing the natives" with various tricks—metamorphosing wine into water, he asked the loan of a half penny from one of his admirers. A collier with a little hesitation, handed out the coin which the juggler speedily exhibited, as he said, transformed into a guinea. "An' is that my bawbee?" exclaimed the collier. "Undoubtedly," answered juggler. "Let's see it," said the collier; and turning it round and round in examination with an extacy of delight, thanked the juggler for his kindness, and putting it in his pocket, said, "I've warrant ye'll not turn it into a bawbee again."

THINGS LOST FOREVER. Lost wealth may be regained by a course of industry—the wreck of health repaired by temperance—forgotten knowledge restored by study—alienated friendship soothed into forgiveness—even forfeited reputation won back by penitence and virtue. But who ever again looked upon his vanished ed hours—recalled his slighted years, and stamped them with wisdom—or effaced from Heaven's record the fearful blot of a wasted life?—Mrs. Sigourney.

HOW TO KEEP A STOVE BRIGHT. Make a weak alum-water, and mix your 'British Lustre' with it, perhaps two tea spoons to a gill of alum water. Let the stove be cold, brush it with the mixture, then take a dry brush and dry lustre, and rub the stove till it is perfectly dry. Should any part, before polishing, become so dry as to look gray, moisten it with a wet brush, and proceed as before.

GLUTTONY. This is a sin of sombre dye, and of too general prevalence. Many fine people go to church, pray for health, and then hasten home to gorge and gluttonize. Their families are stupid and lascivious, and linger out a diseased and useless life, or drop suddenly into the abyss of destruction. Then comes the ostentatious funeral, and lugubrious talk about the "mysterious providence." What is mysterious? That a miserable thing of condiments, jellies, lust and laziness, having violated all the laws of our being, at length ceased its contemptible existence!—Magoon.

"BRUCE'S ADDRESS." "Scots wha hae wi' Wallace bled," is known from the king to the meanest of his subjects. This dithyrambic was composed on horseback, in riding in the middle of a tempest, over the wildest Galloway moor, in company with a Mr. Syme, who, observing the poet's looks, forbore to speak—judiciously enough—for a man composing "Bruce's Address" might be unsafe to trifle with. Doubtless this sterner hymn was singing itself as he formed it, through the soul of Burns, but to the external ear it should be sung with the throat of a whirlwind. So long as there is warm blood in the heart of a Scotchman, it will move in fierce thrills under this war ode, the best, we believe, that was ever written by any pen.

CONVERSATION. The art of conversation is the art of hearing as well as of being heard. Some of the best talkers are, on this account, the worst company; and some who are very indifferent but very great talkers, are as bad. It is sometimes wonderful to see how a person, who has been entertaining or tiring a company by the hour together, drops his countenance as if he had been shot, or seized with a sudden lock-jaw the moment any one interposes a single observation.

EARLY RISING. The stress laid upon early rising is preposterous. If we have anything to do when we get up, we shall not lie in bed, to a certainty. Thomson, the poet, was found late in bed by Dr. Burns, and asked why he had not risen earlier. The Scotchman wisely answered, "I had no motive, young man." What, indeed, had he to do after writing the Seasons, but to dream out the rest of his life, or employ it in writing the Castle of Indolence!—Hazlitt's Table Talk.

ORIGIN OF LESS CONSEQUENCE THAN DESTINY. When Philip Henry, the father of the celebrated commentator, sought the hand of the only daughter and heiress of Mrs. Mathew in marriage, an objection was made by her father, who admitted that he was a gentleman, a scholar, and an excellent preacher, but he was a stranger, and "they did not even know where he came from." "True," said the daughter, who had well weighed the excellent qualities and graces of the stranger, "but I know where he is going, and I should like to go with him," and they walked life's pilgrimage together.

How TO RUIN A SON. 1. Let him have his own way. 2. Allow him free use of money. 3. Suffer him to roam where he pleases on the Sabbath. 4. Give him full access to wicked companions. 5. Call him to no account of his evenings. 6. Furnish him with no stated employment.

BETRAY NO SECRETS. He who betrays another's secrets, because he has quarrelled with him, was never worthy of the sacred name of friend. A breach of kindness on one side will not justify a breach of trust on the other.

CURIOUS FACT. One pint of water converted into steam fills a space of nearly two thousand pints, and raises the piston of a steam engine with the force of many thousand pounds. It may afterwards be condensed, and reappear as a pint of water.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, AUG. 18, 1849.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Boston, August 16th, 1849.

MR. GREEN—having an hour to spend, I send you the news of the week up to twelve o'clock to-day, received by the different mails, etc.

The late arrivals at New York, and New Orleans from Chagres via Panama, has put us in possession of the latest news from San Francisco and the gold mines. Merchandise, provisions, and clothing are now selling there at low prices. Mechanics, laborers and artisans of all kinds, get high prices—from fifteen to twenty dollars per day, and laborers one per hour. Great prices are obtained for buildings and rents, and lumber sells for five hundred dollars per thousand feet. Several vessels have arrived from the states, and the fleet now on the ocean, and arrived since July 24, will reach near three hundred, with a large number of passengers and an immense amount of merchandise. It is stated that some eighty thousand persons are now at the mines and that there is gold enough for all comers.

The cholera in New York, and other Southern and Western Cities is declining, and in this City it is confined mostly to foreigners and to those of intemperate habits. Yesterday there were seventeen cases only and up to twelve o'clock to-day, only about twelve.

General Taylor has recovered from his indisposition and is now in the western part of Pennsylvania. He is received with great respect and enthusiasm by all parties along the route. A Committee of our Legislature of which Hon. Joseph Bell, President of the Senate, is chairman, held a preparatory meeting yesterday to receive the President in old Massachusetts, in a proper manner. He will be here about the 1st of September.

By the steamer Hibernia we learn that the Hungarians have gained further victories over the Austrians and by the last accounts have an army of one hundred and sixty thousand men in the field. These Hungarians fight for Freedom and will be successful; they are cheered on by the republican world and must triumph.

Russia is in trouble at home. A powerful conspiracy has just come to light and partly put down by the Government. Two hundred and eighty of the conspirators have been arrested at St. Petersburg, the Russian Capitol. Their object is the overthrow of Nicholas and the Russian dynasty and to found a Republic in its place.

Rome is still in possession of the French. A great desire exists with the people of Italy to destroy the temporal Power of the Pope and to let him retain his Spiritual position. Church and State united have existed quite long enough and must be broken asunder, and the sooner it is done the better.

News about home is rather meagre. There is a rumor about town of a rupture between our Senators, Daniel Webster and John Davis. More anon. Capt. Josiah Sturges, of the Cutter Hamilton, is recovering from his late indisposition. The matter of armed expeditions fitting out in this country are supposed to be in aid of the spirits of Freedom in Canada, not after Cuba as alleged. Business is rather quiet in this City, many of the merchants, brokers and fashionable being at the different watering places along shore. We have had no new appointments at the Custom House or at the Post Office for the last fortnight.

From your friend,

MOUNT WOLLASTON.

MINNESOTA ELECTION. The Galena Advertiser of the 4th inst. announces the re-election of Hon. Henry H. Sibley, as delegate to Congress from Minnesota, without opposition.

FIRE. On Thursday morning, a small wooden house near the Observatory, in Cambridge, was burnt to the ground. It was occupied by Mr. John Linton who lost forty dollars in money and a new suit of clothes. The building was insured for three hundred dollars in Brighton.

ARRIVED. Col. Abbott of Andover, late of the Massachusetts Regiment, with about twenty others, arrived at San Diego, California, towards the last of June. They took the overland route from the Rio Grande, and found it less difficult than they expected.

RIOT AT MONTREAL. A serious riot occurred on the 15th inst. Shots were fired by the police and one man killed. It is feared there will be more disturbances.

HENRY CLAY. Mr. Clay left Saratoga on Thursday for Newport, where he probably arrived the next day.

LABORS FOR THE PRISONER. Rev. John M. Spear, long and favorably known for his philanthropic labors, has left at our office a little pamphlet setting forth his labors and the object of them, how he is sustained, etc. Mr. Spear is not the agent of any society, but, to use his own language, "disregarding all sectarian lines, party divisions, national boundaries, and complexional differences, is endeavoring to do from day to day the work that our heavenly Father calls him to perform." During the year just closed, he has traveled five thousand miles, delivered eighty eight discourses in this State, distributed gratuitously nearly twelve hundred publications, been bail for prisoners to the amount of eighteen hundred dollars, furnished food, etc, to nearly three hundred persons, and made seventy visits to jails, penitentiaries, etc, in different States. He has received from friends to the work $1,141 15, and has expended $1,111 10. Any one desirous of assisting in such a noble work cannot place their donations in more faithful hands than that of Mr. Spear, whose address is No. 2 1-2 Central Court, Boston.

DEATH OF ALBERT GALLATIN. The venerable Albert Gallatin died at Astoria, Long Island, on Sunday last, in the eighty ninth year of his age. His name and life are intimately connected with the history of the country for the last half century. He was a native of Geneva, Switzerland, and came to this country during the revolution.

INDIANA ELECTION. The democratic candidate for Governor has been elected by about eight thousand majority. There will be a democratic majority of eight or ten in the Legislature. The members of Congress are all democrats except McLaughlin, whig, and Julian, free soil.

WATER FOR EAST BOSTON. The Board of Mayor and Aldermen of Boston have decided to carry the Cochituate water to East Boston.

A REMITTANCE. Sixteen ounces of gold dust were recently received from a young man formerly employed at Oak Hall, Boston, being his first remittance to his mother of his gold collecting at the mines in California. Eleven dollars and sixty cents postage was paid on it.

REVIEWS. The fourth Brigade of the Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, will muster at Salem on the 30th and 31st insts. The review and encampment of the fifth Brigade will take place at Northampton on the 19th and 20th of September.

VALUATION OF ROXBURY. The valuation of estates in the city of Roxbury, by the assessors, the present year is $13,476,600; the number of polls 3992. Last year the valuation was $13,476,600, polls 3999.

FATAL ACCIDENT. At Durham, (N. H.) on the 7th inst, John O. Odell, a young man of much promise, while preparing to go a gunning, and while loading his gun in the barn, let the butt slip down across the sill, as he rammed the charge. On bringing the piece up, the hammer caught on the sill and discharged the contents through his side. He lingered in extreme pain for twenty four hours, and died.

ALABAMA ELECTION. Two whigs and five democrats are elected to Congress. The whigs have carried the Senate by one majority; the democrats the House by four majority.

FROM WASHINGTON. It is reported that Mr. Clifford, Minister to Mexico, has been recalled and R. P. Letcher of Kentucky appointed to succeed him. Joseph G. Marshall, of Indiana, has been appointed Governor of Oregon in place of Gen. Lane. Alyne Otis, Esq., of this State, son of the late Harrison Gray Otis, has received the appointment of Secretary of Legation to France.

HIGHLY IMPORTANT. The President has received intelligence that an armed expedition is fitting out in the United States to take Cuba, and has issued a Proclamation warning all citizens against the violation of our treaty obligations. Persons so engaged forfeit their claims to the protection of the country, and must not expect the interference of the Government in their behalf, no matter to what extremities they may be reduced.

THE DILL FAMILY. Mr. Solomon Dill died on board the schooner Friendship on Saturday, and his body was taken to Hull by his son, where it was refused burial. Mrs. Dill died at the cholera hospital on Saturday. A little son of Mrs. Dill's died on Tuesday night, having been on board the schooner four days without food. The only survivor of the family, a son of Mr. Dill, is now sick at the cholera hospital.

LOSS OF A CALIFORNIA COMPANY. It is probable that the schooner Dolphin, with forty or fifty Americans on board, bound for San Francisco, has been lost. She left Mazatlan on the 23d of April, and seventy five days afterwards had not arrived. The usual passage is thirty days. Eighteen dead bodies and pieces of wreck have been found along the coast, which seem to confirm the apprehension.

THE MILITARY PLOT. An armed steamer has been ordered to sea with sealed orders. Her destination is supposed to be the Gulf of Mexico, near Cuba.

MAIL ROBBERED. The Concord and Boston mail was robbed recently and the letters have been found in an old car at the Eastern Railroad depot in Boston. They had all been opened.

FROM EUROPE. The Hibernia arrived at Boston on Wednesday. The news by her is one week later but is not important. The Queen of England and suite, had embarked for Ireland. The cholera was still raging in London and other cities. The Queen has approved of Thomas L. Crittenden as Consul for Liverpool. Parliament was prorogued on the 1st inst. Trade has continued quiet but steady. France was in a state of general tranquillity. Every thing favors the views of the Bonapartists.

A JOKE. A printers' almshouse is about to be erected near London; no person to be admitted under seventy years of age! Considering the members of the "craft" get murdered off by severe toil at the average age of thirty two, this is a rare joke.

FIRE AT NORTH ABINGTON. A house, barn and out buildings, belonging to Jesse Torrey, were totally destroyed by fire, at North Abington, on the night of the 10th inst. The furniture was mostly saved. A horse, wagon load of tin ware, and several tons of hay, were destroyed in the barn. The fire commenced in the barn, and was undoubtedly the work of an incendiary.

COMMENCEMENT AT AMHERST. The exercises of commencement took place at Amherst on the 9th inst., in presence of a large auditory. Rev. William A. Peabody, of Randolph, has been chosen to fill the vacant Moore professorship of the Latin and French Languages.

RAILWAY GUIDE. The August number of this very useful work has been received. It is published by authority of the Railway Superintendents and undoubtedly contains correct information concerning the Railways in New England. Price only three cents—to be had of George K. Snow & Co., No. 5 Washington St., Boston, and of News Agents generally.

THE WHEAT CROP. Notwithstanding the partial failure of the wheat crop in Ohio and Indiana it promises to be a full average one in the country. In Pennsylvania, Virginia, Maryland and New York, the crop is large, in Michigan and Illinois more, than a full average, and in Upper Canada also.

CALIFORNIA—COLD. Extract of a letter from E. Gould Buffum, who went out to California lieutenant in Col. Stevenson's Regiment in 1846, and who is a member of the District Legislature at San Francisco.

"You people at home are altogether mistaken in regard to the gold mines of California. Gold is not to be shovelled up here by the pailful, but the most severe and arduous labor is required to procure it, and there is as much luck in it as there is in lottery-tickets. I will give you a little of my experience. For the first week, I believe, I dug only $5 a day; and many a day since have I tramped up and down the ravines with my pick and pan, and gone home at night without having dug a dollar. The most I ever found in one day was $50, although I have seen a man alongside of me light upon a pile containing nearly a thousand. The fact of the existence, and indeed the inexhaustibility of the gold, is not to be doubted. It is everywhere. Advise all persons coming to bring with them a good light machine as a machine does the work of about four men."

Frederick, July

Dr. Seth W. Fowler, Dear Sir:—From I have been subject to lung complaints. I took cold—a cough set in, and the beginning, I made use of the medicine which I always keep for that purpose. I resisted to others, but my cough increased, and a pain in the side and right lungs set in, which soon became very distressing, and at intervals with oppression on the lungs. During this time I expected but one remedy—the use of the lungs medicine.

Two or three physicians tried their medicines, which have been very efficacious, but they failed to reach my lungs, and I was somewhat uneasy. My condition was aggravated. A friend advised me BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY, which I had swallowed medicine enough. Well, out that day and the night following, a day my friend urged me again to try it, and at 3, P. M., I was willing to try it—I coughed constantly. I procured a bottle of the medicine, and when I began to take it, I felt a great relief, and I have since my cough and pains were gone, and I have since.

Respectfully yours, F. A. REDD

MORE FACTS AS TO DR. CORBETT'S CONCENTRATED SYRUP OF SARSAP.

The severe suffering of Frederick Hammon, place, was well known to me and my friend, and the wonderful cure effected on him of Corbett's Concentrated Syrup of Sarsaparilla, I gladly adopted its use. For a long time I was troubled with the Liver Complaint, and been twelve years with an aggravated condition of the bowels and dizziness of the head. But one dozen bottles of Corbett's Sarsaparilla health was fully restored me. Not for have I known what even health meant. The reason of Dr. Corbett, from experience, I find most invaluable medicine, and have no doubt sole cause of my restoration, as I have taken medicine since commencing the use of this I know of several others in this vicinity, and now are, taking this Sarsaparilla, most beneficial results. It is highly approved by Dr. Knight and other eminent physicians.

Circassian Oil.
THIS Oil promotes the growth of the Hair, and renders it beautifully soft and smooth. It keeps the Hair in place after combing, brushing, or curling. This Oil is highly perfumed, and is considered almost an indispensable article at the toilet.
A fine head of hair is one of the greatest personal ornaments one can boast. Among all the various components of loveliness it stands preeminent. The face may be beautiful, the form the head may be lovely, but by the aid of the hair these defects may be remedied and by its judicious arrangement the stamp of elegance placed upon the whole person. Nature seems, intended it as her finishing stroke, the crowning and beautifying of all the personal charms. The lovers of grace and beauty, who are desirous of preserving the hair in its natural state, and of retaining its color and brilliancy, have ever paid the greatest attention to its health and preservation; but the only way for that reason their efforts heretofore have not met with but poor success. Recent discoveries have substantiated the facts, that the growth of the hair is strictly analogous to that of vegetables, and that its nourishment and beauty depend upon a secretion of a peculiar oily moisture which emanates from the scalp. This substance not only supports the hair but preserves its color and brilliancy, and prevents its falling or falling out. But when it happens that this secretion is deficient the hair immediately loses its brilliancy, it becomes coarse, faded and falls off. Some time ago my attention was turned to this subject, and I have long since been preparing an article similar to that naturally secreted for the hair, so that when the powers of nature fail, it might be supplied as a substitute. After a series of trials and experiments, I at last succeeded in my discovery of the Circassian Oil, which answers admirably as a substitute for the natural secretion. Physicians who have examined the Oil, pronounce it the best and most natural remedy for the hair ever prepared, and its unprecedented success so far, fully warrants the character bestowed upon it.
To prevent fraud, each bottle will bear the signature of the inventor.

POETRY.

NEW BOOTS.

Of all the troubles here below,
The very worst I know of,
Is the insinuating way
A new boot always goes on.

You goes and tries it on, you do,
It seems a perfect fit,
And lets you walk a square at least,
Before it turns a bit.

You feels it then—I feels it now,
Your foot seems all on fire,
You wants to lay down in the mud,
You almost has to swear.

You wants to kick each man you meets,
You do kick all the dogs,
The little niggers in your way,
You treats them vus nor hogs.

The world to you is von wast boot,
Vish nought but pain inside it—
If such a thing as joy there is,
You vonders vere they hide it.

Boots causes half our misery,
And more than half our crimes,
For tight fits sours the very best
Of tempers, at such times.

A GEM.

She was a phantom of delight,
When first she gleamed upon my sight;
A lovely apparition, sent
To be a moment's ornament;
Her eyes as stars of twilight fair;
Like twilight, too, her dusky hair;
But all things else about her drawn
From May-time's brightest, loveliest dawn;
A dancing shape, an image gay,
To haunt, to startle, and to way-lay.

I saw her upon nearer view,
A spirit, yet a woman too!
Her household motions light and free,
And steps of virgin liberty;
A countenance in which did meet
Sweet records, promises as sweet;
A creature not too bright or good
For human nature's daily food;
For transient sorrows, simple wiles,
Praise, blame, love, kisses, tears and smiles.

And now I see with eye serene,
The very pulse of the machine;
A being breathing thoughtful breath,
A traveler between life and death;
The reason firm, the temperate will,
Endurance, foresight, strength and skill;
A perfect woman, nobly planned,
To warn, to comfort and to command;
And yet a spirit still, and bright,
With something of an angel-light.

ROYAL RASCALITY.

At a rubber of whist, an Englishman grave
Said "he couldn't distinguish a king from a knave,
His eyes were so dim and benighted"—
A Yankee observed that he hadn't complain,
For the thing had been often attempted in vain
By eyes that were very clear sighted.

ANECDOTES.

"I wish to know, sir, if you called me an ass?"
"Yes, sir, but I qualified it."
"Ah! sir, you qualified it, did you? The better for you sir, and pray, how did you qualify it?"
"I said you were an ass, sir, all but the ears."

"Will you take some mustard?" asked somebody of Capt. — at a public dinner on the fourth.
"No, thank ye," was the reply, "I've mustered enough for one day already."

A distinguished man getting out of a chaise and going into the store of an auctioneer, met the proprietor just at the door. "Why John," said the man of the hammer, "you looked fat enough for an auctioneer as you got out of your chaise." "Well," replied John in his quaint way, "I was all dar man that got out of the vehicle."

A lady entered a dry-goods store the other day and after inquiring for a variety of articles, requested the young clerk to show her some cambric of a hay color.
The clerk inquired with some surprise, what she meant by that color. "Why," replied the lady, "cambric the color of your drawers." "You are mistaken, madam," said the clerk, "I don't wear any." "I was some time before the lady could make him understand that she alluded to some fixtures with knobs on them.

"Do you know Mr. Brown?" "Yes, my dear." "Is he not a very deserving man?" "Yes, he deserves a flogging, and if he ever gallants you home again, I will give it to him!" Exit wife, in a fright.

Old Squire B. — was elected judge of the Inferior Court of some county in Georgia. When he went home, his delighted wife exclaimed—
"Now, my dear, you are Judge, what an I?"
"The same d-d old fool you allers was," was the tart reply.

Three full-blooded, dandified 'genis' applied at a stable, before the railroad era, for the hire of a horse and gig to take them to a certain town and back in one day.

"What," exclaimed the groom, "you certainly would not drive a poor beast a hundred miles in a day?"
"Vy not?" said one of them, "we've all got vips!"

The daughter of a landlady being requested to place upon the table an article used for containing salt, returned with her beau, a clerk, remarking that he was a salt-seller. M's hair stood upon end, but he remarked that he might do in a measure.

"Stop a minute, watchman," said a gentleman who poked out his head at an alarm of fire. "Sir," replied the facetious guardian of the night, "I am not a stop-watch."

"How do you feel this morning, James?" "Very much better, I thank you. I did think, a while ago, I was not as well, but I know I am better now, for just met old Mr. —, the undertaker, and he looked cruel at me."

French Patent Oil for Leather.

THIS French Patent Oil is prepared for Carriages,
Harness, Boots, Shoes, and all articles that require a good polish on the surface; it will give any article of Leather

and at the same time from its oily properties tends much to preserve. It will always be moist and pliant,
at the same time free from grease when handled;
there is not a spirit of such an oil invented that would give one-half the brilliancy to the leather to which this is applied, and will never get mouldy. It may be exposed to water or washed, and will not lose its brilliancy.

It is as well as all other articles made of leather, when polished with the above oil, will never be injured by rats or mice;—likewise dust has no effect on it, and it is not to be feared that any crust will settle on said leather preserved with the above oil.

Instructions—Drop a few drops upon a piece of sponge, and with that is required to apply it lightly
on the leather to obtain the finest lustre.

Price, 62 1-2 cts. per bottle, or $6 per dozen.
Manufactured by Messrs. Salomon & Co. from Paris.

For sale by
H. A. RANSOM & Co.
Quincy, June 23.

United States

HEALTH INSURANCE COMPANY,
Office No. 17 State Street, Boston.

Incorporated by the Legislature of Massachusetts,
May 10, 1848.

Capital, $50,000.

Directors.

Sam'l Aspinwall, Lemuel M. Barker, John Bigelow, Jonas Chickering, George Darracott, James Clark,
Heman Lincoln, Samuel H. Jenks, Benj. Lamson, Joseph Lewis, Elijah Meigs, S. P. Mosheim,
Joseph B. Pince, Thomas Reston, N. Sturtevant,
Simon T. Taylor, Charles H. White, D. W. Wiswell, Dan. Leverett, Charlestown. J. L. Lord, New York.

President and Treasurer—JAMES CLARK.

Secretary—SAMUEL H. JENKS.

Consulting Physicians—D. Humphrey Storer, M.
D., 14 Winter St.; Augustus A. Gould, M. D., 15
West St.

Superintendent of Agencies—Simeon P. Taylor.

THIS Institution insures both males and females against disease or accident, according to the rates specified in their tables. The former, by depositing a given sum yearly, may insure a return of four-fifths of that deposit, for each year, and every week within that year, during which he may be so disabled by illness
as to be prevented from pursuing his usual occupation,—such allowance not to exceed four hundred dollars in any one year.

Females, insured against all maladies common to both sexes, are entitled to return allowances equal to three-fourths of their yearly payments, for every week's sickness. Thus, an investment of $5 a year by the former, or of $5 33 by the latter, will, if deprived of health, secure to the party insured, a repayment of not less than one dollar
in any one year.

Persons insured by this Company become members thereof, so far as to entitle them to a proportion of all dividends of its annual profits, in the ratio of their respective premiums, and according to the duration of their policies.

The renewal of any policy may be secured, on notice given to the Secretary within three months of its expiration, and on furnishing proof of sound health
at the date of such notice.

For rates of insurance and other information, apply to the Agents in this town.

Encourage your Own.

To the People of Quincy—
The following is a well known motto, and strictly true!

"That Country or Town that gives the most liberal encouragement to its own manufactures of every kind is well known to thrive, and increase in wealth and population."

There are a few interesting facts, of which we wish to remind you, and which we are inclined to think have slipped from the memory of some, and which it will be for your advantage as well as ours to remember.

1st. That at the QUINCY BOOKSTORE you will find all the

in use in this and the neighboring towns.

2d. That at the same place you will find every kind of

Blank Account Book,
RECORD or MEMORANDUM BOOK.

3d. That there you will find a great assortment of Miscellaneous, Juvenile and Toy Books.

4th. That there you will find all kinds of STATIONERY.

5th. That there you will find an innumerable variety of

FANCY GOODS.
6th. That all the above will be sold at the very Lowest Market Prices.

7th. That we are entirely disinterested when we say that you will be much better satisfied with your selves and your bargains if you trade at home, in preference to "out of town."

8th. That there you will find a GOOD LIBRARY where you can procure reading on reasonable terms.

9th. That the Proprietors are agents for all the popular MAGAZINES, receiving the subscriptions themselves and furnishing the numbers on their own responsibility, free of any expense. Many have forgotten this of late, preferring to subscribe of some travelling agent, to one in their own town.

10th. That they RE-BIND old Books, Pamphlets, Periodicals, Music, etc., as cheap as they can afford to do, and as quick as anybody.

These things we wish to call to your memory, because while we have been moving on in a quiet kind of a way, you seem partly to have forgotten the old place, thinking perhaps that we did not keep up with the times in the variety of our goods and also in prices. Our rule, like that of many others, is, "quick sales and small profits," therefore call in and we will supply you most satisfactorily.

MISCELLANY.

SINCERITY AND PRINCIPLE.

Do not go so soon, said Mrs. Lewis to her friend Mrs. Morse, who had been making Mrs.
L. a morning call and now rose to depart.—
Why need you be in such a haste? continued Mrs. L. I should be so very happy to have you remain a little longer.

Thank you, replied Mrs. M. I have already made you a longer call than I intended to, and I have an engagement which I cannot neglect.
Indeed, I shall now be somewhat late, I fear—(glancing at her watch) and therefore must go at once.

Mrs. Lewis waited upon her visitor to the door, with many expressions of regret that she could not stay longer, and urgent invitations to come again, very soon. But no sooner was the door closed, than the bland smile vanished from Mrs. Lewis's countenance, and she exclaimed in a tone of petulance:

Dear me, how tiresome that Mrs. Morse always is,—I really thought she would never go!
I was in a perfect fidget, because you know I must have this dress finished to wear at the party
this evening, said she addressing her daughter Emma; an interesting girl of about eighteen years, who was busily engaged with her drawing.

Why mother, said Emma looking up in surprise, you certainly urged her to stay longer,
and said you should be happy to have her do so.

Well how could I help it? answered Mrs.
L. One must say something—politeness requires it.

I cannot conceive, mother how true politeness can require us to make sacrifice of principle and other sentiments to which our hearts do not respond. For one I pray to be delivered from such politeness.

Nonsense, child, said the mother; when you have lived as long in the world as I have, you will be wiser than you are now, and you will find your theory will do to talk about, but cannot be carried into practice. You will make enemies instead of friends, and be thought odd and singular. I see your long residence with Aunt Maurice has not been without its effect;
you have imbibed some of her precise notions,
and cold-hearted sentiments.

Oh, mother do not accuse aunt Maurice of want of feeling said Emma, for she is warm hearted as she is sincere and generous. You would love her as I do were you better acquainted with her. I grant that her conduct is regulated by Christian principle, even in the minutia of daily life. But she is none the less beloved and respected by those who have discernment enough to appreciate her real excellence of character; for it is so delightful to know that we can place full confidence in those with whom we associate, and be convinced that what they say they also mean. But dear aunt Maurice has taught me to discriminate between sincerity and frankness, and that bluntness of speech and manner which some persons make use of under the pretence that they "always speak their minds," as they term it, and thus under the influence of passion, malice, or envy, say many harsh things, calculated to wound
the feelings by such conduct. Oh, that there were more people like her in the world, and less of deception and mere compliment.

Why, Emma, you are growing quite enthusiastic, said Mrs. Lewis smiling.

I wish, replied Emma, smiling in her turn,
I could impart some of it into you dear mother.
But if you are not already too much wearied with my jabbering, I should like to call your attention to a case in point. You are aware that among my acquaintances there is one whose friendship I highly value, and whose character I esteem and love, principally because I have the fullest assurance of her perfect sincerity and truthfulness. I can always confide in her, for she never says any thing for the sake of compliment that she does not really feel.

Oh! what a treasure is such a friend!—One such, in my view, outweighs a score of flattering and deceitful friends, or rather acquaintances. There is another, also, of my associates, who though a very pleasing and agreeable girl,
yet is so prone to make sarcastic remarks about people, that one can scarcely feel easy in her presence, for you are continually feeling that you shall be likely to share the same fate when not present. Do you recollect, mother, the time that we had some little misunderstanding with these friends, owing to some carelessness, which was afterwards fully explained? But,
at the time, they did seem to have good reasons for thinking themselves slighted. The one who is always sincere and open in her feelings did not attempt to conceal the impressions that she felt injured; and the other young lady appeared as pleasant as usual, and we thought her the most amiable of the two; but we afterwards learned that she gave vent to her resentment behind our backs, said some unkind and severe things concerning us. And then you fully agreed with me when I said how much I would rather people would say all they have against me to my face, than I might know what to depend upon, instead of going to others with their remarks, thus depriving me of an opportunity of explaining and defending myself. Will you not acknowledge, my dear mother, that sincerity is very desirous and valuable?

Some weeks after the conversation above alluded to, Mrs. Lewis and her daughter received an invitation to another large and brilliant party which they accepted. When the day arrived, Mrs. L. who was, as usual, solicitous about her daughters toilette, entered her chamber to suggest some alterations in her dress for the occasion.

Emma, said she, while the latter was arranging her beautiful, glossy ringlets, you know Frank Morton will be at Mrs. Elwin's to-night and I hope you will not be so reserved towards him as you were at the last party we attended for I understand he has quite fallen in love with you. He is a very elegant young man, and his family is one of the wealthiest and most respectable in the community. Such a connexion is not to be met with every day, and is well secured. Therefore I beg you will be a little more agreeable this evening.

Oh, mother, answered Emma, do not speak
thus! Do not ask me to receive with smiles the attentions of one who has strayed so widely from the paths of virtue. Where is the poor heart broken victim of his baseness, whose only fault was loving him too well, and who he betrayed, ruined, and deserted? Shall I go to her with affectionate sympathy and tenderness?
Oh, no; she is spurned, despised, and neglected,
while he, who has blasted all the bright visions of her youth, all that is dear and precious in life, and thrown a dark shadow over her whole existence—he, because he is rich and fashionable,
must be received into the society of the virtuous and the pure, and caressed and flattered as though he were a perfect pattern of integrity and virtue, instead of being as he often undoubtedly is, the companion of the most abandoned of our sex! No mother though it grieves me to act contrary to your wishes—I can never, never so far depart from my principles as to receive the attentions of such a man.

You are quite too severe and particular said Mrs. Lewis. Frank Morton, recollect, is young yet; and situated as he is, we must expect some youthful indiscretions. He will reform as he grows older, and will doubtless make a kind and affectionate husband. As to the young girl you spoke of, we cannot alter the customs and opinions of society. She never thought of marrying one in his station in life. His friends would never have consented to it.

Ah, mother, that was no excuse for him.
She was young, artless and confiding, and it was the height of baseness in him to seek and win her affection if he never meant to marry her. If intelligent and virtuous females would take the stand they ought and refuse to associate with young men of immoral characters how soon would there be a reform, and how much misery and suffering would be prevented! For one I am resolved, with God's help, to do all in my power to bring about a state of things so desirable.

Mrs. Lewis, seeing her daughter so resolute, forebore to urge her farther on the subject, but was evidently much disappointed.

Certainly, replied Mrs. Lewis; but this case you have been speaking of is quite another thing from what I had said to Mrs. Morse this morning.

Yes mother but the principle is the same, in both cases.

Mrs. Lewis did not at this time give any reason why she particularly wished her daughter's appearance to be pleasing at this party. She was an amiable and kind hearted woman, but had been educated by worldly-minded and fashionable relations. She had been taught to consider, and she did, that fashion, gentility, and the opinion of the world were all important.

The daughter on the contrary, high-minded and ingenuous, was not inclined to follow blindly and implicitly, such imperious dictates. She had been named after her father's sister, a woman of superior abilities, and high moral principles, which shed their gentle and subduing influence over all her actions. She was a widow, and had two sons, but no daughter, and being very fond of her niece, Emma was allowed to spend a great part of her time with her worthy aunt, which proved a great advantage to the gentle girl, who was not slow in learning these lessons of christian wisdom which were inculcated and daily exemplified in the life of one to whom she was so devotedly attached.

Among the many lovely females who assembled that evening at the brilliant party of Mrs.
Elwin, Emma Lewis shone conspicuously. There was an intellectual beauty in her countenance,
and a sprightfulness and grace in her manners that rendered her irresistibly attractive. Her conversation was exceedingly interesting, too, displaying the thoughtful intelligence of a cultivated mind and fine taste. Frank Morton saw and heard all this—but when he drew near and attempted to converse with Emma Lewis, she assumed at once so much cold dignity and reserve, that he was obliged to withdraw, though with evident mortification. He then attached himself for the remainder of the evening principally to Isabel Graham, a young lady who was both handsome and agreeable, but rather superficial; she did not look so much at principle, as Emma. She was pleased with Morton's attentions, because he was handsome and pleasing in his manner, and more than all, was rich and fashionable. There was another young man present, who appeared to be a stranger to most of the company; he was uncommonly good looking, and had a noble brow and a manly bearing, but he seemed modest and unpretending. Mrs. Lewis observed, and so did Morton, that Emma was uncommonly animated in conversation with him; those who were near enough to hear his remarks could not fail to notice the intelligence and high-toned principles manifested by his conversation. Emma was passionately fond of music, and possessed a rich and melodious voice, which had been highly cultivated. She was earnestly besought to perform on the piano, to which she at length consented. The young stranger sang with her;
and his fine deep-toned voice blended so harmoniously with Emma's, and they sung with so much feeling and correct taste, that their auditors were fairly entranced.

Who is his young man? whispered Mrs.
Lewis to her daughter.

I will tell you to-morrow dear mother, said Emma.

Frank Morton was much chagrined at the repulse he had received from the interesting and beautiful Miss Lewis. His pride was wounded, for he had thought himself invincible before. But he soon forgot his disappointment in the society of Isabel Graham who lavished all her smiles and favors on him.

The next morning Mrs. Lewis and her daughter were discussing the events of the preceding evening. Mrs. Lewis observed:

You have indeed succeeded in driving Frank Morton from your side forever. Isabel will probably obtain his hand, together with all his fine fortune.

Well, dear mother I certainly shall not envy her in the least; and you may live to see the day when you will rejoice that your Emma's destiny is not linked to Frank Morton's.

Who was the young stranger that you seemed to be so much pleased with last night? said
the mother.

Emma blushed slightly as she answered, his name is James Wadleigh. I met him several times at my aunt's, and he is stopping a day or two with a friend of his in town.

And do you know anything of his family?
said her mother.

I have heard my aunt speak of his mother and sisters in high terms; and his father is a worthy man and much respected.

What is his business? inquired Mrs. Lewis.

He is a mechanic, replied Emma.

Indeed? And does your aunt visit them?
said Mrs. Lewis.

Certainly she does.

I might have known as much, for she never had any pride.

Why, mother, said Emma, I hope you don't think that Mr. Wadleigh's being a mechanic is any disparagement to his friends! You know my grandfather was one also. And I have heard father say that as a general thing they are the noblest class of men in the country; intelligent, enterprising, and sound in principle,
they are the hope and pride of this nation.

I know your father has some strange notions;
but how is it with the son? Is he also a mechanic?

Yes, he has served a regular apprenticeship at the printing business, and is now a journeyman.

And is it possible, inquired Mrs. Lewis, with much emphasis, that you would throw yourself away upon a journeyman printer, after all the pains bestowed upon your education?

Emma blushed as she answered, James Wadleigh has never made any proposal to me of the kind, and I do not know that he ever thought of such a thing; but certainly I should not think of rejecting a young man of such high moral and intellectual worth as he possesses, simply because he was a mechanic.

You are a strange girl, said her mother, somewhat sadly. I do think a certain degree of pride is necessary and becoming to young ladies.

I do not think I am entirely destitute of the commodity, said Emma, good-humoredly; but perhaps we have different interpretations of the term. I certainly have too much pride to throw myself away, as you term it, upon a young man of dissolute principles, merely because he is rich and genteel.

Well, at least, said her mother I hope you will never engage your hand to any one without first consulting your parents on the subject.

You may be assured my dear mother, that I could never so far forget my filial duty as to be guilty of such conduct. And here the conversation ended.

In the course of the day young Wadleigh called to see Emma, before leaving town. Fortunately Mr. Lewis was at home. He was a very sensible and discerning man, and knew how to appreciate real excellence of character, wherever it was found. He received the young man very politely, and soon became engaged in animated conversation in which Emma modestly bore her share.

After Mr. Wadleigh had taken his leave,
Mr. Lewis enquired who he was. And when Emma had told him—Ah, yes, said he, I know his father well—a fine man he was; and this son is a promising fellow. Even Mrs. L. ac-knowledgeed that he was very agreeable; but it was such a pity that he was not a lawyer or a doctor.

Time passed on. Frank Morton was married to Isabel Graham, and poor Mrs. Lewis could scarcely repress her tears, when she witnessed the splendor of their establishment, or saw the handsome couple pass in their elegant carriage.
For a time all went on smoothly with them,
and Isabel was the gayest of the gay, and Frank seemed all devotion to his young and lovely wife. But at length the novelty began to wear away, and then it was whispered that he was becoming dissipated, and that his poor young wife was often neglected for the society of a fascinating female. Isabel tried to be as lively and cheerful as usual, but a close observer could plainly see there was a secret sorrow within.

Meanwhile James Wadleigh was industriously and perseveringly pursuing his onward course. He was soon promoted to the office of foreman of the large establishment where he was employed; which situation he filled with great credit and success. He had frequent opportunities of seeing Emma, and though he made no formal offer of his hand yet it was evident that he was deeply interested in the beautiful girl. But she was the daughter of a rich merchant, and Wadleigh was comparatively poor.

Emma herself refused several good offers, to the surprise of her parents, until James Wadleigh, by his correct principles and good habits, had placed himself in a position to maintain a wife in a reasonable style of comfort and taste;
when, with the approval of her father and the more reluctant consent of her mother she was united to him in marriage. The union proved a most happy one, and Mr. Wadleigh has since risen to distinction and influence by his talents and industry.

But what has become of the rich and fashionable Frank Morton all this time? Is he as honored and respected as James Wadleigh?
Alas, no. His course has been downward.
Many times had he been seen in a state of in-ebriation, and his excesses have ruined his health and seriously affected his fortune. To repair this, he had recourse to the gaming table, which finally swallowed up the whole, and he was a beggar; and in a fit of madness he shot himself, leaving his poor heart-broken wife, and several young children, completely destitute.
What a sad reverse to the once proud and happy Isabel!

RICHES AND POVERTY. That poverty is a evil would be absurd to deny, and that it is the parent of many other evils, moral no less than physical, experience teaches and will for ever teach us. Not only that poverty which stands between its victims and the common comforts,
also the necessities, of life, is thus pregnant with sorrow and sin; but that which closes the access to every elegant enjoyment, and binds down to petty cares and anxieties the time, the thought, the whole spirit. But to believe that the reverse of all this in itself is happiness, is to have little experience indeed of life with all its varieties of pain and disappointment—of blighted hopes—of unavailing repentance. Some who have never known what it is to possess riches believe that the power of dispensing them must and does bring happiness; but in vain does
"the widow's heart sing for joy" if no chord in the breast of her benefactor echoes to the sound of her rejoicings—if he feels that there are evils much worse than poverty. If personal regrets have closed the heart to sympathy, he may be beneficent but the blessings of beneficence do not return upon him.

THE VATICAN AT ROME. The Vatican, which crowns one of the seven hills of Rome is a group of buildings, covering a space of 1200 by 1000 feet. It was formerly occupied by the garden of Nero. The Vatican owes its origin to the Bishops of Rome, who, in the sixth century, erected a humble building on its site. Pope Eugenius III, rebuilt it on a magnificent scale
in 1150; a few years afterwards Innocent II gave it as a lodging to Peter II, king of Aragon.
In 1305, Clement V, at the invitation of the king of France, removed the papal See from Rome to Avignon, leaving the Vatican in obscurity for seventy years. The Vatican became once more the Papal residence in 1375, when it was enlarged. Its famous library was commenced 1400 years ago. It now contains 40, 000 MSS. among which are some of Pliny,
St. Charles Borromeo, and many Hebrew, Syriac and Armenian bibles. The Vatican is also the repository of a vast number of the rarest paintings, statues, curious medals and antiques of every kind. Upwards of 70,000 statues have been exhumed from the Temples and Palaces of Rome, a great portion of which are in the Vatican.

BRADDOCK'S DEFEAT. All accounts agree that the unfortunate Braddock behaved with great gallantry, though with little discretion, in his trying situation. He encouraged his soldiers, and was crying out with his speaking trumpet,
'Hurrah, boys, lose the saddle or win the horse!'
when a bullet struck him, and he fell to the ground, exclaiming—'Ha, boys! I'm gone!'
During all this time not a cannon had been fired by the British forces. It was at this moment that one who was with him at the time, who is still living, and one whose humble testimony I rely even with more confidence than the more imposing authority of history, thus describes Washington. 'I saw him take hold of a brass field piece, as if it had been a stick. He looked like a fury; he tore the sheet lead from the touchole; he placed one hand on the muzzle, the other on the breech; he pulled with this and pushed with that, and wheeled it round as if it had been nothing. It tore the ground like a barshare (a kind of plough). The powder monkey rushed up with the fire, and then the cannon began to bark, I tell you. They fought and they fought, and the Indians began to holla, when the rest of the brass cannon made the bark of the trees fly, and the Indians came down that place called Rock Hill, and there they left 500 men dead on the ground.

Some idea of the cruelty and suffering which were exercised and felt in the three years of savage warfare which announced the defeat of Braddock, may be gathered from the subjoining sketch, which was obtained from the lips of Washington himself, and is now first presented to the public:

'One day,' said Washington, 'as we were traversing a part of the frontier, we came upon a single log-house, standing in the centre of a little clearing, surrounded by woods on all sides.
As we approached, we heard the report of a gun
the usual signal of coming horrors. Our party crept cautiously through the underwood, until we approached near enough to see what we had already foreboded. A smoke was slowly making its way through the roof of the house, while at the same moment a party of Indians came forth laden with plunder, consisting of clothes, domestic utensils, household furniture, and dripping scalps. We fired and killed all but one, who tried to get away, but was soon shot
down.'

On entering the hut we saw a sight that though we were familiar with blood and massacre, struck us, at least myself, with feelings more mournful than I had ever experienced before. On a bed in one corner of the room lay a young woman swimming in blood, with a gash in her forehead which almost separated the head in two parts. On her breast lay two little babes, apparently twins, less than a twelve months old,
with their heads also cut open. Their innocent blood, which had once flowed in the same veins now mingled in one current again. I was induced to scenes of bloodshed and misery, but this cut me to the soul, and I never in my after-life did I raise my hand against a savage without calling to mind the mother and her twins, their heads cleft asunder.'

THE STOLEN LUMP. The following story is related of a person who was for a long time addicted to petty knavery. A lump of butter once stood in his way, and he appropriated it to his own use without leave or license. Some one accidentally saw the theft, and forthwith informed the owner of the transaction. The delinquent had deposited the lump for temporary keeping in his hat, and was coolly leaving the store
when the informant and the rightful owner accosted the unsuspecting thief and placing themselves on either side took him by the hands, and gave him a pressing invitation to enter the counting room for the purpose of enjoying a little harmless chat. This invitation the lover of butter could not refuse, and the trio arm in arm entered a little snug room, where a large sea-coal fire made everything look comfortable around,
and presented a sensible contrast to the bleak atmosphere without—chairs were placed in the immediate vicinity of the red hot coals, and the grocer and his friend were officiously courteous
even beyond the strictest rules of politeness.

The conversation waxed warm, but the fire warmer,—our hero fidgetted and turned in every way—but to no purpose—to take off his hat would have discovered his misdeeds instantly, and to keep it on much longer would render his fate exceedingly unpleasant. In vain did he endeavor to shield his face from the penetrating calorific. The big drops of perspiration fell from his agonized face—and were soon followed in rapid succession by others of a different character. The subtle heat was fast converting the solid butter into a liquid. Even Niobe herself could not have wept more copioously than did, apparently, this unfortunate man,
—his locks soon became like the first drippings
of tallow candles, and his countenance partook of the nature of red hot embers, and seemed to emit rays of light. It was not until he became fairly basted with butter, that he was suffered to leave the presence of his tormentors.

CIVIL LIBERTY. Milton, whose political reflections are as distinguished for their wisdom
as his poetry is for its great imaginative power, speaking of true liberty, says: "This is not the liberty which we can hope that no grievances ever should arise in the commonwealth, that let no man in this world expect; but when complaints are freely heard, deeply considered and speedily reformed, then is the utmost bound of civil liberty attained that wise men look for."

JAMES THE BLOOD TO OBTAIN HEALTH.

The following most remarkable cure ever recorded, is published by L. Brinley & Co., Boston.

Remembrance—The Syrup of Sarsaparilla, as prepared by Dr. C. C. Brinley, has proved so great a blessing to myself and two sisters of mine, I am glad to afford you the following facts, which you are at liberty to use as you deem best.

In the Spring of 1847, my sisters left Vermont, in company with myself, for Manchester, N. H. Our journey was moderately good, but not the best, our journey was rather weakly. We obtained employment. But I found I failed so fast, that I was obliged to give up work. My stomach became weak, and I came out over most of my body. My eldest sister was then afflicted in the same way; while the younger one had a rushing of blood to the head, and sometimes severe suffusion to the face. This became so painful, she left work, and with her sister left home, when a bleeding of the lungs set in in the youngest. I tried all kinds of medicine for my sisters and myself, but with no benefit or relief.

The doctors said it was a disease of the blood, and it took time to cure, if ever. About six months since, I bought, in Manchester, N. H., a bottle of Dr. C. C. Brinley's Sarsaparilla, and I saw some of the respectable physicians to the certificates, and this gave me confidence.

I am happy to inform you that after using medicine a short time, I found myself once more a man, and then went to Lowell to work.

My sisters had no confidence in the medicine, and other Sarsaparilla, but I sent them some, and after some time, they were cured. I sent them some, and after some time, they were cured. I sent them some, and after some time, they were cured.

September 17, 1846.

Dr. Seth W. Fowler, Dear Sir:—From my youth I have been subject to lung complaints. In February last I took cold—a cough set in, and though slight in the beginning, I made use of the simple remedies which I always keep for that purpose. (These failing, I resorted to others, but my cough increased in violence, and a pain in the side and right lobe of the lungs set in, which soon became very distressing and at intervals were attended with oppressive stricture on the lungs.) During this time I expected freely, but the mucus raised from the lungs indicated a disease deeply seated. Two or three physicians kindly sent me their medicines, which have been very efficient in curing coughs, but they failed to reach my case, and I began to be somewhat uneasy. My cough was considerably aggravated. A friend advised me to try the BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY, but I told him I had swallowed medicine enough. Well, sir, I coughed out that day and the night following, and the next day my friend urged me again to try Doctor Fowler's, and at 3 P.M. I was advised to try it. I coughed constantly. I procured a bottle—drank of it—read the directions—continued taking it from that bottle one week, and when the BALSAM was gone my cough and pains were gone, and I have not coughed since.

Respectfully,
F. A. REDINGTON.

DR. BRIGGS'S SHOULDER BRACES AND SUPPORTERS are acknowledged by the Medical Faculty of New York to be the best ever invented. Read the following letter from Prof. C. P. BRONSON, A. M., M. D., Teacher of Elocution and Music.

Dr. Briggs: Dear Sir—You ask my candid opinion of your "Suspender and Shoulder Brace." I am not apt to be carried away with new things, nor accustomed to receive whatever comes highly recommended. I care but little for theory; practice, or use, is the great test; hence I abide by this motto: "Prove all things, and hold fast that which is good." I have no idea that your Brace will cure my diseases; but as a preventive of disease, I find by considerable experience and observation, that it is very valuable; particularly such diseases as are incident to the digestive organs, lungs and spine; because it pleasantly compels a person to be straight, and thereby aids the operations of nature. "Blessed are the upright," body as well as mind; and the opposite is equally true—Cursed are the crooked.

I have applied this brace to a great variety of persons, male and female, old and young; and in most of these cases with decided benefit, especially those of feeble constitutions and slender forms. And I am particularly pleased with its structure, conforming, as it does, so entirely to physiological principles; on which account it commends itself to reason and common sense, as well as to science. I am acquainted with a good many articles of a somewhat similar character and purpose, but consider yours preferable to any of them; as it differs, in some important respects from all others. Allow me to hope that you will not resort to any of the too common modes of alluring purchasers; only give it fair trial with reasonable persons, and they will need no other recommendation.

Yours truly,
C. P. BRONSON.

Braintree, Aug. 25.

To the Honorable Judge of the Court of Probate for the County of Norfolk:

THE Petition of WILLIAM DITSON, Administrator of the Goods and Estate of BETSEY THAYER, late of Quincy, in said County, Widow, deceased, respectfully represents, that the said deceased had at the time of her death real estate consisting of seventy five rods of lease hold Land for a term of one hundred years, of which more than fifty years remain unexpired, with a Dwelling House and Stable thereon, situated on the southerly side of Hancock Street, near the Town House, in said Quincy, of the value of $700, and that the lawful claims against the estate of said deceased for just debts, including funeral expenses, amount to $790.53, and that the whole claims of administration are $55, making the whole estate $745.47, and that the value of her personal estate is $76.50, being insufficient by the sum of $713.93 to satisfy said claims, and that said estate is so situated that by a partial sale thereof the remainder would be greatly injured—and that the persons interested in the estate of said deceased as heirs or otherwise are Sarah C. Underwood, wife of Ebenezer Underwood, Jr.; Mary B. Ditson, wife of William Ditson, and Elizabeth E. French, wife of George H. French of said Quincy, and the creditors of said Ebenezer Underwood, Jr., who have attached their right in said real estate to the said petition, and that they pray that said estate may be licensed and empowered to sell and convey the whole of said real estate, first taking the oath and giving the bond by law in such cases required.

Norfolk Agricultural Society.
CATTLE SHOW AND FAIR.

THE Officers and Trustees of the Norfolk Agricultural Society announce that the annual exhibition will take place at Dedham, on WEDNESDAY, the 26th day of September next.

This Society was formed and incorporated the present year, for the encouragement of AGRICULTURE and HORTICULTURE, MANUFACTURING and MECHANIC ARTS, in the County of Norfolk. In order to promote the important objects comprehended in its plan, the Trustees deem it expedient and essential to hold annual exhibitions, at which the products of agricultural science and industry, mechanical skill and ingenuity, may be displayed before the public. They believe that such exhibitions cannot fail to produce generous and healthy rivalry in all the departments of useful industry, stimulate exertion, and encourage modest and deserving merit, elevate and inform the public taste, awaken and activity unimproved talent, ingenuity and skill, contribute to the increase and diffusion of valuable knowledge, and, in short, tend generally to the cultivation, improvement, prosperity and happiness of the whole people.

They therefore, respectfully invite the Agriculturists, Horticulturists, Manufacturers, Mechanics and Artisans of the County of Norfolk, to offer for exhibition and premium, at the time and place above mentioned, the products of their labor, skill, ingenuity and taste in all the departments of useful and ornamental industry, such as Boots, Shoes, Carriages, Manufactures of Straw, Wood, Metal, Wool, Cotton, Flax, &c. &c. Specimens of FEMALE TASTE and INGENUITY are especially solicited, and it is expected that they will form an interesting and attractive part of the exhibition.

The products of Agriculture, Agricultural Implements, Domestic Manufactures, Prize Essays, &c., for which premiums are offered, are especially enumerated in the list of premiums before published by order of the Society, to which we beg respectfully to refer; but the Trustees, stepping beyond those limits, desire to appeal to the public spirit and local pride of Mechanics, Inventors, and Artisans, for the means of forming an exhibition which shall be creditable to the taste, ingenuity, and skill of our people, and honorable to the county.

As far as it may be within the power of the Society, at its first exhibition, Premiums, Gratuities and Diplomas will be awarded for all articles of merit deemed worthy of such distinction. Judges with the appropriate examination and report upon all articles that may be offered, and lists of such articles, with the names of producers, manufacturers or inventors, will be preserved in the records of the Society, and published for the information and benefit of the community.

Contributions will be received on the day previous to the exhibition, and until 9 o'clock of the same day.

Persons intending to compete for the premiums on Poultry, are reminded that they are required to enter their names with the Secretary on or before SATURDAY, the 22d of September.

All prizes by Rules or otherwise, intended for the exhibition, and all communications, must be addressed to the Secretary, at Dedham, who will see that they are properly attended to. Checks will be given for all articles received, which will entitle the bearer to the same at the close of the exhibition.

Contributors are especially requested to send forward their articles in good season, to prevent confusion, and in order that they may be properly arranged.

Contributors will be entitled to free admission to the Hall of Exhibition.

The Exhibition will commence at 9 o'clock, A. M. Poultrying Match at 10 o'clock, A. M. Address by the President in the Rev. Dr. Lamson's Meeting-house, at 11 1/2 o'clock. Collation at 1 o'clock. Drawing Match at 3 o'clock, P. M. Award of Premiums at 5 o'clock, P. M.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.

FREEMAN HUNT.

The soldier risks his valued life
To win an honor'd name;
His thoughts, amid the battle's strife,
On Victory and Fame.

The sailor sails his saucy flag
From the shattered mast;
To Fame he gives his dying brag
And proudly breathes his last.

The statesman strains his highest power
To guard his country's weal,
And while her foes before him cower
She graves his name with steel.

The preacher in the pulpit tries
A deathless name to win;
That may be blazon'd in the skies,
Or Fame's snug niche within.

The artist strives, nor vainly so,
To leave his trail behind;
Where fire can burn or water flow
He makes his mark of mind.

And Fame for thee has found a place,
Freeman, so aptly named;
A benefactor to your race,
For useful virtues fumed.

Right worthy of our praise is he Whose charities abound;
But he who scatters knowledge free
Is strewn pearls around.

From where the light of knowledge shines,
From where our canvass crowds,
From lowest vein in deepest mines,
From mountains in the clouds,

Your list'ning ear and searching eye
Crude rays of knowledge drain,
And from your reservoir supply
The polished gems again.

The name of Freeman Hunt will stand
Among the prized of earth;
An honor to the pilgrim's land
That gave a Franklin birth.

F. M. ADLINGTON, Weymouth.

SONG FOR JULY 4th, 1849.

Old England! some call the gem of the sea,
A pretty tall boat, Mr. Bull, do you see:
But would you the pride of the universe scan Come look at New England, my proud little man.

Our girls are all beautiful, social and bland,
Our boys have been tried on the ocean and land:
You've tried them, old John, and you pretty well know

Their gripe as a friend and their gripe as a foe.
This day we assemble to freshen the fame
Of heroes who won for our country a name;
In consequence, you, father Bull, must be told
How badly you treated your offspring of old.

Tho' long since forgiven you must not forget;
The thorns you then planted are stinging you yet;
Bourgeois and Cornwallis again must appear
And bow their proud necks 'neath the rebels' red spear.

And stubborn old George from his perch must come
down,
To pet the game chicken that pecked at his crown;
All this in your ear while we boast—well we may—
The deeds that our fathers enacted that day.

When bravely they dared the old Bull to defy
And threw down the gauntlet to conquer or die;
Ah! well may we boast of those heroes of old
Who could not be frightened and would not be sold.

Their names shall our bosoms with gratitude fill,
And echoed through time over valley and hill;
We'll put you in mind, Mr. Bull, of that day
When vanquished and sore you abandoned the fray.

When proudly we lifted our stripes and our stars,
Triumphant o'er conquerors in hundreds of wars,
And taught you the lesson that chips from the rock
Have grit that for keenness will match the old block.

F. M. ADLINGTON, Weymouth.

ANECDOTES.

A young man not much accustomed to good society, dining one day at the table of a gentleman where he felt the necessity of bringing into use his choicest language, found his pudding a little too dry. The word sauce (or sass) seemed rather too much like home to be used on this occasion, and being desirous of displaying his acquaintance with the dictionary, he gentilified the term by saying to the lady who presided, "If you please, ma'am, I'll trouble you for half a spoonful of your impudence."

A reverend clergyman in a sermon preached to his people on some particular occasion, said to them that they had always acted with great unanimity and concord; "for," said he, "as often as I have chastised you from the desk, you deserved it, and when I have asked for more salary, you have unanimously refused it."

A ship going over Charleston bar, with a negro pilot on board, the captain asked him, "what water is the ship in?"
"Salt water, massa."
"I know that, you black rascal, but how much water is there?" said the captain.
"Eh, massa," says Sambo, "you tink me bring tin pot for measure um?"

In the district school at Sandwich last winter the master informed a little girl that Sunday was the first day of the week, and inquired of her "what day is Monday?" "It's washing day, sir," answered she.

A Mississippi captain once said that "his boat would run anywhere where it was damp"; but an Arkansas editor, speaking of a new boat in his vicinity, says: "It is calculated to run on a wet chip or a benzy dew."

French Patent Oil for Leather.

THIS French Patent Oil is prepared for Carriages,

Harnesses, Boots, Shoes, and all articles that require a good polish on the surface; it will give any

article of Leather

and at the same time from its oily properties tends

much to preserve it. It will always be moist and pliant,

at the same time free from grease when handled;

there is not a spirit of such an oil invented that would give one-half the brilliancy to the leather to which this is applied, and will never get mouldy. It may be exposed to water or washed, and will not lose its

brilliancy.

It is as well as all other articles made of

leather, when polished with the above oil, will never be injured by rats or mice;—likewise dust has no effect on it, and it is not to be feared that any crust will settle on said leather preserved with the above oil.

Instructions.—Drop a few drops upon a piece of sponge, and all that is required is, to apply it lightly

on the leather to obtain the finest lustre.

Price, 62 1/2 cts. per bottle, or $6 per dozen.

Manufactured by Messrs. Salomon &amp; Co. from Paris.

MISCELLANY.

SETH HAWKINS'S COURTSHIP.

There is a tradition in Hampton, and very generally believed to be true, which, though true or false, throws a bit of romance about the plain matter-of-fact business of Seth Hawkins's courtship—a courtship not otherwise remarkable for incidents other than the common sort, viz: suspicion of intention, accredited attentions, and happy consummation, as "every body does it."

This little incident, so the talk run among the neighbors, was a jewel in its way and shook with laughter the whole community of that quiet town for a long time, from the parson of the parish down to the very toe-nail of the local body politic.

Sunday night was the season which Seth chose on which to do his weekly devotions, as Mrs. Hornby would say; and his road to neighbor Jones's, whose daughter Sally was the object of his particular hope, lay across three long miles of hard territory, stumpy as an old woman's mouth, and as irascible as a prodigal son gone away for the third time.

One all sufficiently dark night, unbedding wind and weather, as gallant and spruce a lover
as ever straddled a stump, Seth, "in best bib and tucker," and dickey, and all that, started upon his accustomed weekly pilgrimage to the shrine of Sally Jones—a sweet girl, by the way,
as strawberries and cream are sweet.

Seth knew every land mark if he could see it; but the night was very dark, and in a little while he became confused in his reckoning;
and taking the light which gleamed from farmer Jones's cottage in the distance for a guide, he pushed boldly on, regardless of intermediate difficulties, surging occasionally to the right or left as some obstruction rose in his path, until he ran stem on, as a sailor would say, to a huge stump, and rolled incontinently over the other side.

He gathered himself up as best he could,
shook himself to ascertain that no bones were broken, and then re-started on his mission of love, his ardor somewhat damped by feeling the cold night wind playing in fantastic jets around his body, denoting that the concussion had breached his ob-fie-for-shames, and that the seven-and-sixpenny cassimere were no more to be the particular delight of his eye in contemplation of their artistic excellence.

He knew not the extent of the damage sustained, but soon gaining the house, his first glance was over his person, to ascertain if decency would be violated by an unwonted display; but seeing nothing, and trusting to the voluminous proportions of his coat for concealment, he felt re-assured, and took his seat in a proffered chair by the fire.

Whilst conversing with the farmer about the weather, and with the dame upon the matter of cheeses, he glanced at Sally, and saw with painful surprise that she was looking anxiously and somewhat strangely towards a portion of his dress. She averted her eyes as she caught his glance, but again catching her eye upon him, he was induced to turn his in the same direction, and saw, good heavens! was it his shirt? oozing out of a six-inch aperture in the inside of one of his inexpressibles! He instantly changed position, and from that moment was on neutles. Was he making more revelations by the change? He watched the first opportunity to push the garment in a little; could he succeed in hiding it, it would relieve his embarrassment. Again he watched his chance, and again stowed away the linen. It seemed intermin-able, (like the Doctor's tape-worm) and the more he worked at it the more there seemed left.

In the meantime his conversation took the hue of his agony, and his answers bore as much relation to the questions asked as the first line of the songs of Solomon does to the melancholy burden of "Old Marm Pettingill."

At last, with one desperate thrust, the whole disappeared, and he cast a triumphant glance toward Sally. One look sufficed to show him that she had comprehended the whole, and with the greatest effort was struggling to prevent a laugh. Meeting his glance, she could contain herself no longer, but screaming, with accumulated fun, she fled from the room; and poor Seth, unable to endure this last turn of his agony, seized his hat and dashed madly from the house, clearing the stumps like a racer in the dark, and reaching home he hardly knew when or how.

As soon as he was gone, Mrs. Jones looked about for a clean night gown that she had out-for service on the back of the chair on which Seth had sat. She was positive she took it out, but where upon earth it was she couldn't conceive.

"Sally!" cried the old lady from the door,
"have you seen my night gown?"

"Yes'em," echoed her voice, as if in the last stage of suffocation, "yes'in, Seth Hawkins wore it home!"

It was unfortunately the case, and poor Seth had stowed it away, in the crevasse of his pants.
It was returned the next day, with an apology;
and he subsequently married Sally, but many years afterwards if any article of any description was missing, of apparel or otherwise, the first suggestion was that Seth Hawkins had stowed
it away in his trousers.

How the story got about nobody knows. He never told it, and Sally never told it nor the old lady, nor the farmer; but every body knows it, and laughed gloriously at it too.—Boston Sunday News.

UNCLE BENJAMIN'S SERMON.

Not many hours ago I heard Uncle Benjamin discussing this matter to his son, who was complaining of pressure.

"Relly upon it Sammy, said the old man, as he leaned on his staff, his grey locks glowing in the breeze of a May morning; murmuring pays no bills. I have been an observer many time fifty years, and I never saw a man helped out of a hole by cursing his horses. Be as quiet as you can, for nothing will grow under a moving harrow, and discontent harrows the mind. Matters are bad, I acknowledge, but no ulcer is any better for fingering. The more you groan, the poorer you grow."

"Repining at losses is only putting pepper in to a sore eye. Crops will fail in all soils, and we may be thankful that we have no famine. Besides, I always took notice that whenever I felt the rod pretty smartly it was as much as to say, 'here is something which you have got to learn.' Sammy, don't forget that your schooling is not over yet, though you have a wife and two children."

"Aye," cried Sammy, "you may say that,
and a mother-in-law, and two apprentices into the bargain, and I should like to know what a poor man can learn here; when the greatest scholars and lawyers are at loggerheads, and can't for their lives tell what has become of hard money."

"Softly, Sammy, I am older than you are;
I have not got these grey hairs and this crooked back without burdens. I could tell you stories of the days of continental money, when my grandfather used to stuff a sulky box with bills to pay for a yearling or a wheat fan, and when the Jersey women used thorns for pins, and laid their teapots away in the garret. You may learn these seven things.

First: that you have saved too little and spent too much. I never taught you to be a miser, but I have seen you give your dollar for a 'notion' when you might have laid one half aside for charity and one half for a rainy day.

Second: that you have gone too much upon credit. I always said credit was a shadow;
there is a substance behind, which casts the shadow, but a smart body may cast a greater and no wise man will follow the shadow any farther than he can see the substance. You may now learn that you have followed a shadow,
and been decoyed into a bog.

Thirdly: that you have gone in too much haste to become rich. Slow and easy wins the race.

Fourthly: that no course of life can be depended upon as always prosperous. I am afraid the younger race of working men in America have a notion that nobody would go to ruin this side of the water. Providence has greatly blessed us, and we have become presumptuous.

Fifthly: that you have not been thankful enough to God for his benefits in past times.

Sixthly: that you may be thankful our lot is not worse. We might have famine, or pestilence, or war or tyranny, or all together.

And lastly, to end my sermon, you may learn to offer with more understanding, the prayer of your infancy. 'Give us this day our daily bread.'

The old man ceased, and Sammy put on his apron and told Dick to blow away at the forge bellows.

CUBA.

This island is 624 miles in extreme length with a width varying from 22 to 117 miles, and covers an area of 37,000 square miles, being about the size of the State of Maine. It contains a population, at the present time, of 1,400,
000, of which about 610,000 are Whites, 190, 000, are free colored and 600,000, slaves. Its imports in 1847 were $32,359,119, of which $7, 049,975 were from the United States. Its exports during the same period were $28,998,700
of which $15,394,876 were to the United States.
In 1847, the number of arrivals, at its ports,
was 3740, and the number of clearances 3343.

Its principal harbors are the finest in the world.

The amount of American tonnage employed in the trade with Cuba is 476,743 tons. It has 195 miles of railroad completed and in successful operation, and 61 miles in course of construction. It is well watered by numerous rivers, and its surface, except in the central portion of the island, diversified with mountains. Only two-fifths of its surface are cultivated. Of the remaining three-fifths unused, one is probably worthless, leaving one-half of its agricultural resources undeveloped. The climate is so gentle that it yields two crops a year of many of its productions. It also abounds in materials for manufacturing purposes, and its mountains contain mines of copper which are worked to considerable advantage.

TREATMENT OF CHOLERA.

The writer of this article is not a physician of any school, nor has he any pecuniary interest, to the value of a cent, in the sale of any cholera specific, or the prevalence of one mode of medical practice more than another. He is of the opinion, however, that one substantial fact, in regard to the treatment of the epidemic cholera, is worth whole acres of speculations and theories;
and that observation and experience are far safer guides, than the wisdom of school men. In '32 and '34 he was in the midst of cholera, and he is now familiar with it. He has seen it in all its forms and phases, and his professional duties, as a clergyman, have brought him in contact with the physicians of every school, and given him ample opportunities of witnessing and comparing their various degrees of success.
Of a large number of cases which have come under his immediate observation, the result is as follows: Of those treated by the "Regular Faculty" something more than one half have died. Homoeopathy and Hydropathy are generally successful; but few of these instances have come under the immediate cognizance of the writer, and he cannot, therefore speak so confidently or precisely from actual knowledge.
With the Botanic or Thomsonian practice, however, he has been quite familiar, and has seen its application in many instances; and he has yet to see the first instance of its failure.
He does not pretend to say, that no instance of this kind has occurred, for it is presumed, that there are cases which are beyond the reach of human means; but, if in the city of Albany, in
'32 and '34, or in this city, during the present epidemic, a man, woman or child has died of cholera under the judicious application of Thomsonian remedies, it has escaped not only the observation but the careful inquiries of the writer.

Many sage counsels have been given to the public in regard to the safe mode to be pursued,
in case of an attack of cholera, but they generally end with the stereotyped phrase, "Send immediately for a physician." Doubtful policy in the judgment of the writer; at any rate, facts prove it to be very unsuccessful in saving life.
The observation of the writer of this has satisfied him that the following is a much safer mode of procedure: On the first approach of cholera, immerse the feet in hot water, as hot as the patient can bear; put into the water a quantity of mustard or pulverized capsicum. [Capsicum pepper] and add hot water as the temperature goes down. If the pains be severe, apply a mustard plaster to the abdomen. Take copious draughts of stimulating drinks;—the "Sudorific Tincture" or the "Cholera Syrup," prepared at most of the Thomsonian Laboratories, is best of all. But, if this is not at hand, a strong decoction of ginger or cayenne will do, and even a hot brandy punch, with the addition of a good shot of essence of peppermint, need not be discarded. Go vigorously to work after this fashion; and if the physician is a well informed man, he will say the patient is doing well, and bid you persevere. It is not the province of the writer to propound any theory on which the above course of treatment is founded, though he is satisfied that it is based upon the only true philosophy of cholera. He recommends it only because in his extended observation he has never known a patient to die of cholera who was thus treated. W.

[We know the writer of the above to be a worthy, truthful, disinterested man, and very gladly publish his testimony; but (as on other cases) without indicating any opinion of our own on the subject. Our ignorance with regard to the Thomsonian practice of Medicine is very dense indeed.—New York Tribune.]

PETER THE GREAT. The Marquis of Caermarthen, who resided in Leicester Square, London, in 1698, gave a ball there, on the 2d of that year, to Peter the Great then on a visit to England. The Marquis and Peter were boon companions—drank brandy together, and were rowed up and down the Thames at all hours of the day and night. It does not appear whether the Czar danced or not; most probably he did not, for he was very shy of showing off before strangers. At a grand ball given by King William at St. James' Palace, he would not mix with the company at all; but at his own request, was put into a small room where he could see all that passed without being seen himself. He was fonder of drinking peppered brandy with Lord Caermathen, than seeing company. Upon another occasion when staying with his Lordship in Leicester Fields, the Czar drank a pint of brandy, and a bottle of sherry before dinner—eight bottles of each afterwards, and then went to play, none the wage, at least, to all outward appearance.

AMERICAN INQUISITIVENESS.

On leaving Boston, a fellow traveler, we were told, as if determined that nothing should surprise us, related many diverting anecdotes to illustrate the inquisitive turn of his countryman.
Among other stories he gave a lively description of a New Englander, who was seated by a reserved companion in a railway-car, and who by way of beginning a conversation said:—

"Are you a bachelor?"

To which the other replied rather dryly.

"No, I am not."

"You are a married man?" continued he.

"No, I am not."

"Then you must be a widower?"

"No, I am not."

Here there was a short pause; but the undaunted querist returned to the charge, observing:—

"If you are neither a bachelor, nor a married man, nor a widower, what in the world can you be?"

"If you must know," said the other, "I am divorced man!"

Another story told me by the same friend,
was that a gentleman being asked, in a stage
coach, how he had lost his leg, made his fellow-travelers promise that if he told them they would put no more questions on the subject.
He then said:—

"It was bitten off."

To have thus precluded them for the rest of a long journey from asking how it was bitten off,
was a truly ingenious method of putting impertinent curiosity on the rack.—Lyell's Second Visit to the United States.

THE BELLE OF THE OLDEN TIME. The following picture of a belle in New York, in 1650, is copied from a new novel entitled "The Young Patron."

"Look now through the doorway which partially reveals the mysteries of a half-acre kitchen, and tell me what you see. I do not want to know about the mountain of freshly fried cookies on the hearth, or the long row of pale and unbaked mince pies on the dresser, or the depth of that Shadrach looking oven, glowing with uncommon heat for reception; but rather—ah
yes, see her now, crimping with white fingers
the edge of the forty second pie, and turning round with a face bewitching in its unconscious beauty, to give a laughing word to her little brother on the floor. That round snowy arm, upraised in playful menace, those soft blue eyes
that glittering teeth, revealed by "chirrup," and that brown glossy hair, scarce kept by force from curling, are part and parcel of little Jessie Van Corlear. The golden beams of the wintry sun, streaming through the window,
are bathing her beautiful form in light, and casting her moving shadows on the floor, thrice strange and wonderful to the little learned there. But Jessie has another sunlight emanating from within, the perpetual product of a joyous and innocent heart, gliding and permeating
all things with its beams;

"She was made for happy thoughts,
For playful wit and laughter,
Singing on the hills alone,
And echo singing after."

THE YNAKEE AND THE JEW. He told me a trick of his the other day. Said he, "I once took out an adventure of gloves to—, where I thought they would sell to a charm. Well, I got there, but the devil a glove could I get any body to take. At last came a sneaky, long-bearded, smiling Jew, and offered me a sum below costs, and rather than carry the gloves back again, I left him have 'em—but I thought it playful strange that nobody else would buy.
Before I left, tho', I smelt the rat. The Aminad-ab had gone round to all the merchants, arranged it with them to let him buy at a discount and share the goods. 'Not as you know on boys,' thinks I to myself—here the Captain put his finger on his nose and winked—'you don't fleece me, Jew or no Jew.' The next month I went back to the same place on the same errand —nobody would buy the gloves, as I hoped, except that son of a gun of an Aminadab, and he took 'em as before, below cost, and was off."

"You're trapped my old rat," says I to myself.
It wasn't half an hour before down he came to the ship. 'You—you—you've cheated me,' says he. 'I haven't,' says I. 'You have,' says
he, 'those gloves are all of one hand.' 'I know it,' says I, 'and I could have told you so afore
you took 'em if you'd a thought to ask.' 'You must take 'em back,' cried he. 'I'll be—' if I do,' answered I. 'It'll ruin me,' snivelled he.
So much the better,' says I. 'I know you—you villain, and you've brought your goods to a bad market, if you think to weasel me—now give me —, (I named a round sum I tell ye)
'and I'll let you have the mates.' He had to do it—so I out with the mates and got the money from the snivelling Aminadab who looked as dumb founded as a cow with her tail cut off!"

THE OCEAN. The great Pacific Ocean has a larger area than all the dry land on the globe. It covers 50,000,000 of square miles, and 70,000-000, including the Indian Ocean. From Peru to Africa it is 16,000 miles wide. It is generally unfathomable between the tropics, where its depth is so great, that a line five miles long has in many places not reached the bottom. The Atlantic Ocean, apparently stretching from pole to pole, is 6000, wide, and covers 25,000,000, square miles.

THE ENGLISH. A characteristic of the English is economy, and it is a virtue easier practised by them, than by most other people; since they have less than most others of 'false pride.'
The Englishman is not ashamed to live within his means. If he is poor, he has no wish to be thought otherwise. He scruples not to tell you, he foregoes this gratification or that, because he cannot afford it. He has therefore, few temptations to the extravagance, which strains everything to keep up appearances. A London merchant of half a million will dine for an english shilling, when a New York shop keeper, doing business on credit, would pay a crown for his dinner. The latter lives in a fine house; the former contents himself with a modest one.
The American dresses less inexpensively, less simply, and at the same time less comfortably, than the Englishman. We were told by a Leeds woollen manufacturer, that most of their finest cloths are exported to America. On occasions, it is true, certain portions of the English dress incomparably more expensively than ever any do among us, more expensively, than, with the exception of a few millionaires, any among us could dress. But all classes over there, liveried servants and gaudies excepted, usually dress simply.—H. Clapp.

ALL SORTS OF FACTS. The oak tree lives in a state of nature one thousand five hundred years. Hour-glasses were invented at Alexandria one hundred and fifty years before Christ.
The sum of fifteen million dollars is expended
each year in London for intoxicating drinks.
Vaccination was first tried upon the condemned criminals, in the year 1721. The interest of the national debt of Great Britain is over twenty-four million pounds sterling. Looking glasses were first made at Venice, in the year 1300.
Iron was first discovered by the burning of Mount Ida, one thousand four hundred and five years before Christ. Muslims were first manufactured in England, during the year 970. Air is eight hundred and sixteen times lighter than its bulk in water. Military uniforms were first adopted in France, by King Louis XIV. The plague in Europe, Asia, and Africa, commencing in the year 658, lasted for fifty years. Linen was first discovered and made in England, in the year 1239. The average coinage of the mint of Great Britain for the last thirty years is eighteen million pounds sterling per annum.
Microscopes were first invented and used in Germany in 1621. The cost of cigars smoked every day in New York City is ten thousand dollars. The first literary magazine in America was published by Franklin, in 1741.

SIR HENRY CLINTON. Sir Henry was grandson of FRANCIS, the sixth Earl of Lincoln. He was a Knight of Bath, and received the appointment of general in the British army sent to America, 1775. He succeeded General Howe in the chief command here, in the spring of 1778
soon after which he evacuated Philadelphia.
He continued in command until succeeded by Sir Guy Carleton, toward the close of the war.
His most successful operations here were the taking of the forts among the Hudson Highlands, in 1777, and the siege of Charleston in 1780. He returned to England in 1782, where he and Cornwallis published antagonistic accounts of the American war. He was Governor of Gibraltar, in 1785, and, about the same time, a member of Parliament for Newark. He died in 1786. It is said that the average weight of the two Howes, and Cornwallis and Clinton, was over two hundred pounds.

MARRIAGES. Look at the great mass of marriages that take place over the whole world—what poor contemptible affairs they are! A few soft looks, a walk a dance, a squeeze of the hand, a popping of the question, a purchase of a certain number of yards of white satin, a ring, a clergyman, a stage, or two in hired carriage, a night
in a country inn, and the whole matter is over.
For five or six weeks, two sheepish looking persons are seen dangling on each other's arms
looking at waterfalls, or making morning calls and guzzling wine and cakes, then everything falls into the most monotonous routine, the wife sits on one side of the hearth, and the husband on the other; and little quarrels, little pleasures, and little children gather around them.
This is what ninety out of a hundred find to be the delights of matrimony.

THE NUTMEG STATE. In Connecticut there are 137 cotton mills, consuming yearly 13, 319, 179 pounds of cotton, and manufacturing 33,431,
985 yards of cloth, 1,872,563 pounds of yarn, 70,000 dozen spoons of thread, 608,547 pounds
bating, 30,000 dozen sheets of pelisse wadding, 47,817 yards cotton flannel. The amount of capital invested is $3,312,450. There are 2312 males and 3060 females employed in this business.

A GOOD WIFE. Oh it is beautiful to live blameless under the poisoned glance of the world; poisoned whether it be praise or blame;
beautiful not to be polluted by its observation,
but more beautiful to be intimately known to one, to possess gentle and honest friend, and that friend a wife. Beautiful to be able to purify the soul as in a mirror, and to be aware, therefore, of every blot of one's own soul, and to be able to purify it against the day of the great trial.

Reader did you ever enjoy the extatic bliss of courtship? You didn't! Then you had better get a little Gal-an-try.

P. LOW'S UNION HOT AIR Cooking Stove and Fuel Saver.

THIS is a most beautiful and extraordinary Cooking Stove. The even and regular application of the heat to the Oven, gives this Stove all the advantages of a brick Oven—while at the same time the boiler holes are so constructed that the heat is immediately applied to the boilers from the fire pit, which makes this stove the most complete and finished Air Tight Cook Stove in America.

AS A COAL COOKING STOVE.

It is just suited for the use of families in cities and villages, and will perform the cooking of a family of from 2 to 5, 10 or 20 persons with certainty and despatch. The fire-chamber is constructed of a size, form and depth, to burn coal with the greatest freedom and economy. WOOD may be used with equal advantage by simply dispensing with the brick lining of the fire-chamber.

A SUMMER APPARATUS

is attached to the front, affording, of itself, ample convenience for light summer work, without the unpleasant effects and expense of heating up the main body of the stove; it may also be used at the same time that the rest of the stove is occupied, greatly adding to its value, and rendering it altogether the most efficient Cooking Stove for the class of families for whom it is expressly designed, ever yet invented.

Any person who will give this stove a fair trial, will be convinced of its superiority for Economy, Convenience and DURABILITY, over any other Air-Tight Cooking Stove.

Its price brings it within the means of all families who want a good stove.

A pamphlet containing a description and directions for fitting up and using this Stove is furnished, gratis, to every purchaser.

These Stoves of the different sizes may be examined at the

NORFOLK ss. Before Francis Hilliard, Esq., Commissioner of Insolvency in and for the County of Norfolk.

In the matter of John V. Clark, of Quincy, in said County, an insolvent debtor,

The undersigned, a creditor of said Clark, has duly proved her claim against his said estate, and respectfully requests that the proceedings in this case may be stayed, and that after due notice and notice to all persons interested, an order may be passed vacating all the proceedings in the case.

(Signed) SUSAN SARGENT.
Quincy, July 5th, 1849.

ON the foregoing petition it is ordered that William P. Ryan of Randolph the assignee appointed in said case give notice of said petition, and also call a meeting of all persons interested in said estate for the purpose of acting therein and showing cause, (if any) why the prayer thereof should not be granted, on the fourth day of September next at three o'clock in the afternoon, at a Court of Insolvency to be then and there held in said County, and said notice to be in the hands of my office in the County of Norfolk, a newspaper printed at Quincy, and also sent in writing to all known creditors and all persons interested in the estate of said Clark, and to said Clark the insolvent; and the said assignee is further directed to make return at said Court of this order and of his doings thereon.

Witness my hand this fifth day of July, in the year one thousand eight hundred and forty nine.

To the Honorable Judge of the Court of Probate for the County of Norfolk:

THE Petition of WILLIAM DITSON, Administrator of the Goods and Estate of BETSEY THAYER, late of Quincy, in said County, Widow, deceased, respectfully represents, that the said deceased had at the time of her death real estate consisting of seventy five rods of land held for a term of one hundred years, of which more than fifty years remain unexpired, with a Dwelling House and Stable thereon, situated on the southerly side of Hancock Street, near the Town House, in said Quincy, of the value of $2700, and that the lawful claims against the estate of said deceased for just debts, including funeral expenses, amount to $250.53, and that the charges of administration are $85, making the whole estate $2614.47, being insufficient by the sum of $259.03 to satisfy said claims, and that said estate is so situated that by a partial sale thereof the remainder would be greatly injured—and that the persons interested in the estate of said deceased as heirs or otherwise, are Sarah C. Underwood, wife of William Dison, and Elizabeth E. French, wife of George H. French of said Quincy, and the creditors of said Betsey Underwood, Jr., who have attached to said petition as true copies of the said Administrator's report, and prays that he may be licensed and empowered to sell and convey the whole of said real estate, first taking the oath and giving the bond by law in such cases required.

MISCELLANY.

THE YOUNG WIFE.

It was little after midnight, when M. de Langeais entered his wife's apartment.

You here! at this hour! exclaimed Madame de Langeais, with astonishment, mingled with terror; are you ill sir?

I have never felt better, replied M. de Langeais.

Have you received any unpleasant news
then? said the young dame.

No, madame, fortunately I have no ill news;
besides, you know that if I had, my affection
for you would induce me to conceal it.

As he spoke, M. de Langeais seated himself in an arm-chair, and by a sign, directed his wife's waiting-maid to withdraw. M. de Langeais had passed his sixtieth year; he was a small, meagre, old man, somewhat infirm in health, but still active and sprightly, intelligent and kind; his small eyes had not yet lost the fire of youth, and it was with a shade of irony, quite common with him that he said to his wife—

Perhaps I disturb you, madame! I have chosen rather an untimely moment to enter your apartment; pardon me—you have been so seriously occupied during the day, that I could not come more opportunely.

Madame de Langeais did not reply; at her husband's request she took a seat near him, turning red and pale alternately, a circumstance
which M. de Langeais did not fail to remark;
and as he contemplated the young and beautiful face before him, as she remembered his age, and the advanced hour of the night, he understood, as he thought the cause of Madame de Langeais' surprise and disquietude.

I ask but an hour, madame—an hour of conversation; no more, he hastened to say, with kindness. You are twenty six years of age, madame, he added, and I might easily be your grandfather; my marriage with you, ridiculous in the eyes of the world is not so in the opinions of those who are acquainted with the motives which led to it; and you know them better than any one else, Clemence.

Oh, sir! murmured the young wife casting down her eyes. I have never uttered complaint or regret.

Ah! I know it, my friend, cried the old man;
neither is there the slightest reproach intended by my words; you are the best creature I have ever known, and if I recall these remembrances it is because they are sweet and precious to me. It is now ten years—you were then sixteen—when your father first spoke to you of marrying me; he was at that time, suffering under the fatal malady to which he fell a victim, and his circumstances were greatly embarrassed; you were ignorant of these two facts,
and you learn them, for the first time, to-day—
is it not so madame!

How! said Clemence, my father not rich?

He left you nothing but some debts which I have discharged, said M. de Langeais, and still at your father's proposal you leaped for joy—
you seemed delighted at the thoughts of espousing a man, whom you had known from childhood, and whom you called your good friend. I had an interview with you then. I told you that I loved you with all my heart, and that I should be delighted to give you my name; but at the same time, I placed before your eyes the certificate of my baptism, showing you how much older I was, even than your father; and as you thought you were still rich,
it was freely, and at your own choice, that you became my wife. Your father felt that he was near his end, and in giving you to me, he left this world without anxiety for his only child;
you loved me and you were happy in a marriage which would have alarmed any other maiden, even less beautiful and less young than you were then. I looked upon you with an emotion which would have terrified me, if I had not been convinced of your friendship and love. To these circumstances united, Clemence, I owe ten years of happiness, the ten most pleasant years of my life.

Ah, sir, what is the matter? cried Madame de Langeais in great agitation; why thus recall the past? I deny nothing sir, I remember all—

Permit me, madame, interposed the husband, it is to thank you for your love, that I have come here; nay it is to excuse myself for a fault, he added with a slight smile of benevolence.

You, Sir—you culpable towards me? Ah, no, no, sir! never!

Yes culpable towards you madam; and your entire forgetfulness of your own interest is the greatest proof of it. I am rich, and when your father gave you to me, it was that this wealth might one day revert to you; this is the avowed or tacit condition of every marriage between a young girl and an old man. I have engaged to enrich you not by any contract—not by any promise—for your father was a man of too much delicacy to demand anything like that—but I am pledged to do so by honor. Well, this condition has, until yesterday, been left unfulfilled, and what would have become of you if death had suddenly surprised me? My entire family would have seized upon my inheritance, and, as in our marriage contract, I had assigned you no dowry, they would have driven you from this mansion—they would have despoiled you of my lands, of my personal property—of your jewels even. De Langeais' widow, poor and destitute would have sued in vain for alimony. This is my crime, madame—a crime which your natural generosity has prevented you from suspecting, but of which I have not the less been guilty.

M. de Langeais then drew from his pocket a sealed paper, and placed it in his wife's hands.

There, madame, he said, that is for you, it is my will—let not this word alarm you—such a precaution has never yet caused the death of a testator. I appoint you my sole heiress; in the first place because it is my duty as I have just told you, next because even if you were wealthy in your own right, I would still give this mark of esteem and gratitude; for you love me, and I love none but you in the world.

M. de Langeais rose, approached his wife,
and pressed a kiss upon her forehead; that forehead was cold as if it had been of marble.

What is the matter, madam; explained he,
are you ill?

The old man was about to touch the bellchord; his wife prevented him and cast herself at his feet.

Ah sir, she exclaimed, you do not know to whom you have been talking. I merit neither your praises nor your benefits. I am false to you sir; I dishonor you. Had you not entered my chamber this night my good angel would have abandoned me!

What say you? Rise madam, I pray you!
Madame de Langeais rose, then took the will and tore it to pieces.

I wish nothing, sir; I deserve nothing! she said—

Pray tell me what you mean, said the old man in astonishment.

I love another! faltered the wife, and this night would have accomplished my ruin, had not heaven directed your mind to save me. The subject of my affection had my consent to an interview after you had retired; but now I am overwhelmed with your goodness! I cannot look at your face again—never, never. And now, sir, drive me from your presence; banish me from your house: to whatever place you may command me to go, and conceal my fault.
I will obey without a murmur. There are husbands who think that they can pardon without shame, a faithless wife; your part is easier, sir,
if you are willing to be indulgent; I am innocent; my heart alone has yielded, my head alone has been feeble. You see, sir, my candor should be a guarantee to you; where is the woman who confesses a weakness of which she intends to be guilty.

M. de Langeais turned his eyes towards the clock, and then pulled the cord of the bell. The waiting maid entered.

A person, he said, is to pay a visit to Madame de Langeais to night and you were to admit him. When he comes you will lead him in.

Yes, sir.

What waiting maid? cried the young wife, when her waiting maid had left the apartment. Do you intend to expose your life, or prolong my shame and my torture.

Neither the one nor the other, madame.

Ah, sir, I implore you, do not cause me to die with shame and grief: spare your wife, culpable as she may be; reflect, sir, that I bear your name; that all this may be buried in the most profound forgetfulness, if you are willing.
I will never see this man again, I no longer
love him sir, I assure you.

Pardon me, madame, you love him still; you know that he is enamored, and you believe him devoted. You love him still, I say.

Oh, sir, spare me! do not permit me to see him again!

You need not see him, madame, replied her husband; you can pass into my apartment or conceal yourself in this cabinet—where you can hear all.

Madame de Langeais' head sunk upon her bosom, and she entered the cabinet, the door of which she left partly open, so that she could hear and even see all that passed. The tingle of the clock was still vibrating in the air, when a young man rushed into the apartment, with all the eagerness of a happy lover, who at last reaches the goal of his wishes, and whose first movement is to cast himself at the feet of the beauty who has been captivated by his passion and his boldness; he was near seizing the hand of M. de Langeais to bring it to his lips; no sooner had he perceived his error, than he started backward.

Sir, I protest—said the disappointed gallant,
it is useless to deny anything, sir; I know all; my wife is no longer here, I have removed her from your pursuits, and this is very natural;
that which is less so is that I receive you in her place. If I were twenty years younger you would never leave this chamber alive; but age blunts the passion; it leads us to view things more calmly and more reasonably than we view them in youth. We do justice to ourselves and to others, which is scarcely the case with the young and the passionate. For myself, sir, since I have known of my wife's love and yours, I have reflected upon what I should do, and I am old—my hair is white: it would be easy for two young people like you to deceive
my vigilance, and lull my jealousy into sleep;
the more restless and anxious I become, the more odious and ridiculous I shall appear in the eyes of my wife. I have not the firmness to submit to this part, and if you are a man of honor, let us leap over the law; when we cannot untie a knot we must break it; elope therefore,
with my wife.

How, sir?

Do you hesitate? continued M. de Langeais;
since you have paid your court to her, you have incessantly repeated to her (this is, at least the usual language of lovers), that she is young, that she is beautiful, that to obtain her you would lay down your life; you have added, doubtless, that heaven is not just, in having united so much youth and freshness to an infirm old man, who can neither appreciate or love them. This old man resigns all to you;
Italy, Spain, the United States, England the North and the South, the universe, offer a thousand places of asylum, where you can love freely; you need but change your name to be protected against public opinion. From what I have said you comprehend that I shall not pursue you—you can set out to-night, I received my wife without a dowry, and I will resign her to you as I received her. There will be neither noise nor scandal. I will tell my friends that my wife is living on one of my estates; after a lapse of a year or two I will put on mourning; she will be dead. Paris is so indifferent and so forgetful, that no one will inquire into the truth. I repeat it—you can set out to-morrow—this very night if you wish.
How, sir—you stand cold and mute! You do not cast yourself into my arms; you do not thank me with tears of gratitude! What then has brought you here? Not content with deceiving me, are you also deceiving her whom you wished to lead astray. Do you not love my wife, then sir? You are, then, not a man deeply enamored, but simply a knave, who would, apparently, deem it convenient, to find an old man to outrage a woman to dishonor, without losing his position or the opportunity of transferring, to-morrow, to another object, a false and egotistical love. Coward! who fastens himself upon an old man, because he thinks he can outrage him with impunity, but who would have recoiled before a dangerous intrigue if M.
de Langeais had been as young as he! With these words M. de Langeais opened the door of the cabinet, and the bitter smile of the young wife completed the confusion of the profligate
youth, who hastily withdrew from the house.

And now said M. de Langeais, addressing his wife, you will think no more of it; you will regret him no more; you will love him no longer;
you will despise him.

The husband pardoned her; the will was made anew, without a single alteration. Madame de Langeais is now a widow; and a rich widow; no one knows whether she will marry again; but it is certain that she will never perpetrate the man who wished to lead her from the path of duty.

IMMATURE FRUIT—FRUIT TREES. Now is the time to commence gathering up the immature fruit which is cast by apple, pear and other trees, and which, if not destroyed, will prove a bane to the crop another year. Apple orchards should by no means be neglected at this season;
when the apples commence falling, pick every one as soon as possible after it reaches the ground, and let the apples be fed immediately to your swine, or other animals. This will destroy the progeny of the fly which is encased in the pulp, or core, ready to spring forth and perpetuate the evil through another season, and a succeeding generation. In the autumn remove the sward about the stalks of large trees,
and place a bushel or so of ashes, air-slacked lime, gypsum and salt around each stock. If the trees are very large, or more than medium size, the quantity may be increased. Old, well rotted manure may be beneficially applied to the surface, after the above application has been made, especially if the trees manifest any symptoms of disease, or lack of energy from old age.

Trimming in August or September is now generally recommended by orchardists. It has many arguments in its favor; the only objection to the system that we are aware of, being the loss of fruit with which it is attended. But this is a matter of small comparative importance as but few limbs are cut off, and the amount of fruit lost by the amputation too insignificant, in many cases, to be entitled to the least regard.

We have little pity on others until we are in a situation to claim it ourselves.

ARE RIPE FRUITS HEALTHY IN CHOLERA? A distinguished physician of Boston, who was asked this question, replied that he would as-soon raise the question, is bread safe during cholera? "Fruits [ripe fruits,] next to bread, are the staple in human diet. Of this there can be no reasonable doubt. They not only may be eaten freely when in a perfect state, but should be. Used in a proper manner, not only generally but in a time of cholera, they are not merely innocuous, they are positively and greatly useful. They should be regarded always as food, and eaten as such. They should make a part of our meals, not an addition to them.
Certain parts of many of our fruits should be rejected with care. Thus, in eating the grape we should reject the husk and seeds; in eating the apple, pear, &c., the seeds; in eating the cherry the stone or kernel. Those who have feeble stomachs, whether in children or adults, should go further, and reject the skins of many of the fruits, the stringy part of the orange, plum, &c. Fruits and milk do not go well together—that is at the same time.

SARDONIC LAUGH. Taylor, in his description of Greece, says:—"Sardinia is free from all kinds of poisonous and deadly herbs, excepting one herb, which, resembles parsley, and which they say, causes those who eat it to die laughing."
Homer first, and others after him, call laughter which conceals some noxious design, Sardonian-can.

ETHIOPIANS. A new race of people have been recently found in the interior of Africa,
which partakes somewhat of the marvellous.
The men are represented to be tall and powerfully built, standing seven to seven and a half English feet in height, and black in color, but destitute of the usual characteristics of negroes in features. Mehemet Ali sent an expedition up to the white Nile in search of gold, and there found this race of people, fifteen hundred of whom, armed to the teeth, came down to the shore of the river, where the vessel lay. The name of the kingdom is Bari, and its capital Pantania. They raise wheat tobacco, &c., and manufacture, their own weapons. They are probably the ancient Ethiopians spoken of in the Scripture.

DOMESTIC ENDEARMENTS. I hold it indeed to be a sure sign of a mind not poised as it ought to be, if it be insensible to the pleasures of home,
to the little joys and endearments of a family to the affection of relations, to the fidelity of domestics. Next to being well with his own conscience, the friendship and attachment of a man's family and dependants seems to me one of the most comfortable circumstances of his lot.
His situation, with regard to either, forms that sort of bosom comfort of disquiet that sticks close to him at all times and seasons, and which, though he may now and then forget it, amidst the bustle of public or the hurry of active life resume its place in his thoughts, and its permanent effect on his happiness, at every pause of ambition or of business.

CURE FOR THE HICUPS. Hold up, high above your head, two fingers of your hand; lean back in your seat, open your mouth and throat, so as to give a free passage to your lungs; breathe very long and softly, and look steadily at your fingers. In less than two minutes the cure will be performed.

THE DAUGHTER. There is nothing more desirable in a daughter than intelligence joined to a gentle spirit. The mind is fashioned and furnished in the main at school. But the character is derived chiefly from home. How estimable is the confidence of that mother in producing kind feelings in the bosom of her children, who never permits herself to speak to them
with a loud voice, and in harsh, unkind tones!

ENJOYMENT OF LIFE. Two wealthy citizens of Boston, now considerably advanced in life, were lately conversing in regard to the period when they had best enjoyed themselves. "I will tell you," says one "when I best enjoyed life, soon after I was twenty-one, I worked for Mr. — laying stone wall, at twenty-five cents per day."

Well, replied the other, that does not differ much from my experience; when I was twenty I hired out at seven dollars per month;
I have never enjoyed myself better since. The experience of these two individuals teaches—first, that one's happiness does not depend on the amount of his gains or the station he may occupy; second, that very small beginnings with industry and prudence may secure wealth.

CURING TOMATOES. Get sound tomatoes, peel and prepare them the same as for cooking
—squeeze them as fine as possible—put them in a kettle, bring them to a boil, season with salt and pepper, according to taste, and put them in stone jars that have been boiled at the time in another kettle—seal the jars immediately, and keep them in a cool place—until used. They will be found, when used by being stewed and brought on the table, to be equal to those we purchase at this season at the markets.

A FEW THINGS TO AVOID. A bottle of wine at a public dinner. A short cut when you are in a hurry. Walking between two umbrellas on a pouring wet day. "Just another glass before you go." Going to church without a shilling.
Being the mediator of a quarrel between a man and his wife. Bowing to a lady from the top of a cab. And lastly, taking a new hat to an evening ride.

DORCHESTER SCHOOLS.—NO. 10.

The annual visitation of the schools in District No. 6, Upper Mills, consisting of Primary, Miss Susan Thompson, teacher; and Grammar, under the charge of Mr. Simon Barrows, assisted, a portion of the year, by Miss Mary Ann Hammond, took place Tuesday, Feb. 27, last. The members of the Committee assigned to these Schools, were Messrs. Houghton, Dyer, Pierce and Macintosh. The friends of the scholars, on this occasion, pretty generally attended; but it appears to the writer, that, notwithstanding a very marked change for the better was then, and has been for some time manifest, yet more general interest and more active and united effort, on the part of the parents in this district, is desirable. No school ever did nor can prosper and come up to a satisfactory position where cold indifference or in-attention pervades the community. A good school is made up of individual good scholars, the circle is of straight lines, and hence each parent and each child is individually responsible for a good or bad school.

The children and youth composing these schools are naturally of as clear heads and as bright intellects, as those of the other schools;
yet, far in rear of others in town. And why is it? There certainly must be valid cause or causes. Now it is believed that no school in town, has a better qualified and a more devoted and enthusiastic teacher than the one who presides over the destinies of Grammar School, number six.

The idea that the fault is with the teacher,
in this case, is preposterous, absurd. It therefore must, to a great extent, rest with the parents. With all kindness let two or three very great evils be named which exist, in this district,—evils too which parents alone can remove, and are of such magnitude and importance as to call loudly for immediate reforms.
The first to which attention is requested, is the keeping children at home when they should be at the school. It cannot be doubted for a moment that occasional absences can scarcely be avoided. But it is equally clear that parents in all portions of the town, and very especially at the Upper Mills, are too much inclined to allow their children to stay away from school for slight and insufficient causes, not caring or considering the operation of this evil upon the school. An experienced teacher, in commenting on the sad effects of absences takes for an illustration a class of four bright boys in Colburn's First Lessons, and any other branch of study might with equal propriety have been taken. During the first week of the term all may be present, and go on with cheerfulness and success. The second week A. is absent.
On his return the whole class must be put back and wait for him in comparative idleness, or the unhappy delinquent, required to solve problems for which he is not prepared, must come hobbling on, mortified, irritated and discouraged that he cannot successfully accomplish his tasks. The third week of the term, B. is absent. On his return all must be put back again, or attempt to go forward with two land and lingering associates instead of one. The fourth week C. stays away, and the same destructive process must be repeated. Nor will the class be reduced to its original level even if
D. should have the misfortune to take his turn upon the list of defaulters. A. lost the lessons of the second week, B. of the third, C. of the fourth, and D. of the fifth. If each delinquent is to be waited for, the progress must be at the very best like that of the frog in the well, who jumped up three feet every night and fell back two feet every day. Or, if there is to be no waiting one for the other, then by the beginning of the sixth week of the term, not a scholar remains in the class capable of going intelligently or successfully forward. It is easy to see that a class, aye, a whole school may be ruined, absolutely ruined, and the brightest and most promising set of scholars turned into sluggards and apparent dolts, by their repeated absences.

It can be said with truth that this evil is not so aggravated a character as in former years.
But it still exists to so formidable a degree as to keep the school comparatively low. It must be conceded the fault rests for the most part on parents, and if so, it must also be conceded, that the reform, so important to the well-being of their children and the success of the schools, must be brought about by parents. The next evil and it always follows in the train of absences and tardiness, is the leave to go home before the business of the school room is completed. The school room during school hours, is the place where all the children and youth between the ages of four and sixteen, are bound to be, unless unavoidably detained. Now the writer would not interfere with the domestic arrangements of any family in town, but would seriously and most respectfully inquire, of some of the families at the Upper Mills, if they cannot, in order to promote the highest interests of their dearly loved ones, make arrangements in some way, without interfering in the least with their own interests, to prevent their children being so frequently called from the school room during school hours. The practical effects of a license to leave and go home before the business of the school room is finished, are, in some respects, more disastrous to the interests of a school than absences and tardiness. Parents, who you think seriously on these matters and make united and strenuous efforts to eradicate these evils? Mr. Barrows has ever been, it is believed, prompt, faithful and devoted. You would find fault, and justly too, if he should frequently be tardy, absent, and should daily

Norfolk Agricultural Society.

CATTLE SHOW AND FAIR.

THE Officers and Trustees of the Norfolk Agricultural Society announce to the public that their first annual exhibition will take place at Dedham, on WEDNESDAY, the 26th day of September next.

This Society was formed and incorporated the present year, for the encouragement of AGRICULTURE, and HORTICULTURE, MANUFACTURING and ME-CHANIC ARTS, in the County of Norfolk. In order to promote the important objects comprehended in its plan, the Trustees deem it expedient and essential to hold annual exhibitions, at which the products of agricultural science and industry, mechanical skill and ingenuity, may be displayed before the public. They believe that such exhibitions cannot fail to produce a generous and healthy rivalry in all the departments
of useful industry, stimulate exertion, and encourage modest and deserving merit, elevate and inform the public taste, awaken to life and activity improved talents, ingenuity and skill, contribute to the increase and diffusion of valuable knowledge, and, in short,
tend generally to the cultivation, improvement, prosperity and happiness of the whole people.

They, therefore, respectfully invite the Agriculturists, Horticulturists, Manufacturers, Mechanics and Artisans of the County of Norfolk, to offer for exhibition and premium, at the time and place above mentioned, the products of their labor, skill, ingenuity and taste in all the departments of useful and ornamental industry, such as Boots, Shoes, Carpets, Manufactures of Straw, Wool, Metal, Cotton,
Flax, &c. &c. Specimens of FEMALE TASTE and IN-GENUITY are especially solicited, and it is expected that they will form an interesting and attractive part
of the exhibition.

The products of Agriculture, Agricultural Emple-ments, Domestic Manufactures, Prizes, &c., &c., for which premiums are offered, are especially enumerated in the list of premiums before published by order of the Society—to which we beg respectfully to refer—but the Trustees, stepping beyond those limits, desire to appeal to the public spirit and local pride of Mechanics, Inventors, and Artisans, for the means of forming an exhibition which shall be creditable to
the taste, ingenuity, and skill of our people, and honorable to the county.

As far as it may be within the power of the Society,
at its first exhibition, Premiums, Gratuities and Diplomas will be awarded for all articles of merit deemed worthy of such distinction. Judges will be appointed to examine and report upon all articles that may be offered, and lists of such articles, with the names of producers, manufacturers or inventors, will
be preserved in the records of the Society, and published for the information and benefit of the community.

Contributions will be received on the day previous
to the exhibition, and until 9 o'clock of the same day.
Persons intending to compete for the premiums on Ploughing, are reminded that they are required to enter their names with the Secretary on or before SAT-URDAY, the 22d of September.

All packages by Railroad or otherwise, intended for the exhibition, and all communications, must be addressed to the Secretary, at Dedham, who will see that they are properly attended to. Checks will be given for all articles received, which will entitle the
bearer to the same at the close of the exhibition.
Contributors are especially requested to send forward their articles in good season, to prevent confusion, and in order that they may be properly arranged.
Contributors will be entitled to free admission to the Hall of Exhibition.

The Exhibition will commence at 9 o'clock, A. M.
Ploughing Match at 10 o'clock, A. M. Address by the President in the Rev. Dr. Lamson's Meeting-house, at 11 1/2 o'clock. Collection at 1 o'clock. Drawing March at 3 o'clock, P. M. Award of Premiums at 5 o'clock, P. M.

NEW VOLUME OF THE Scientific American.

THE Publishers of the Scientific American, in recognizing their thanks to the community for the liberal support and encouragement which has been extended to them during the past four years, would respectfully give notice that the 1st number of Volume 5, will be issued on the 22d of Sept., affording a favorable opportunity for all to subscribers, who may wish to avail themselves of the valuable information always found in its columns. The new volume will be commenced with new type, printed on extra fine
paper, manufactured expressly for this publication, and embellished with a choice and elegant border. It will be published as heretofore in quarto form, thus affording at the end of the year a beautiful Book of over 400 Pages, containing between 5 and 600 Original Engravings of New Inventions, described by letters of reference, besides a great amount of reading matter,
valuable to every man in the country.

An increased amount of care and expense will be bestowed upon this Volume, to render it more fully
what it has been termed, 'The Best Mechanical Paper in the World.' Its columns as usual will be filled with the most reliable and correct information in regard to the progress of Scientific and Mechanical improvements, Chemistry, Architecture, Botany, Manufactures, Rail Road intelligence, and the Weekly List
of Patents, prepared expressly for this Journal at the Patent Office Washington.

As an evidence of the estimation in which this publication is held by the Scientific and Mechanical portion of the community, it is only necessary to state,
that its circulation has increased within the last three years to upwards of ten thousand copies, already exceeding the united circulation of all the Mechanical and Scientific publications in this country, and the largest of any single one in the world.

Terms—Two dollars a year in advance, or if delivered, one dollar in advance, and the remainder in six months.

TO CLUBS—5 copies, $8; 10 copies, $16; 20 copies, $32. All letters must be post paid and directed to MUNN & Co., Publishers of the Scientific American, New York.

N. B.—Patents secured and mechanical drawings executed on the most reasonable terms at the Scientific American office.

P. LOW'S UNION HOT AIR Cooking Stove and Fuel Saver.

THIS is a most beautiful and extraordinary Cooking Stove. The even and regular application of the heat to the Oven, gives this Stove all the advantages of a brick Oven—while at the same time the boiler holes are so constructed that the heat is immediately applied to the boilers from the fire pit, which makes this stove the most complete and finished Air Tight Cook Stove in America.

AS A COAL COOKING STOVE,
it is just suited for the use of families in cities and villages, and will perform the cooking of a family of from 2 to 8, 10 or 20 persons with certainty and dispatch. The fire-chamber is constructed of a size, form and depth, to burn coal with the greatest freedom and economy. WOOD may be used with equal advantage by simply dispensing with the brick lining of the fire-chamber.

A SUMMER APPARATUS
is attached to the front, affording, of itself, ample convenience for light summer work, without the unpleas-
ing effects and expense of heating up the main body of the stove; it may also be used at the same time that the rest of the stove is occupied, greatly adding to its value, and rendering it altogether the most efficient
Cooking Stove for the class of families for whom it is expressly designed, ever yet invented.

Any person who will give this stove a fair trial, will be convinced of its superiority for Economy, Convenience and DURABILITY, over any other Air Tight Cooking Stove.

Its price brings it within the means of all families who want a good stove.
A pamphlet containing a description and directions for fitting up and using this Stove is furnished, gratis,
to every purchaser.

These Stoves of the different sizes may be examined at the Tin and Sheet Iron Manufactory
of the Agent in this town.

E. S. FELLOWS, Agent for the above Stove, has also for sale at his Store, the REGULATOR, ECON-OMIST & Co., and various other patterns of Cook Stove, as well as PARLOR, OFFICE, and CYLINDER.

SHEET IRON, TIN AND COPPER WORK done to order,

Of the best Materials, and in a workmanlike manner.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.
THE PIC NIC.

Well here we are, all full of glee,
And met to have a jovial spree;
With spirits bright and handy;
But now be careful, stay not late
For women's charms intoxicate
A little more than brandy.

Yes, much alike they seem to be,
Tis hard from either to get free,
When once you're fairly taken;
He who adores a bonny lass
Like him who loves a sparkling glass,
Will scarcely save his bacon.

There's something in the critters both
That's very apt to tempt the youth,
And hard it is to save them;
If one or t'other they must have
To keep them from the drunkard's grave
Best let the women have them.

I would not here insinuate
That women are almost as great
An evil as the brandy;
But then I'd have you understand
If once they take you by the hand,
You can't get clear so handy.

For if you only chance to sip,
The cordial on her cherry lip,
'Twill taste so nice and clever,
You'll find you're getting rather queer,
No tempt'rance pledge will serve you here,
She has you fast forever.

F. M. ADLINGTON, Weymouth.

NEAR THE LAKE.

Near the lake where droop'd the willow,
Long time ago!
Where the rock threw back the billow,
Brighter than snow;
Dwelt a maid, beloved and cherish'd,
By high and low;
But with autumn's leaf she perished,
Long time ago!

Rock and tree and flowing water,
Long time ago!
Bee and bird and blossom taught her Love's spell to know!
While to my fond words she listened,
Murmuring low,
Tenderly her dove-eyes glistened,
Long time ago!

Mingled were our hearts forever!
Long time ago!
Can I now forget her?—Never!
No, lost one, no!
To her grave tears are given,
Ever to flow;
She's the star I miss'd from heaven,
Long time ago!

OUR PRESIDENTS.

First stands the lofty Washington
That noble, great, immortal one;
The elder Adams next we see;
And Jefferson comes number three;
Then Madison is fourth, you know;
The fifth one on the list, Monroe;
The sixth an Adams comes again;
And Jackson seventh in the train;
Van Buren eighth upon the line,
And Harrison counts number nine;
The tenth is Tyler in his turn,
And Polk eleventh, as we learn;
The twelfth is Taylor, people say,
The next we learn some future day.

EPIGRAM.

Marin's like a clock, they say,
Unconscious of her beauty;
She regulates the live-long day,
Exact in every duty.

If this be true, such self-command,
Such well-directed powers,
O! may her little minute hand
Become a hand of ours?

ANECDOTES.

'Beautiful weather, sir,' said a minister to an old codger, awhile since. 'Yes, yes,' replied he, 'rich weather as we ready-of.' 'I don't recollect the passage, my dear sir,' returned the parson. 'Wal, by thunder, that ere's a gude 'un,' retorted the man. 'don't you never read your almanack?'

A Connecticut dame, the mother of a large family, was one day asked the number of her children. 'La me!' she replied, 'nocking herself to and fro, 'I've got fourteen; mostly boys and gals!'

'I'll take two children, if I can have 'em cheap,' said a tall Yankee, on entering an oyster cellar in the city the other day. 'Two children?—what two children?' 'Why, I hain't got any myself, and your sign reads 'Families supplied,' don't it?' 'I want you to supply me.'

'Doctor,' said a wag to his medical adviser, one day, 'isn't there such a thing as the shingles?' 'Yes, to be sure,' replied Galen. 'Then, I have got it for certain,' said the patient, 'for the roof of my mouth is broken out in a dozen places.'

A son of the Emerald Isle, telling his adventures in this country, said 'The first feathered bird I ever saw in Ameriky, was a forkentine. I treed him under a haystack, and shot him with a barn shovel; the first time I shot him I missed him, and the second time I hit him where I missed him before.'

'Ike,' said a rusty old heathen of the desk, 'how do astronomers measure the distance to the sun?' 'Why,' replied the young hopeful, 'they guesses at one fourth the distance, and then multiplies by four.'

Sir Walter Scott once gave an Irishman a shilling when spence would have been sufficient. 'Remember,' said he, 'that you owe me spence.' 'May your honor live till I pay you,' was the reply.

French Patent Oil for Leather.

THIS French Patent Oil is prepared for Carriages, Harnesses, Boots, Shoes, and all articles that require a good polish on the surface; it will give any article of Leather

A MOST BRILLIANT APPEARANCE, and at the same time, from its oily properties tends much to preserve it. It will always be moist and pliant, at the same time free from grease when handled; there is not a spirit of such an oil invented that would give one-half the brilliancy to the leather to which this is applied, and will never get mouldy. It may be exposed to water or washed, and will not lose its brilliancy.

Instructions—Drop a few drops upon a piece of sponge, and all that is required is, to apply it lightly on the leather to obtain the finest lustre.

Price, 62 1/2 cts. per bottle, or $6 per dozen. Manufactured by Messrs. Salomon & Co. from Paris.

FATHER MATHEW AT QUINCY.

At a meeting of the Temperance citizens of Quincy, held at the Lyceum Hall on Saturday Evening last, in relation to Father Mathew's visit to this town, the following gentlemen were chosen as a Committee to make suitable arrangements for his reception, viz:

George Newcomb, Rev. John P. Roddan, Rev. John T. Burrill, George Baxter, William Pratt, John Dinsign, John Hardwick, Jonathan Baxter, James M. Wade.

The Committee would give notice, that Father Mathew will be in the west part of the town during the day, on Sunday the 16th inst., and will administer the Pledge immediately after divine service in the forenoon, at the Catholic Church.

At six o'clock P. M. there will be a meeting in the Town Hall, when he will be received by the committee and introduced to the Citizens. The welcoming and introductory address will be made by Rev. John T. Burrill. Other speakers will follow the reply, and in the course of the evening Father Mathew will if desired, administer the Pledge in his peculiar happy manner.

On Monday, it is expected that Father M. will be at the Town Hall during the forenoon to administer the Pledge and at two o'clock P. M. there will be a public meeting at which the children comprising the Cold Water Army will be out, with banners, &c. Deacons Moses Grant of Boston, and other distinguished friends of Temperance, with the clergy and others of this town, have been invited, and are expected to be present.

It is to be hoped that all who feel an interest in the cause of Temperance, will be present, and thus show that they countenance and approve the labors of him who has so devotedly given his time and talent to one of the greatest and most noble reforms of the day. GEORGE NEWCOMB, Chairman.

JAMES M. WADE, Secretary.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 15, 1849.

THE FALL RIVER ROUTE TO NEW YORK. We are pleased to learn that this route has been doing a very heavy business since the fifteenth of August. The "Empire State" and the "Bay State" are unquestionably the finest boats that navigate the Long Island Sound. Capt. Comstock, of the former, stands at the head of his profession. Gentlemanly and liberal in his deportment, and every inch a commander, he has secured the confidence and the esteem of the wide travelling community; every man under his command seems to have caught his spirit, and carries out his views with admirable fidelity. In Mr. Chase, the Clerk of this steamer, is combined the promptness of the cashier of a large banking institution, and the accomplished gentleman, untroubled and undisturbed by the petty annoyances of passengers, and winning the golden opinions of all who come in contact with him. We should not neglect to mention in this connection, Mr. Hinman, the Steward, who has charge of the table, which is ever liberally provided with the choicest comforts and luxuries of the markets, served up with a degree of taste and skill, that we have never seen surpassed. The "Bay State," under Capt. Brown, is scarcely inferior in most of these particulars to the "Empire State," and if we have spoken more strongly of the latter, it is because we have more frequently travelled in her. We hear some complaints in regard to the connection of this line with the Old Colony Company, at South Braintree, originating we presume, with the press in New York, on account of a supposed want of liberality on the part of that road toward the press. We shall enquire into the matter, and refer to the subject again.

LECTURE ON THE PASSIONS. It will be seen by an advertisement in this week's issue, that an entertainment is promised our citizens, next Wednesday evening, of a new and somewhat novel character. Professor Young has lectured extensively in the United States, and brings numerous commendatory letters from distinguished clergymen of the various denominations, and other persons of note. Among them we notice the names of Lt. Gov. Reed, Rev. Dudley Phelps of Groton, Rev. Thomas M. Clark of Boston, Rev. Dr. Babcock of New Bedford, Rev. Mr. Hanks of Lowell, and Rev. Mr. Pitcher of Washington, (D. C.) All who have witnessed the illustrations and heard the lectures of Mr. Young, speak in flattering terms of the artistic beauty of the one and the moral influence of the other. We cordially commend him to the patronage of our community.

PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL. The September number of this standard work contains the phrenological character of George Copway, (the Ojibway chief), with a likeness. There is also an account on the phrenology and physiology of Lewis Kossuth, the President of Hungary, with a likeness. The Journal is only one dollar a year; published by Fowlers & Wells, New York.

FROM CALIFORNIA. The steamer from Chingres arrived at New York on the 13th inst., bringing dates from San Francisco to the 1st of August. She brings $700,000 in gold. There had been some rioting at San Francisco, but the rioters had been overpowered, and sentenced to punishment. Rich deposits of gold had been found on the North Fork of the Rio Americano. The general health of the miners remained good. During the month of July three thousand American emigrants, and six hundred foreigners had arrived. Among them were only forty-nine females. Accounts from the diggings were to the 22d July. There was nothing important.

The ships Capitol and Pharsalia arrived at San Francisco on the 19th of July; in both of which were persons from this place.

MAINE ELECTION. Sufficient returns have been received to announce, that the Democrats have probably carried the State, but the Whigs thus far seem to have made some gains in the Legislature.

HORN'S UNITED STATES RAILROAD GAZETTE. This admirable compend of the railroad system in the United States, has recently been enlarged and greatly improved. Among the valuable information it furnishes, it contains diagrams of many of the various railroads now in operation, with their extension from time to time, as they occur. The new roads are added as fast as they are put in operation. It is printed on a mammoth sheet, made up with great taste and skill; and contains more available information on the subject of railroads in the United States than is to be obtained from any other source. Mr. Horn, the enterprising and intelligent founder of this journal, deserves the thanks and the patronage of the whole business and travelling community.

BOSTON MERCANTILE LIBRARY ASSOCIATION, AND THE MERCHANTS' MAGAZINE. At a recent meeting of the Mercantile Library Association of Boston, the following resolution was unanimously adopted. We have reason to know, we may add, that the testimonial of that respectable body is entirely voluntary on their part, and unsolicited on the part of the editor and proprietor of that work: "Resolved—That the Merchants' Magazine, conducted by FREEMAN HUNT, is a work eminently adapted to the wants of the Mercantile community—containing a vast amount of accurate statistical commercial information, collected at great labor and expense; it establishes for itself an indisputable title to entire confidence and generous support, and we take this occasion to represent its claims to the Association, urging its increased circulation and attentive perusal."

OUTRAGE AT PORTLAND. On the 7th inst. a quarrel occurred between some seamen and the keeper of a notorious house on Mount Joy, in Portland, (Me.) and in the evening the men returned for revenge. They fired several times at the house with a swivel, using stones for balls. The keeper and his friends returned the fire, wounding two seamen. A crowd assembled the next night with the intention of pulling down the house, but the Mayor induced them to disperse, he having called out the military to support him. This is the same house where outrages have before occurred, and the keeper has been imprisoned.

A GUNPOWDER PLOT. Another gunpowder plot occurred at Great Falls, (N. H.) on the night of the 7th inst. Gunpowder was placed under the front of a tin shop and a train set to it. The village was alarmed by the explosion, and a fire was occasioned which raged for two hours, destroying a large amount of property.

SOUTH BOSTON RESERVOIR. The Cochituate reservoir at Dorchester Heights is nearly completed. It will cover about an acre and an eighth of land, and is to be seventeen feet and a half deep. It is intended that the water shall be let on to the South Bostonians on the 25th of October next.

IMPORTANT TO COASTERS. The Secretary of the Treasury has issued a Circular, exacting from officers of the customs the most particular attention to the manifests of steamboats and other vessels engaged in the coasting trade. The officers are ordered to rigorously enforce the penalties provided for the violations of the law in all cases.

RIOT IN LOWELL. There was a serious riot in Lowell on Sunday evening last, between the Corkmen and Fardowners. Brickbats and other missiles were thrown in great profusion. A great number of persons were wounded and it is thought some deaths were occasioned.

STORE BREAKING. The store of Jacob Niles, in West Randolph, was broken open last week, and about three hundred dollars worth of goods stolen. A quantity of broadcloths, supposed to be part of the stolen property, have been found in a house in Ann Street, Boston.

THE CALIFORNIA FLEET. The Boston Shipping List gives a list of 154 ships, 145 barques, 87 brigs, and 60 schooners, now on their way to California from different ports in the United States, making the whole number 446 sail of vessels now engaged in the California trade. A few of the above, with about twenty sail not included therein, have already arrived out. So that the whole number of vessels now on the way thither, or already there, would not probably fall short of five hundred sail.

A SHORT TERM. The usual term of the Court of Common Pleas was holden in Barnstable, says the Patriot, last week. It commenced its sittings at ten o'clock on Tuesday—discharged all the juries at three of the same day!—met again on Wednesday morning—finished up all the little business, dismissed the gentlemen of the bar, adjourned without day, bid the county functionaries good bye, and went out of town before twelve o'clock. The Patriot also speaks in complimentary terms of Judge Bigelow, who presided at this session.

NEWSPAPER LITERATURE. A resolve passed the Legislature of Maine directing the clerk of the Judicial Court in each County in that State to purchase, bind and preserve, for the use, and at the expense of the County, a copy of the newspaper published therein, not exceeding three in number, commencing with the year 1849, and giving preference to those most abounding in historical and other information valuable to the public.

Frederika Bremer, the Swedish authoress, is on her way to this country, to spend the winter.

FROM EUROPE. By the Europa, which arrived at Boston on Wednesday, accounts from Europe have been received to the 1st inst.

The Hungarian accounts, says the Boston Transcript, confirm as far as they go our last reports of the surrender of Gorgey, and the downfall of the Hungarian cause.

Venice has surrendered without conditions. Rome is still in uncertainty. France appears to be perfectly quiet. Germany is the same.

England offers not the smallest matter of political interest. Trade is good. The harvest promises well. Breadstuffs continue to fall. Money is a little more in demand, and an increased activity is perceptible in the manufacturing districts. The cholera is somewhat on the increase.

Among the passengers in the Europa are Hon. George Bancroft and family.

Major Whistler, the eminent engineer, died lately in Russia, where he has been for a number of years superintending the construction of a great railroad. A monument is to be erected to his memory, in Greenwood Cemetery, at Brooklyn, (N. Y.)

It is predicted that John P. Bigelow, will be the Whig, and Col. Greene, of the Post, the democratic candidate for the Governor of this State.

The Canada papers announce that it is expected the Queen of England will visit her American Colonies next summer.

It is said that Fanny Kemble Butler has purchased ground for a cottage near a small lake in Lenox, and intends to make it her future home.

Steamer Oregon arrived at New Orleans on the 2d from Tampico, bringing one million and two hundred thousand dollars in specie, from the Mexican Mines, which is to go to Europe, the Oregon also brought $36,000 for merchants in New York city.

Steamer Great Western arrived at New York on the 8th, with $100,000 of California gold dust on board.

All the English writers on Cholera concur in urging attention to the skin as of the utmost importance. Cleanliness and genial warmth are great preventives.

The last European files bring the announcement of the insanity or temporal mental aberration of M. de Lamartine.

President Taylor arrived in Washington on the 8th inst.

Dr. Wayland has announced his resignation of the Presidency of Brown University.

Gen. Herrera, a chivalric Mexican, has been travelling at the north this summer, with his beautiful New England wife.

The commander of the steamship Panama, plying between Panama and San Francisco, receives a salary of five thousand dollars per annum, exclusive of rations.

Since the cholera made its appearance in New York, five thousand people have fallen victims to its ravages in that city.

Moses Kimball, Esq., of Boston, will present to the Massachusetts Volunteers, a set of colors.

Rey, the great abductee, arrived at New Orleans on the 28th ult.

Father Mathew has addressed a letter to the Mayor of Boston, thanking the citizens for the generous hospitality which had been extended to him.

Lake Winnepissogee is now used as a reservoir for the factories on the Merrimack river, to make up the deficiencies of power during periods of low water. By cutting a new channel they are enabled to draw the lake down eight feet.

Laph at my pholly if you will; you can hardly add a drop to the cup already full. I can carry a little devil in his bosom, whose name is Remorse. Even denunciations heept on one cannot engulph the lagny of self-reproach!—Dairy of Jeames.

Young ladies who aspire to be farmers' wives, had much better be imperfect in filagree and music than be deficient in the important art of making butter, which smoothes not only the sharp corners of crust and crackers, but will smoothe asperities of the husband's temper.

A large hotel, intended for San Francisco, is now being constructed at New Orleans, the estimated cost of which is one hundred thousand dollars. Liquor is to be retailed at twenty five cents a glass.

NOTICES.

General attention is solicited to an adjourned meeting of the Quincy Lyceum, to be holden at the Lyceum Room, on WEDNESDAY EVENING next, at half past seven o'clock.

WILLIAM B. BUGBEE, Secretary.

The members of Quincy Division No 73, Sons of Temperance, are hereby notified that business of great importance will be transacted at their next meeting. A punctual attendance is desired.

Per order of the Division.

JOSEPH AREY, Jr., R. S.

General Cold Water Army.

The Annual Meeting of the Army will be held in the Lyceum Room, (Town Hall) MONDAY, 17 inst., at one o'clock precisely, for the choice of Officers, and to be arranged in order to see and hear Father Mathew, the great temperance Philanthropist, of Ireland.

We should be happy to have all the children in town, who have signed the pledge of the Army, or may wish to sign it that day, present on this occasion. Should there be any alteration in the time or place, it will be made known in the Patriot, next week.

T. KELLOGG, Secretary.

FINAL DIVIDENDS.

The MASS. HEALTH INSURANCE COMPANY, of Boston, has discontinued its business and benefits, and is engaged in distributing the remains of its capital to the policy holders. The policies may be sent by mail, or otherwise, to the Secretary, with an order to pay and cancel. The distribution ceases on the 20th of October, beyond which time the Company will not guarantee any return. The affairs of this Institution, it is believed, have been well managed, but the business is impracticable.

[From the Montreal Transcript, July 22, 1848.]

We think it but due to Dr. Wistar that we should add our testimony to numerous others as to the extraordinary merits of his medicine in certain cases, particularly where the patient has complained of pain in the side, or in cases of an asthmatical character.

We are personally acquainted with many persons who have experienced immense relief from the use of this medicine, when laboring under the diseases above mentioned; and as in the changeable climate of Canada these diseases are more than usually common, any medicine calculated to counteract them must be of value.

We are aware that it has a large and still increasing sale, and has been very generally and beneficially used since its introduction into Canada three years ago—and the very fact of its having stood that test of three years' experience is proof of its value.

We are not in the habit of recommending patent medicines unless the benefits conferred by them have come under our own observation; but in the present instance we can recommend WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY, as a medicine worthy of the confidence of the public in diseases of the Chest and Side, and in many cases in this city severe Coughs have yielded to its influence.

To be genuine it must be signed 1 BUTTS. Agents—Mrs. E. HAYDEN, Quincy; Oliver Perkins, Braintree. 2w Sept. 15.

LET THE VIRTUES OF DR. CORRETT'S CONCENTRATED SYRUP OF SARSAPARILLA BE KNOWN.

The undersigned was troubled about four years since with Scrophula, and my general health not good. I applied to L. M. Knight, M. D. of this place, and by his directions immediately commenced using Corbett's Syrup of Sarsaparilla.

He thought it must be necessary for me to take it a long time, being so badly diseased that a large Scrophulous Ulcer developed itself, swelling and spreading severely under the left side of my throat. A restoration to health was despaired of, and serious doubts were entertained by my physicians and friends, whether I should ever recover. In 1847, I commenced taking Corbett's Syrup of Sarsaparilla, and soon found relief.

In about four weeks after I commenced taking it, this ulcer was healed up. After that I was then absent about four weeks on a journey, but taking none of the Syrup with me, the humor returned and another ulcer grew under my throat larger and more formidable than the first.

After my return home I commenced taking this Syrup again, and in a few weeks the ulcers were healed up, and have so remained ever since. My health is now fully restored, and to this invaluable medicine I alone attribute my being spared an early and suffering death. FREEMAN HAMMOND. Franklin, N. H., Jan. 11, 1849.

DIED.

In this town, 8th inst., after a short illness, Mrs. Caroline, wife of Dr. William Goddard, aged 23 years and 6 months.

The deceased was a Christian. She possessed eminently the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which in the sight of God is of great price. To a native sweetness of temper she united great purity of mind and a most sincere, confiding and affectionate heart, adorned with that charity which "envieth not and thinketh no evil." Though called suddenly to "pass through the valley of the shadow of death, she feared no evil," but expressed her readiness to depart and an unwavering belief that her sins had been washed away. Warm in her attachments, she has left in the hearts of her mourning friends a delightful record.

"To live in hearts we leave behind Is not to die."

"There is a time when we must feel How much to prize the friend we love; How strong affection binds each tie, Which even death cannot remove."

It is, when watching by her side—To feel the limb grow cold in death—To see the eye in anguish roll—And hear her sigh her latest breath.

Ah! then as life is quite ebb'd out—When her weak form is called to bear, 'Tis then we seem to value most, The friend our bosom holds so dear.

But love eternal still remains, Reunion in a happier clime, Where seraphs robed in righteousness With joyful voices, praise thine name. [Com.]

For San Francisco, California, October 10th.

THE fast sailing coppered and copper-fastened Schooner, LAMARTINE, —Charles H. Brown, Master,—will sail as above and will take twelve to fifteen passengers at very low rates.

The vessel is staunch, strong and well furnished in every particular; built at Portsmouth, (N. H.) of the best White Oak, in July, 1845; will furnish the best of provisions and water, and accommodate the above number comfortably. It being the most favorable season of the year, and having secured the services of Capt. Underwood, who has had much experience on the Pacific coast and doubled the Cape sixteen times, it is expected she will make a speedy and safe passage. Each passenger will be allowed the bulk of three barrels, and can remain on board after arrival, ten days free of charge.

The above offers a fine chance for a Company of twelve persons,—a room will be fitted for their express use,—to form for mutual protection and take with them such articles as are needed for mining or other purposes, provisions, etc., thereby making the passage pleasant and agreeable, and save one half the expense they would incur across the Isthmus.

Cold Weather is Coming !! GET A STOVE !!!

"I WANT to buy the best COOKING STOVE" is a remark often made, but few succeed in accomplishing this wish, on account of the great variety of patterns to be found in the market. There is no article of domestic use of so much consequence as a good Stove. A poor one, that will not draw, will fill the room with smoke, injure the furniture and make every one about it cross; but with one which draws well, burns Coal or Wood well, and BAKES well and quick, it is a pleasure to cook,—as all will bear me witness. Having thoroughly tried the

New England Air-Tight Cooking Stove,

both by myself and many of my friends, for the past two years, I can, with the greatest confidence recommend it to my numerous customers, with the full assurance that they will find in its use every thing they could desire, and I agree that if any use this and do not find full satisfaction, I will take them back and refund the purchase money. I would invite all who are about purchasing this desirable article to call on the subscriber, (who is sole agent for this town,) and examine the above mentioned Stoves; where will also be found a GREAT VARIETY of other Stoves, both

COOK, PARLOR, OFFICE &amp; SHOP STOVES,

among which is a new and elegant

Parlor Stove, for Wood or Coal, with or without Ovens.

Also—FURNACES, BAKERS, BRITANIA & JAPANNED WARE; TIN AND SHEET IRON WORK Made to Order,

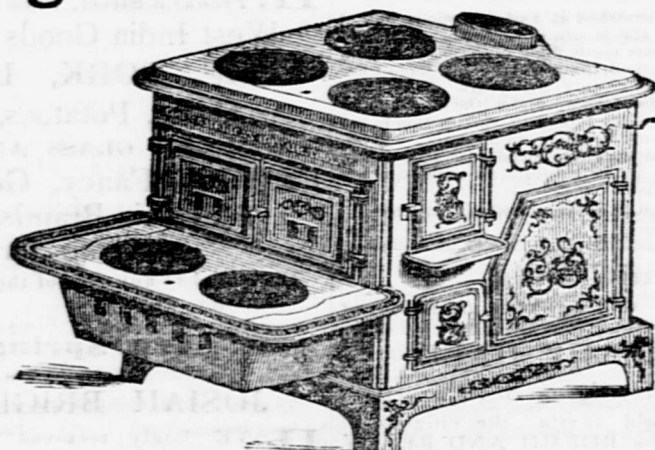

As good as the Best.

P. LOW'S UNION HOT AIR

Cooking Stove and Fuel Saver.

THIS is a most beautiful and extraordinary Cooking Stove. The even and regular application of the heat to the Oven, gives this Stove all the advantages of a brick Oven,—while at the same time the boiler holes are so constructed that the heat is immediately applied to the boilers from the fire pit, which makes this stove the most complete and finished Air Tight Cook Stove in America.

AS A COAL COOKING STOVE, it is just suited for the use of families in cities and villages, and will perform the cooking of a family of from 2 to 8, 10 or 20 persons with certainty and despatch. The fire-chamber is constructed of a size, form and depth, to burn coal with the greatest freedom and economy. WOOD may be used with equal advantage by simply dispensing with the brick lining of the fire-chamber.

A SUMMER APPARATUS

is attached to the front, affording, of itself, ample convenience for light summer work, without the unpleasant effects and expense of heating up the main body of the stove; it may also be used at the same time, and the rest of the stove is occupied, greatly adding to its value, and rendering it altogether the most efficient Cooking Stove for the class of families for whom it is expressly designed, ever yet invented.

Any person who will give this Stove a fair trial will be convinced of its superiority for Economy, Convenience and DURABILITY, over any other Air Tight Cooking Stove.

Its price brings it within the means of all families who want a good Stove.

A pamphlet containing a description and directions for fitting up and using this Stove is furnished, gratis, to every purchaser.

These Stoves of the different sizes may be examined at the

Tin and Sheet Iron Manufactory

of the Agent in this town.

E. S. FELLOWS, Agent for the above Stove, has also for sale at his Store, the REGULATOR, ECONOMIST, and various other patterns of Cook Stoves, as well as PARLOR, OFFICE, and CYLINDER.

Commissioners' Notice.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.

TO AN INTEMPERATE MAN.

Will you that guilty course pursue,
And tread that path which leads to death,
While in your reach looms up to view
The heavenly prize immortal breath.

Ah! no! forsake the dangerous road,
Where folly's sons before have sped,
And turn you from that dark abode,
Where lie the unlamented dead.

Imperious power what'er thou art
Who thus the soul of man can bind!
Thou' pleasure's form thou wear'st, depart
Thou ruin of the noble mind.

Why dost thou linger round him still,
To give the poison'd cup of shame?
With savage heart intent to kill
The life and once respected name.

Unhappy fate! to be a slave,
And drag about a galling chain!
Far better were the peaceful grave
Unsuited with that blackening stain.

Oh aid him, God of mercy, aid!
A humble sinner sues to thee,
Let him by thy strong arm be stayed,
'Till victory shouts 'the captive's free!'

F. M. ADLINGTON, Weymouth.

A PARODY ON CLAMS.

The morning light was breaking fast,
As through our village streets there passed
A sturdy man with horn of tin,
Who shouted, with a hoarse din,
'Fine clams to-day.'

His hat was bad, his shaggy hair
Waved careless in the morning air,
While ever and anon the note
Came pealing from his mighty throat,
'Fine clams to-day.'

In happy homes he heard the noise
Of quelling girls and ugly boys;
Again his horn of tin he blows,
And louder yet his shout arose,
'Fine clams to-day.'

An old man stood within the door—
He'd heard the well known voice before;
He called his maid—'run, Sally, run,
And, ere he passes, buy me some
'Fine clams to-day.'

'Oh, clam-man, stay!' the maiden cried,
Ere yet his echoing blast had died;
He paused a moment, then again
Went loudly on that clam man's strain,
'Fine clams to-day.'

Through many a street his cart he drew,
'Fore many a door his horn he blew,
And startled many a slumbering drone,
Who woke to hear his dreadful tone,
'Fine clams to-day.'

The glowing sun had scarcely set—
His last sad rays were lingering yet,
When borne upon the evening air,
That horn and voice rang loud and clear,
'Fine clams to-day.'

The shades of night had closed around,

The night winds fanned the dewy ground,
And all was hushed in silence, when
That startling voice arose again
'Fine clams to-day.'

There in the moon-shine, cold and white,
He stalked like spirit of the night,
While from the echoing skies around,
Came pealing back that fearful sound,
'Fine clams to-day.'

TOMATO JELLY.

Take some fine ripe tomatoes and cut them in slices,
But note that you add neither sugar nor spices,
Sprinkle well with fine salt, and when that is done
Set the fruit in a window where shineth the sun.
When five hours have elapsed, or six if you wish,
Strain the pulp through a sieve on a broad shallow dish.
Then place in the sun that the jelly may form;
But should there come on a long north-east storm,
Put it over the fire and simmer away
For three or four hours, or perhaps half a day.
Cork in large wide mouth'd bottles, and when they're stopp'd tight,
In a bold distinct hand the name on them write.
When wanted dip out by the spoonful or two—
To your gravy or soup it will give a fine gout.

ANECDOTES.

A celebrated eccentric preacher, was once warned that he must be very guarded in his language in a town at the south where he was to preach, for the people were noted for their highly intellectual and moral character. On observing a great number of mutations in the gallery, he said, as he arose, 'Brethren and sisters I have been told that I must be very careful in my language; that I am to address a highly intellectual and moral congregation; I would just like to ask a question of this moral congregation: 'Where did all them yaller galls in the gallery come from?'

A poor woman who lived, carried her daughter to church for baptism. Being asked his name by the bishop, she replied, 'Lucy sir.' 'What?' says the doctor. 'Lucy sir,' says she. 'Lucifer, Lucifer, that won't do,' says the bishop, and baptized the child George Washington. The poor mother, confounded, could not speak until near the door, when she told the parson the infant was a girl.

An Irish veterinary student when under examination was asked what he would recommend if there was a horse brought to him with a particular disease. 'Och! by the powers,' was the answer, 'I would recommend the owner to get rid of him immediately.'

'I say, Bob, you have been to Canton, haint you?' 'Yes.' 'Well, can you speak China?' 'Yes; a little; that is, I speak broken China.'

Quincy, Aug. 4.

French Patent Oil for Leather. THIS French Patent Oil is prepared for Carriages, Harness, Boots, Shoes, and all articles that require a good polish on the surface; it will give any article of Leather

A MOST BRILLIANT APPEARANCE, and at the same time from its oily properties tends much to preserve. It will always be moist and pliant, at the same time free from grease when handled; there is not a spirit of such an oil invented that would give one-half the brilliancy to the leather to which this is applied, and will never get mouldy. It may be exposed to water or washed, and will not lose its brilliancy.

Harness as well as all other articles made of leather, when polished with the above oil, will never be injured by rats or mice; likewise dust has no effect on it, and it is not to be feared that any crust will settle on said leather preserved with the above oil.

Instructions—Drop a few drops upon a piece of sponge, and all that is required is, to apply it lightly on the leather to obtain the finest lustre.

Price, 62 1/2 cts. per bottle, or $6 per dozen. Manufactured by Messrs. Salomon & Co. from Paris.

MISCELLANY.

DAVID DASHWOOD'S ADVENTURE.

Mrs. Smith was a superb woman! So declared the doting Job Smith, and so said a score of lovers, as they annihilated Job's success. How she happened to throw herself away upon such a plodding, dull-looking fellow, was quite surprising, but these beauties take unaccountable freaks.

As we have always been in Mrs. Smith's confidence, and happen to possess the key to her unaccountable choice, we will as an act of friendship, divulge it, along with some other little matters, for the satisfaction of her traducers.

Mrs. Smith did not fall in love with such a common-place sort of fellow as Job Smith, that's certain. No young lady ever did such a thing! His neckcloth was too far behind the times; he wore neither moustache, nor imperial, and was shockingly inattentive in the matter of fans, and pocket handkerchiefs, therefore it could not be expected.

But such a magnificent creature as Miss Amelia Wilton was not without a lover of the most approved pattern. There was a certain David Dashwood, who found favor in the lady's eyes, and amused himself for a whole season, swearing almost bible oaths, about devoted attachment, eternal constancy, and a great many such staple commodities, in which young men are proverbial dealers. But when the firm of Wilton, Baywater & Co., failed, the disinterested David disappeared, the evil spirit who counseled him only knows where, giving Miss Wilton an opportunity of discovering that her "gallant gay Lothario" was not to be relied upon.

The lady, after a fortnight's weeping, steeled herself into indignation, and derived much more comfort from the hardened than the "melting mood." In her own mind denouncing him as a worthless puppy, she resolved to steer clear of all such sweet youths in future, and consoled herself with humble, unpretending, worthy Job Smith, who was the very antipodes of David Dashwood.

It will be seen, that Mrs. Smith was a woman of sense, and she never repented of her choice; not even when her candid lover returned, after the lapse of four or five years, disposed to be as ardently attentive as ever. The lady felt that she knew her man, and managed him with much discretion as well as sense.

"The days are growing intolerably long!" she remarked after having endured him for above an hour.

"All days are alike to the miserable," insinuated David.

"I'm sorry to hear you are so miserable; pray, tell me your complaint, and I probably can suggest a remedy."

"Can you not divine?" demanded he.

"I should judge from your complexion, you were bilious," hazarded Mrs. Smith.

The baffled David bit his lip, but renewed the charge.

"You have changed, Amelia, or you would know the cause of my sufferings,—you behold a victim of unrequited love."

"Pardon my obtuseness, said the lady, summoning all her tact and courage, for the purpose of defining her position. "Marriage does change one, I possess no relish whatever for love affairs."

David looked uncertain whether to renew the charge, and Mrs. Smith intimated, that household affairs required her attendance elsewhere.

"Ah!" sighed the stupid inamorata, you were made for better things! Such beauty should be seen—adored—adored!"

"I trust I am adored by my husband and children," Amelia replied hoping these talismanic words would protect her from further insult.

"And a wife desires no better lot, than to be allowed to minister to the comfort of those she loves."

"Can it be possible," exclaimed Dashwood, incredulously, "that such a being can content herself with such a life! Have you no regrets for all you have relinquished?"

"I have relinquished nothing, sir," said Mrs. Smith with dignity. "If you mean the society of girlhood, it is as distasteful and unmeaning as the society of my childhood. If you allude to lovers, they are silly, uninteresting, and intolerable; and I rejoice that the name I bear has power to protect me from their importunities. And now, sir, good morning," and the indignant Amelia swept from the apartment.

Like the Irishman, who was unceremoniously ejected from the stairs, Dashwood understood that he was expected to depart, but he could not conceive it possible that Amelia was really indifferent to his attractions. He remembered the days when she leaned on his arm in all the confidence of early love; and he would not believe that all her youthful tenderness had faded from her heart. Her conduct was the result of pique, reasoned he, of duty—anything but indifference—and then to pretend to be fond of such an old bore as Smith! Pshaw!

One day when the Smiths were at dinner, a note was brought for the lady, which she read, and handed to her husband.

"I do not deserve to be tormented thus," said she, while tears of indignation suffused her beautiful eyes.

Smith regarded her with surprise, and read as follows:

"I will call this evening at twilight. If you are faithful to your young love, receive me by that uncertain light."

DASHWOOD.

"Nonsense, Amelia, the fellow's a fool!" said Smith. "I'll give necessary orders to the servants, and take care that you shall no longer be annoyed by his importunities."

Many a fiery husband would have horsewhipped the offender, and thus given a ruinous publicity to the affair. Not so Mr. Smith.

The lover came at the appointed time, and was shown into a parlor, where the twilight was deepened, and darkened by the window drapery. Mrs. Smith was abroad, but her husband demurely summoned her handmaid.

"Disah, your mistress is suffering from headache and sore throat; carry her a velvet ribbon and brooch, and fasten them about her neck. Stay—do not carry a light, and tread softly. You will find her on the sofa in the parlor."

The colored girl went in search of the ribbon and her master stole noiselessly into the back parlor, to note the result of his directions. Presently, Disah entered and paused a moment at the door, then perceiving a figure in a reclining attitude on one of the sofas, she lightly advanced and stooped over her supposed mistress for the purpose of adjusting the ribbon. Mr. Dashwood recognized the shadowy outline of a female figure, he felt the soft touch of an arm around his neck, and the measure of his joy was full! He ardently returned the supposed embrace, when Mr. Smith quickly drew a match along the wall, and applied it to the gas-burner beside which he had stationed himself. The apartment was illuminated with a flood of light, and revealed the affrighted negress, struggling in the arms of the pertinacious lover. Mr. Dashwood released his prisoner as Mr. Smith advanced.

"I beg you will not allow me to disturb you," said Smith blandly.

Dashwood stood for a moment confounded, and then rushed into the street, where he was received with uproarious merriment, by half a dozen of the P— club, who had surrounded the window for the purpose of witnessing his interview with Mrs. Smith.

The discomfited hero departed in the night boat, and was never heard of afterward, while Mr. Job Smith preserves to this day, as mementoes of his precipitate flight, the hat, gloves and cane as follows:

"The girl he left behind him."

THE BOYS OF COHASSET.

A correspondent of the Philadelphia Enquirer, who is on a visit to Cohasset, in this State, furnishes the following amusing historical scrap:

"The inhabitants of this place are remarkable for longevity. I conversed with a 'hale hearty' farmer, eighty-one years of age! The first interview I had with him was at the roadside, on one of the warmest days of the season. He was in company with a 'retired' sea captain, who is seventy-three years old, and likewise hale and robust! These two worthies, with some dozen others, are called the 'Boys of Cohasset,' and often walk their ten miles a day! The legendary lore of these 'Boys' reaches far back to the unwritten history of their town. Upon my asking the 'old Captain' whether he could remember anything of the enthusiasm of his boyish ideas of the revolutionary times, and struggle of seventy-six, the old 'Tea Party' &c., he replied that he was too young at that time to remember much about the affairs of those days, but he had a vivid recollection of the day when the first news of the surrender, made by Lord Cornwallis to the American arms, was received in the town, for he was with father down in the meadows, hauling hay, and that a man came riding by the road proclaiming the joyful news!" He added, "that his father threw down the hay rake, and jumped over a 'fence' stone wall, and run down to the village like lightning, shouting, hurrah! hurrah! as loud as he could; leaving him to get the oxen and hay cart home the best way he could," and said he, "there was not a sober man in all Cohasset that night."

FROM A CALIFORNIA EMIGRANT.

VALPARAISO, (Chili,) May 19th, 1849.

Well brother, we are all on board again; 5 o'clock A. M., tripping anchor for California. H. B. M. ship Asia's barge is along side and a dozen marines searching our ship for their men. They found two, but there was one live yankee they didn't find; we stowed him in a bunk, under a mattress, and the lightest man we had laid in front of him. Four boats towing us out; Sbeils, out side with a middling good breeze, sent up royals and set st'n sails; 5 P. M., out sight of land.

Sunday, 20th. Wind aft, all sail set; the yankee has crawled out to the Captain: "Well, go forward and behave yourself," said he. The glass has stood for a week at 62 through the day and at 59 during the night.

Monday, 21st. Wind aft; lat. 27. 49, long. 74. 26; glass 65.

Tuesday, 22d. All sails set. Made a powder horn to-day; bought three in port for half a dime.

Wednesday, 23d. All sails set.

Thursday, 24th. Four months out. Glass stands at 70 in the water just pumped up.

Friday, 25th. Had 25 sails set for three days.

Saturday, 26th. Wind aft. Made a holster to my pistol, sheaths to my knives, etc; getting ready for the 'diggings.'

Sunday, 27th. Up at day break, washed, shaved, cut my hair and read a chapter in the bible. Glass as usual.

Monday, 28th. Pleasant and fair.

Tuesday, 29th. Pleasant; lat. 15. 30.

Wednesday, 30th. Fair with light winds.

Thursday, 31st. Fair; lat. 13. 41, long. 38. 49.

Friday, June 1st. Pleasant and fair.

Saturday, 2d. Pleasant and hot; no fowl about; caught a few albicorns this week and a fine eating fish they are too.

Sunday, 3d. Up at 4 bells and had a fine wash in fresh water which I hooked from the scuttle-butt. We have hove up the dipper and shall look for the north star soon. The glass has stood all the week at sunrise at 72, at noon at 76 and 77; as pleasant weather as ever you see,—suits me to a T. All well fore and aft.

Monday, 4th. Up at 4 o'clock, hooking potatoes to roast for breakfast. Sail to larboard ten miles off, going the other way.

Tuesday, 5th. All well. Potatoes, as the steward calls them, three times a week,—tall living.

Wednesday, 6th. Made me a knapsack,—think I see myself going to the diggings.

Thursday, 7th. Sail O, off to larboard; a blubber hunter under easy sail.

Friday, 8th. Throwing water on each other forward; water quite warm, glass at 80.

Saturday, 9th. Tarring down the rigging; scrubbing ship inside and out.

Sunday, 10th. Pleasant; Hav't taken in a studding sail since the 20th of May. The first cabin passengers assemble with us now on account of bad treatment; we are as happy here as clams.

Monday, 11th. A sail dead ahead laying down for us. We were under a seven knot breeze. She wore round, lowered her boat and was a good of us. She was a New Bedford whaler, Capt. Winslow, 34 months out, with 1600 blbs. sperm; had not seen a whale for six months. They knew nothing about the gold fever or who was President. We were the first California ship they had seen; gave them potatoes, papers and books. I was glad when they shoved off, for I expected to see their boat swamp, as our skipper did not shorten sail.

Tuesday, 12th. Crossed the line about sunrise; as nice a day as heart can wish.

Wednesday, 13th. Saw a Mexican brig.

Thursday, 14th. The trade winds have left us. Wind south.

Friday, 15th. Heading N. N. W.

Saturday, 16th. Blowing and raining; the lee scupper stopped up and we are into it all over; a tiger bait keeps off the rain well. The glass stood at 80 at sunrise; rained all day.

Sunday, 17th of Bunker Hill. Wind enough. Got up last night to see her go. The way we scare up the flying fish is fun. Salt horse for dinner. All well through the ship; clean and sweet, fat, black, strong and happy.

Monday, 18th. Raining and hot.

Tuesday, 19th. The same as yesterday.

Wednesday, 20th. Rainy and calm. The glass stands at 80, night and day.

Thursday, 21st. A sail ten miles off. At noon telegraphed the Pharsalia. Sailed together all day.

Friday, 22d. Waked up by the noise on deck in taking in sail. Twelve o'clock, under close reefed topsails. It beats every thing we had around the Horn. Fore topsail and spencer blown to the devil; such seas you never saw. The hands were hard at it all day putting on extra braces and stays, the wind increasing all the time. Heavens 'O, Betsey! how it blows! Just shipped a sea that filled the main hatch full as it poured down. The port holes are open and I can't walk by one without holding on. They are baring down the hatches. I am prepared to stay on deck all night. Ten o'clock, a perfect hurricane. The wind shifted to the South and kicked up a bobby, carrying away the Salem Company's boat, all their spars and every thing on the davits. I hung on to the weather rail, the water running down my legs. I can't live below, no how; it smells like an Indian village down there. Most all are lashed up here. It is warm, glass at 78; raining all the time, like the d—

Saturday, 23d. Prepared to scud her. Four hands at the wheel; she refused to waltz away until seventy five or a hundred of us went up in the fore rigging. Now she goes off like a goose and behaves well. Taking off the hatches. Te-hue! what a sight! every thing is soaked through. She labored and plunged so hard that the decks leaked all over. She could not roll the wind was so strong; it kept her careened sheer plank under all the time.

Sunday, 24th. My time is up—five months—so what board I get now is clear gain. It moderated about 4 o'clock. Every thing is covered with clothes, drying. Lat. 21. 41—long. 118. 13.

Monday, 25th. Head wind. Two sails in sight, both cripples; one a ship with main top-gallant sail gone, looks like the Pharsalia.

Tuesday, 26th. Good fall weather.

Wednesday, 27th. Our water is thick and bad.

Thursday, 28th. I'm all ashore for something to do.

Friday, 29th. Our dinner of bean soup spoiled by bad water.

Saturday, 30th. No prospect of fair wind.

Sunday, July 1st. Lat. 25. 31—long. 132. 40. The glass has ranged all the week from 64 to 69. Hard lee for first time since the gale.

Monday, 2d. Head wind.

Tuesday, 3d. Head wind and a big swell. Sail O,—the Daniel Webster of New York; sailed all day with her.

Wednesday, 4th. Drank your good health at half past seven o'clock; reckoned that would hit you about noon. Had company all day, the Daniel Webster.

Thursday and Friday. Head wind.

Saturday, 7th. Sail O,—a bark of Belfast, Me. Sunday, 8th. Preaching all day.

Monday and Tuesday. Head wind. Water growing short; can't hook any, no how.

Wednesday, 11th. Head wind and enough of it; parted fore top-gallant sheets.

Thursday, 12th. Head wind.

Friday, 13th. Banging about as usual.

Saturday, 14th. Wind enough and rough.

Sunday, 15th. Half a gale of wind. Carried away main top gallant sail and jib sheets. The skipper has cut the first cabin passengers short of water to wash in.

Monday, 16th. The glass has stood about 60 the last fourteen days. We are glad to get in the sun. All well on board. Tell Messrs. W. and R. there was but one tanner in Valparaiso. He spoke but bad English. He had fifty hands, paid them fifty cents a day; gives them one real every morning, which supports them, and on Saturday night pays them up. Takes in fifty hides a day at $1.05 each, thick and thin. But few calf skins taken in. The bark he buys for the 100 lbs. at $5.00 per hundred. It looks more like cinnamon than any thing else. Some came off wood not larger than your finger. His vats cost him $35 each. Splitting and rolling he never saw. Leather he sold by the yard; the first yard off the butt, came highest. I bought one yard for $1.50.

Tuesday, 17th. We shall have to go to having if we are cut much longer. The grass is getting quite rank around us.

Wednesday, 18th. Foggy. Capt. Jas. Winslow is my next neighbor here. He is a great mechanic; has made a pistol, every part on board here. The cables are rattling up; I'm ready to go ashore, every thing clean and mended. The next more, I think will be the hardest. I have not joined any company yet but shall do so after going ashore and getting the news. I am well salted through but not salted down. We have all seen the elephant.

Thursday, 19th. Land O. The skipper thought he saw a hole to go into but it wasn't there; run within three miles of land, then stood out. We were fifteen miles to leeward. This is the liveliest ground we have seen yet,—all sort of game, whales, sharks, porpoises, etc, and of fowl, the air is full and the sea covered. I would tell you what kind I knew; I saw one peep. All hands busy scrubbing up. At ten o'clock dropped anchor. Took a Boston pilot just at dark and crossed the bar in five and a half fathoms of water. The mouth of the harbor is about half a mile wide. This is one of the places.

Friday, 20th. Flour is cheap, from six to eight dollars a barrel.

Saturday, 21st. Worked hard all day boating my baggage ashore. We are camped here in what is called Pleasant Valley. Can't think of boarding at $16 a week,—that is the lowest.

Sunday, 22d. Looked about all day. I must sell two-thirds of my things before I can go up. They charge $4.00 per hundred to Suter's; $20 for myself without board. The place is full of merchandise packed up and no one to watch it. If any one meddles with another's property he doesn't live to see the sun go down. One man got tired of living and shot himself; he was from Philadelphia. I hear there is no chance to do any thing in the diggings now. The river is high and the sickness is beginning to come on. The miners are coming down every day. There are 250 tents pitched on this beach. Two-thirds of the place is built of canvas. Lumber is worth from four to six hundred dollars per thousand; wood fifty dollars per cord. There is no wood here; what they call wood is brush. Money is plenty.

Monday, 23d. I have made up my mind to go to work for about six weeks, till the sickly season is over. It don't cost us, in camp, much to live; we do our own washing; the price is six dollars per dozen. Of gold there is no mistake but there is enough for all. I would tell you what I have seen and heard but you would not credit it. Those that come down are full of it, and the way they use it up is fast; when out, up they go and get more.

Our ship is stripped and all the hands have left her. There are one hundred sail here in the same fix. They are bidding as high as $175 per month for hands to work them up the river. The Everett got here ten days before us and has gone up to Belina. The Pharsalia has not arrived yet; I fear she got crippled in the hurricane of the 22d. I quarter in the Lewiston Falls, (Me.) tent. In a few days, Mr. J. Penningman and two more of us will have one by ourselves.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 22, 1849.

RESUSCITATION OF THE LYCEUM.

We rejoice that this long neglected and valuable institution for mutual instruction and improvement is again awakening into life and action. Its great importance in this or any other community, can hardly be overrated. It opens channels of intellectual gratification and social culture, which are so well supplied by no other society amongst us. It stimulates thought and mental ambition, brings mind in collision with mind, and thus by mutual attrition smooths down all mental asperities to a brilliant polish and imparts to the general character an air of elevated refinement.

This is a "consummation devoutly to be wished for," by all lovers of learning and friends of social cultivation. If "knowledge is power," then we may safely infer that an educated and refined community cannot be imbecile, but must be powerful and commanding. The means of education must first be generously distributed throughout the mass of the people before we can expect to see them educated, and where can be found a more potent engine of the kind for general and mutual enlightenment and instruction than that which is embodied in an energetic and well organized Lyceum?

Below, we give the proceedings of the newly organized Lyceum, together with the names of the officers for the present year.

The annual meeting of the Quincy Lyceum was held on the evening of Sept. 1st. The following gentlemen were unanimously elected:

President—Lysander Richards.

Vice President—George Newcomb.

Secretary—Dr. William B. Bugbee.

Treasurer—George Baxter.

Curators—Charles Marsh, Charles A. Cummings and George White.

After much pleasant discussion among the gentlemen present, all of whom seemed full of determination that the Lyceum should be reinstated in all its original glory, the meeting adjourned to the next Wednesday evening.

The following preamble and resolves were offered by the President and unanimously approved:

Whereas, believing that the institution of a Lyceum, is among other things one of the great engines by which the happiness, prosperity and character of a town or community, is elevated and strengthened—

Resolved—That we hereby solicit all friends of good order, education, moral and religious improvement to join us in again advancing the Lyceum to its former prosperity and influence.

Resolved—That we, the members of the Lyceum present, will exert our best endeavors to promote the interests of an Institution so well calculated to arrest the progress of vice, to promote the advancement of learning and to throw around our youth as well as those more advanced in life, an influence that shall protect them from the innumerable snares and temptations which threaten them with destruction.

In our next Saturday's issue we shall probably be able to announce the introductory lecture, if not the entire course of lectures for the present season. The Lyceum will continue its meetings at the Lyceum Room, on every Wednesday evening. The question for discussion at the next meeting will be,

Which exerts the most influence upon a community, Civil Law or Religious Societies?

The public are solicited to attend.

"O heaven-born music! thou art like
To Jeremiah's sighs,
The good were very good, the bad
Too bad to give the pigs."

Peter Pindar.

We notice with pleasure that some accomplished harmonists, the Goulds, intend appearing in their artistic capacity, before a Quincy audience, at the Town Hall, this evening. Mr. and Mrs. G. reside at present in Boston, where they are esteemed by the initiated, as unsurpassed in the use of their favorite instruments, the Guitar and Concertina; the latter being a rare instrument of manifold power and sweetness of tone. Whether few or many may honor this elegant entertainment with their presence, of this we are fully persuaded, none who do attend will pronounce it other than "a well spent hour."

REV. WILLIAM B. TAPPAN. The friends of this much lamented man, who was for many years the faithful and efficient Agent of the American Sunday School Union for the New England States, will regret to learn that he died intestate; leaving a widow and four children without property—two of the children being too young to provide for themselves. A circular has been issued to the Sabbath Schools in New England by a committee of the Boston Schools, soliciting contributions for the purpose of erecting a suitable monument to the memory of Mr. Tappan, and also, to afford relief to his destitute family. Returns may be made to Henry Hoyt, at Missionary Rooms, Pemberton Square, Boston. All sums remitted will be faithfully applied to the objects specified, and it is hoped these objects will meet the approval of Superintendents and teachers in this vicinity, and call forth a liberal return by the first of November.

ALMANAC FOR 1850. The (Old) Farmers' Almanac, for the next year, has made its appearance; it is published by Jenks, Palmer & Co., Boston. If you would learn the weather, go buy Robert B. Thomas' Almanac, and in that work you'll find it all "chalked down."

WATER CURE JOURNAL. The number for this month makes its appearance rather late, but makes up for it in the richness and variety of its contents. Published monthly at one dollar a year; Fowlers & Wells, New York, publishers. It is subject to newspaper postage only.

BENEVOLENCE. What is more agreeable in the character of man—whether he be rich or poor, a prince or a subject—than benevolence? It gives its possessor a feeling of sympathy for the poor and distressed; it gives a generous disposition, a tender heart, and a soul full of compassion. It renders society agreeable and friendship sincere, and is one of the most agreeable traits in the human character.

MUCH IN A LITTLE. Some men so dislike the dust kicked up by the generation to which they belong, that being unable to pass, they lag behind.

He must be a thorough fool who can learn nothing from his own folly.

It is a strange puzzle that will not look bright when the sun shines upon it.

J. A. Holden, Ta
HAS just received, and will be calling, for the coming season, his intention to all times on hand, NEW and F. GOODS, and not let accumulate at his old and unfashionable merchandise found with the majority of country stores. He does his own cutting, and his goods are not too good to be sold at least of all his own.

He invites the attention of such as Punctuality and Good Will FOR CASH, such being his rule of business, that he rates at which he sells, rendering impracticable. All who thus employ him, will have good reason to be satisfied.

HAS just received, and will be constantly receiv-
ing,
New and Suitable Goods,
for the coming season, his intention being to have at
all times on hand, NEW and FASHIONABLE
GOODS, and not let accumulate at his store a quantity of old and unfashionable merchandise, such as will be found with the majority of country tailors.
He DOES HIS OWN CUTTING, which he flatters himself he has no need to boast of, inasmuch as it is now too well known to need any man's praise,
and least of all his own.

He invites the attention of such as expect
Punctuality and Good Workmanship,
FOR CASH,
such being his rule of business,—the REDUCED RATES at which he sells rendering any other mode impracticable. All who thus employ him, he is confident, will have good reason to be satisfied.

QUINCY PATRIOT.
P. LOW'S UNION HOT AIR
Cooking Stove and Fuel Saver.

THIS is a most beautiful and extraordinary Cooking Stove. The even and regular application of the heat to the Oven, gives this Stove all the advantages of a brick Oven—while at the same time the boiler holes are so constructed that the heat is immediately applied to the boilers from the fire pit, which makes this stove the most complete and finished Air Tight Cook Stove in America.

AS A COAL COOKING STOVE,
it is just suited for the use of families in cities and villages, and will perform the cooking of a family of from 2 to 5, 10 or 20 persons, with certainty and despatch. The fire-chamber is constructed of a size, form and depth, to burn coal with the greatest freedom and economy. WOOD may be used with equal advantage by simply dispensing with the brick lining of the fire-chamber.

AS A SUMMER APPARATUS
it is attached to the front, affording, of itself, ample convenience for light summer work, without the unpleasant effects and expense of heating up the main body of the stove; it may also be used at the same time that the rest of the stove is occupied, greatly adding to its value, and rendering it altogether the most efficient Cooking Stove for the class of families for whom it is expressly designed, ever yet invented.

Any person who will give this stove a fair trial will be convinced of its superiority for Economy, CONVENIENCE and DURABILITY, over any other Air Tight Cooking Stove.

Its price brings it within the means of all families who want a good stove.

A pamphlet containing a description and directions for fitting up and using this Stove is furnished, gratis, to every purchaser.

These Stoves of the different sizes may be examined at the

Tin and Sheet Iron Manufactory
of the Agent in this town.
E. S. FELLOWS, Agent for the above Stove, has also for sale at his Store, the REGULATOR, ECON-OMIST'S, and various other patterns of Cook Stove, as well as PARLOR, OFFICE, and CYLINDER.

—ALSO—
SHEET IRON, TIN AND COPPER WORK done to order,
Of the best Materials, and in a workmanlike manner.
Quincy, Sept. 1. 3w

Cold Weather is Coming !!
GET A STOVE !!!

"I WANT to buy the best COOKING STOVE" is a remark often made, but few succeed in accomplishing his wish, on account of the great variety of patterns to be found in the market. There is no article of domestic use of so much consequence as a good Stove. A poor one that will not draw, will fill the room with smoke, injure the furniture and make every one about it cross; but with one which draws well, burns Coal or Wood well, and BAKES well and quick, it is a pleasure to cook,—as all will bear me witness. Having thoroughly tried the

New England Air-Tight Cooking Stove,
both by myself and many of my friends, for the past two years, I can with the greatest confidence recommend it to my numerous customers, with the full assurance that they will find in its use every thing they could desire, and I agree that if any use this and do not find full satisfaction, I will take them back and refund the purchase money. I would invite all who are about purchasing this desirable article to call on the subscriber, (who is sole agent for this town) and examine the above mentioned Stoves; where will also be found a GREAT VARIETY of other Stoves, both

COOK, PARLOR, OFFICE & SHOP STOVES,
among which is a new and elegant
Parlor Stove, for Wood or Coal, with or without Ovens.

Also—FURNACES, BAKERS, BRITANIA & JAPANNED WARE; TIN and SHEET IRON
WORK Made to Order,
As good as the Best.

As good as any in the City.
He employs the VERY BEST of Workmen to make up his Garments, and sells at
ONE PRICE ONLY.
No person in want of Clothing should neglect calling on him, as it is a well known fact that he makes
up his Garments AS WELL and SELLS CHEAP
ER than can be bought in the City.
Perfect Satisfaction Guaranteed.
Quincy, Sept. 8. 3w

Rare Chance for a Young Man.
A RARE chance is now offered to any one wishing to commence business, to take the Stand now occupied by the subscriber, on Franklin Street. This kind of Goods on hand will be sold on very reasonable terms, and a lease of the Store will be given for a term of years.
The Store is new and convenient, and there is a Hall in the building which will let to good advantage.
The stock of Goods is light but consists of the usual variety found in a country store.

SHAWLS,
SCARFS, MANTLES, AND
CHILDREN'S SHAWLS, MANUFACTURED AT THE
Bay State Mills, Lawrence, Mass.
THESE GOODS have been improved, even upon those which were considered superior to the foreign last year, and as we now have no hesitation in commending them as decidedly better in quality and colors than the foreign, we shall keep a large assortment of them, and advise every one who wants the articles above named not to buy until they have seen ours. Orders from the country will be carefully and promptly executed.

House for Sale.
A TWO story House and Stable, built in a substantial manner, with about three-quarters of an acre of Land, situated in Quincy, on the Braintree and Weymouth Turnpike, within a few rods of the Episcopal Church, will be sold at a bargain and payments made easy. For particulars, inquire on the premises, of GEORGE CLAPP.
Quincy, June 9. 3w

For Sale.
THE residence of the subscriber, situated on the Weymouth and Braintree Turnpike, one fourth of a mile from the Episcopal Church, and within ten minutes walk of the Old Colony Depot. The premises consist of one half-acre of Land with a good selection of Fruit Trees, an excellent Dwelling House, Stable, Sheds, and other Out Buildings.
The owner is very anxious to sell as he intends to leave for the "Gold Regions of California" in one or two months, and therefore a bargain may be expected.

A Valuable Mill & Privilege,
and other Real Estate, for Sale,
in Quincy.
THE subscriber offers for sale, his Mill, Privilege, Wharf, and other Real Estate, as follows:
The Mill is new and in full operation;
60 by 30 feet; 2 1/2 stories high; has two run of Burr Stones driven by two of Tuttle's Wheels, and is the best and most convenient Mill in the State, and will be sold at a bargain. There is a chance for another Wheel, to be applied for other purposes, at a small expense.
Also—Adjoining the above, and will be sold with the same, or separate, 300 feet of Wharf, part of which is now occupied as a stone wharf. Said Wharf has the best water of any wharf on the river.
Also—A House, with two acres of Land, near the wharf. A part of said land is valuable for a bed of clay upon the same.
Also—A young and thrifty Orchard, containing half an acre of Land, pleasantly situated on a hill, in full view of the town, the city of Boston, its Harbor and Bay.
Also—A Store on the corner of Washington and Coddington Streets, now occupied as a Grain Store and other kinds of business.
Also—A House, Barn and 3-4th of an acre of Land on Granite Street, within three minutes walk of the Old Colony Railroad Station.
The above property is well worthy the attention of any capitalist, or man of business, and will be sold at auction if not disposed of by the 1st of October. For further information, inquire on the premises near the Mill of the subscriber.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.

THE STORM.

A wild note 's in that thunder,
That bursting cloud is nigh,
And half creation's wonder
Lights up the trembling sky;
Like cracks in Hell's dark portals
The zig-zag lightning glares!
Now tremble, guilty mortals!
Now, sinners, to your prayers.

Look! the red bolt descending,
Has scath'd the lofty spire;
The mossy fabric rending,
The house of God 's on fire;
Below the flames are raging,
The cloud a torrent pours,
These hostile powers engaging,
While Heaven's artillery roars.

The house of God is falling,
By heaven's own hand it falls;
In vain the church is calling
To save her temple walls
That power above who deck'd it
With jewels rich and fair,
Why doth he now neglect it?
Iniquity was there!

He who in white robes dress'd her Condemns her to the dust;
A spot is on her vesture,
Hypocrisy accurs.
Her negro peccadillo
The poor white had no place;
The holy one condemning her
The Savior hides his face.

Had righteous hearts maintain'd it,
Had only one been found,
His goodness had sustained it,
It had been holy ground.
But those who there assembled
Forsook the narrow path;
Their worship all dissimul'd
Awoke Jehovah's wrath.

There sat the proud oppressor,
And there the sinful knave,
And shall the lord caress her
Who fattens on the slave?
How vain is the pretender
To him whose eye can see!
How vile is the offender
By base hypocrisy.

F. M. ADLINGTON, Weymouth.

THE COURTIN'.

'Zekel crept up unbeknown,
An' peeked in thru the window,
An' there sat Huddy all alone,
'Tid no one nigh to hinder.

Agin the chimney cock necks hung,
An' in amongst 'em rusted
The old Queen arm that gran'ther Young Fetched back from Concord busted.

The walnut log shot sparkles out,
Towards the poetist, bless her!
An' teatle firs danced all about
The chiny on the dresser.

The very room, cas she was in,
Looked warm from floor to ceilin',
An' she looked as rosy agin
'Ez th' apples she was peelin'.

She heerd a foot an' knowed it, tu,
A rasping on the scraper,
All ways to once, her feelings flew
Like sparks in burnt up paper.

He kin' o' littered on the mat,
Some doublet of the sekle';
His heart kep' goin' pitty pat,
But hern went pitty Zekle!

*Sequel.

TO A BUSY-BODY.

Oh! pray, reflect, consider, Mrs. B.
Before such foolish lies you give or tell;
For don't you know, or won't you see,
That such wickedness, nonsense, and detestable actions, coupled with a good deal of fuss, will carry you straight to—Dez-bub?

ANECDOTES.

A bishop sent round his diocese a circular of inquiries, amongst which was—'Does your officiating clergyman preach the gospel, and are his conversation and carriage consistent therewith?' To this query a churchwarden replied, 'He preaches the gospel, but does not keep a carriage.'

Mrs. Simpkins said she would persist in saying that her children were the prettiest, the sweetest, and the best mannered children in the land. 'Here James, John, Maria,' said she 'I want you to go to bed
now, like pretty dears, as you are!' 'Go to bed,' exclaimed James, 'well I guess we must be sick to think we're going to bed afore ten o'clock.'

O'Connell had obtained an acquittal for one of his clients; the fellow's joy knew no bounds. 'Och, counselor,' said he, 'I've no way here to show you my gratitude; but I wish I saw you, you knocked down in my own parish, and may be I wouldn't bring a faction to the rescue.'

A little child in church observing the minister very vehement in his words and gesture, cried out, 'Mother, why don't the people let the man out of the box?'

A young lady being asked why she did not use the medicated soap, replied that, as to soap, she got a plenty of soap from her head, and that always put a plenty of color into her cheeks.

'My good gracious! I wonder what they'll manufacture out of grain,' said Mrs. Partridge. 'Here's an account of a man making a rye face, and of another making a floury speech; then a whole column about corn laws.'

Norfolk Agricultural Society.

CATTLE SHOW AND FAIR.

THE Officers and Trustees of the Norfolk Agricultural Society announce to the public that their first annual exhibition will take place at Dedham, on WEDNESDAY, the 26th day of September.

This Society was formed, and incorporated the present year, for the encouragement of AGRICUL-TURE and HORTICULTURE, MANUFACTURING and ME-CHANIC ARTS, in the County of Norfolk. In order to promote the important objects comprehended in its
plan, the Trustees deem it expedient and essential to hold annual exhibitions, at which the products of agricultural science and industry, mechanical skill and ingenuity, may be displayed before the public. They believe that such exhibitions cannot fail to produce a generous and healthy rivalry in all the departments
of useful industry, stimulate exertion, and encourage modest and deserving merit, elevate and inform the public taste, awaken to life and activity unimproved talent, ingenuity and skill, contribute to the increase
and diffusion of valuable knowledge, and, in short,
tend generally to the cultivation, improvement, prosperity and happiness of the whole people.

They, therefore, respectfully invite the Agriculturists, Horticulturists, Manufacturers, Mechanics and Artisans of the County of Norfolk, to offer for exhibition and premium, at the time and place above mentioned, the products of their labor, skill, and taste in all the departments of useful and ornamental industry, such as Boots, Shoes, Carpets, Carpets, Manufactures of Straw, Wood, Metal, Wool, Cotton,
Flax, &c. &c. Specimens of FEMALE TASTE and IN-GENUITY are especially solicited, and it is expected
that they will form an interesting and attractive part
of the exhibition.

The products of Agriculture, Agricultural Employments, Domestic Manufactures, Price Essays, &c., for which premiums are offered, are especially enumerated in the list of premiums here published by order of the Society—to which we beg respectfully to refer—but
the Trustees, stepping beyond those limits, desire
to appeal to the public spirit and local pride of Mechanics, Inventors, and Artisans, for the means of forming an exhibition which shall be creditable to
the taste, ingenuity, and skill of our people, and honorable to the county.

As far as it may be within the power of the Society,
at its first exhibition, Premiums, Gratuities and Diplomas will be awarded for all articles of merit
deemed worthy of such distinction. Judges will be appointed to examine and report upon all articles that may be offered, and lists of such articles, with the names of producers, manufacturers or inventors, will
be preserved in the records of the Society, and published for the information and benefit of the community.

Contributions will be received on the day previous
to the exhibition, and until 9 o'clock of the same day.
Persons intending to compete for the premiums on Ploughing, are reminded that they are required to enter their names with the Secretary on or before SAT-URDAY, the 22d of September.

All packages by Railroad or otherwise, intended
for the exhibition, and all communications, must be addressed to the Secretary, at Dedham, who will see that they are properly attended to. Checks will be given for all articles received, which will entitle the
bearer to the same at the close of the exhibition.

Contributors are especially requested to send forward their articles in good season, to prevent confusion, and in order that they may be properly arranged.
Contributors will be entitled to free admission to the Hall of Exhibition.

The Exhibition will commence at 9 o'clock, A. M.
Ploughing Match at 10 o'clock, A. M. Address by the President in the Rev. Dr. Lamson's Meeting-house, at 11 1/2 o'clock. Collation at 1 o'clock. Drawing Match at 3 o'clock, P. M. Award of Premiums at 5 o'clock, P. M.

Scientific American.

To Inventors, Mechanics and Artizans.

THE Publishers of the Scientific American, in returning their thanks to the community for the liberal support and encouragement which has been extended to them during the past four years, and respectfully give notice that the 1st number of Volume 5, will be issued on the 22d of Sept., affording a favorable opportunity for all to subscribe, who may wish to avail themselves of the valuable information
always found in its columns. The new volume will be commenced with new type, printed on extra fine
paper, manufactured expressly for this publication, and embellished with a chaste and elegant border. It will be published as heretofore in quarto form, thus affording at the end of the year a beautiful book of over 400 Pages, containing between 5 and 600 Original Engravings of New Inventions, described by letters of
reference, besides a great amount of reading matter,
valuable to every man in the country.

An increased amount of care and expense will be bestowed upon this Volume, to render it more fully
what it has been termed, 'The Best Mechanical Paper in the World.' Its columns as usual will be filled with the most reliable and correct information in regard to the progress of Scientific and Mechanical improvements, Chemistry, Architecture, Botany, Manufactures, Rail Road intelligence, and the Weekly List
of Patents, prepared expressly for this Journal at the Patent Office in Washington.

As an evidence of the estimation in which this publication is held by the Scientific and Mechanical portion of the community, it is only necessary to state,
that its circulation has increased within the last three years upwards of ten thousand copies, already exceeding the united circulation of all the Mechanical
and Scientific publications in this country, and the largest of any single one in the world.

TERMS—Two dollars a year in advance, or if desired, one dollar in advance, and the remainder in six months.
To Clubs—5 copies, $8; 10 copies, $16; 20 copies, $28. All letters must be post paid and directed to MUNN & Co., Publishers of the Scientific American, New York.

N. B.—Patents secured and mechanical drawings executed on the most reasonable terms at the Scientific American office.

French Patent Oil for Leather.
THIS French Patent Oil is prepared for Carriages,
Harness, Boots, Shoes, and all articles that require a good polish on the surface; it will give any
article of Leather
A MOST BRILLIANT APPEARANCE,
and at the same time from its oily properties tends
much to preserve it. It will always be moist and pliant,
at the same time free from grease when handled;
there is not a spirit of such an oil invented that would give one-half the brilliancy to the leather to which
this is applied, and will never get mouldy. It may be exposed to water or washed, and will not lose its
brilliancy.
It is as well as all other articles made of leather, when polished with the above oil, will never be injured by rats or mice;—likewise dust has no effect on it, and it is not to be feared that any crust will settle on and leather preserved with the above oil.
Instructions—Drop a few drops upon a piece of sponge, and all that is required is, to apply it tightly
on the leather to obtain the finest lustre.
Price, 62 1/2 cts. per bottle, or $6 per dozen.
Manufactured by Messrs. Salomon & Co. from Paris.

REMINISCENCES

Of a portion of the early military life of the late Colonel Edmund Kirby, of the United States Army. By one of his associates.

My acquaintance with the late Col. Edmund Kirby, of the United States Army, commenced in the autumn of the year 1812. He was then a subaltern of the 4th Regiment of Infantry and was stationed at Fort Constitution, at the mouth of the Piscataqua River, near Portsmouth, (N.H.) at that time under the command of Captain, now the venerable and respected Bt. Brigadier General Walbach, by whom he was held in high estimation. Shortly after Lt. Kirby joined his regiment on the frontier of New York under the immediate command of the veteran and true hearted soldier and "honest man," Col. Purdy, by whom he was greeted as a son, and was forthwith appointed to the post of Adjutant, in which capacity he continued to serve, with marked distinction, during the war. Lieut. Kirby performed the duties of his position, which were constant and arduous, to the perfect satisfaction of his excellent commander, who was an strict disciplinarian, and to the entire approbation of the officers of the corps, with whom, as well as with the soldiery at large, he was, peculiarly and universally, a favorite.

The somewhat notorious "Chateaugay Campaign," under General Wade Hampton, ensued. The severe and arduous duties of this military melee, which I shall hazard the styling of this memorable campaign, although it did not achieve for the combatants undying laurels, yet, very materially, tended to the discipline, the knowledge of tactics and to the general subordination of the army, of which this division may be said to have formed the nucleus. To no man, in a subordinate capacity, can the honor be more signally attached than to Lieut. Kirby in effecting this desirable result. The arduous and devotedness with which he pursued his military duties, and the energy which he pressed into service to perfect himself in the accomplishments of a finished soldier, soon made him perfectly au fait in all that appertained to his profession, in which he seemed determined to excel. Like every effort which he essayed, his success was complete. The old 4th became the model regiment under his surveillance and was always distinguished for admirable discipline, tactics and subordination, as well as for that finished air which perfects the coup-d'œil of a military corps.

The forces under General Wilkinson having now united with the division at Plattsburg, the command of the right wing of the army devolved upon that showy martinet, by whom an attempt was made upon the enemy's position at La Cole. Here the 4th, as well as the army at large, was conspicuous for its steadiness and constancy under peculiarly trying circumstances; but where little was accomplished, by reason of an unlooked for contingency, to add material lustre to our arms. For the space of an hour the incessant discharge of fire arms resembled a feu-de-jar, during which period the commanding general, with that peculiar condescension and suavity for which he was conspicuous, en passant, "congratulated me on hearing the music of arms for the first time." A concurrent remark was made by Charles the 12th of Sweden at the whizzing of bullets in his first action. The coincidence, in a man of our General's poetical affinities, may not, therefore, be deemed singular! We were obliged to stand a murderous fire without being able to return it to advantage, a trying and vexing dilemma for a soldier, the light artillery, under Major McPherson, being of inadequate calibre to effect a breach in the stone mill, where a large body of the enemy were ensconced, which proved a complete citadel for the besieged. The state of the roads would not admit of the bringing forward the heavy ordnance, to which fact was attributed the failure of the enterprise. Our Adjutant's efficiency and untiring devotion to his duties were conspicuous throughout the engagement, evincing a determination to second every effort by his best energies at every point where duty or danger summoned.

At this period of the campaign I was elected to the military family of that admirable soldier and excellent man, Gen. Thomas A. Smith, commanding the Light Brigade, who was elevated from the Colony of the Rifle corps to this station. In his personal staff I served during the remainder of the war. Gen. Smith was another instance, among many of our military, of the union of modesty and merit. It was asked by a Senator at the time of his nomination, "if he could write?" "I do not know," was replied, "but if he cannot write he can fight." This point needed not to have been mooted. Like our own Taylor, he was "every inch" a soldier, having passed his "dearest action in the tented field" and could either write or fight with equal fluency. By this transfer from line to staff duty I was no longer immediately associated with the 4th, but still fell into daily intercourse with it by its constituting a component part of that command. The General early discovered the intrinsic value of the Adjutant and reposed in him the highest confidence. He entertained for him personally, affectionate regard for his assiduity in duty, his amiability of character and his artless naïveté of manners for which he was remarkable.

After the unsuccessful demonstration at La Cole, the executive, dissatisfied with General Wilkinson, and learning late the value of the old maxim, "old men for counsel, and young men for action," substituted General Izard as chief of the army of the North. At the commencement of hostilities, the years of the revolution on the head of one who had served, seemed to be sufficient credentials of generalship with the administration, and Hull, Bloomfield, Dearborn, Hampton, Wilkinson, Lewis, &c., seemed to possess in their estimation the venit, vidi, vici charm of Cæsar and the "open sesame" to the gates of Canada! Different councils now prevailed, and young, active and ambitious seekers for the "bubble reputation" were substituted. The natural results followed. Brilliant success and victory perched on our standards.

Gen. Izard, with six thousand men, was ordered to reinforce the command of Gen. Brown upon the Niagara, and after a month's marching, the army was encamped at Black Rock, having proceeded from Plattsburgh, via Sacket's Harbor and the Lake and debarked at Oswego, the mouth of the Genesee. In this proceeding was seen the impolicy of carving a campaign at Washington! Gen. Armstrong, then Secretary, as a soldier of the revolution, had the direction of military affairs. Had sufficient confidence been reposed in the commander of the expedition, and a carte blanche been given him for the exercise of his own discretion, Gen. Izard, as he remarked to me at an interview after the war, would have proceeded to the head of the Lake and, thus, placed the enemy between two fires, a most uncomfortable position for a soldier, and a surrender would, in all probability, have ensued of the British forces. Our march was tediously protracted by bad weather and the state of the roads and when it arrived at its destination, the sortie of Fort Erie had taken place and the league of that fortress was abandoned. After the affair at Lyon's Creek and other skirmishing, which ensued of but little available results, the army undertook no further belligerent measures and the peace makers at Ghent soon after gave a quietus to the aspirations for glory at "the cannon's mouth." Lieut. Kirby in the tedious march and subsequent active movements of the army was, ever, on the qui vive and was distinguished for his constant energetic devotion to duty and the services he rendered. No man of his grade stood higher at Headquarters, or was more appreciated there, or by the army at large.

At an early period in the war, I was appointed to a Lieutenancy in the 9th Regiment of United States Infantry, which subsequently acquired celebrity and distinction under the gallant General Brown, on the banks of the Niagara, together with the rather questionable sobriquet of "the bloody 9th." Having formed a warm attachment to the estimable subject of this brief and imperfect notice, I applied for a transfer to the 4th, for which I entertained a like regard for the distinction it had already obtained under its distinguished commander, Col. John P. Boyd, at Tippecanoe, to whose vigilance, gallantry and skill, by the general acknowledgements of his associates on that memorable occasion, the successful result of that action may be ascribed.

Although I had seen the Battalion colors of the 4th, deposited with great military pomp in the chapel of Whitehall, at the Horse Guards in London, and arranged in juxtaposition beside the dilapidated Eagles of France, captured at Salamanca and Ciudad Rodrigo, I felt assured that they had suffered no dishonor by their surrender at Detroit. Mortifying and humiliating to American pride as was the act, I notwithstanding succeeded in securing my transfer, and was thus brought into daily proximity with Adjutant Kirby, on joining my regiment at Plattsburg, (N.Y.). To our juvenile attachment, from a congeniality of sentiment and character, an ardent and refined friendship, cemented by common danger and privations, succeeded, which continued unabated and with constant literary intercourse till the period of his lamented demise. I could now, personally, vouch for the alacrity, fidelity and unremitting devotion to duty, which, then, and ever after, characterized his deportment as an officer of the general government. It seemed to be his chief pleasure, as well as a paramount principle, to devote himself to the public service; that service which has thus brought him to a premature grave; for to disease incurred by exposure and arduous duty in Mexico, has he fallen a victim. There can hardly be a doubt, that this consideration will have ample weight with the government of the country he so faithfully served, and that an adequate pension will be awarded to the bereaved widow and family to whom he was so endeared and to whose protection and counsel they were so deeply indebted.

To his general biography, which is in contemplation, I shall leave the recapitulation and details of his long and valuable services as a paymaster entrusted with vast amounts of the public funds and of the supererogatory duty which resulted in his brilliant performances in the line during the Mexican campaigns. Their "plain, unvarnished" narration will be his glowing eulogy.

Col. Kirby was remarkably gifted with "the pen of a ready writer." In the recesses of a well matured and cultivated mind his intellect shone with a redeeming lustre. His letters were models of the epistolary style. Some of them, in the sanctity of confiding friendship to myself, contained highly graphic and well defined sketches of public men, particularly of such as have distinguished themselves in Mexico. I have reason to believe, had his valued life been spared, that he would have contributed to the literature of the day an account of the campaigns in which himself, his compeers and his country acquired such imperishable renown. Such a work, from such a source, would have been indeed invaluable for future reference. His extreme and retiring modesty, however, approaching diffidence of his abilities beyond the precincts of his profession, kept him aloof from the public eye and in this, as well as other known occasions, less credit will inure to his posthumous fame and greater loss result to his country by his fastidious reserve. Many eminent men have been similarly constituted, for true merit is always modest.

"It is the witness still of excellency
To put a strange face on its own perfection."

Whilst Washington, Hull, Taylor, et id omne genus, are memorable for their surpassing modesty and their unwillingness to essay the publicity of the forum or the press, it can be deemed no alloy in the composition of our excellent fellow countryman, that he did not luxuriate in prolific wordiness before assembled crowds in the market place, nor figure in the reviews of the day. "In wit a man, simplicity a child," he eschewed notoriety in every form. Satisfied with the high reputation he had already achieved, and happy in the domestic circle of his beloved homestead, his aim in future life was, as he averred, to "pursue the even tenor of his way" in "the post of honor, a private station," and to exercise his faculties in forwarding the best interests of his fellow citizens. The public works of western New York, rail and plank roads, agricultural societies, manufactures, etc., attest his energy, industry and perseverance, as well as his zeal in the pursuits of civil life and his peculiar adaptation for their prosecution. He will, thus, long be regarded as one of the public benefactors of that interesting portion of our land and the immense concourse from the surrounding country, that attended his obsequies, prove how highly he was appreciated.

He "peremptorily shut pan," to use his own significant, tactical term, upon every effort of his admiring friends to draw him into political life, declaring, apart from his disinclination, that "he was not rich enough for the sacrifices it would demand." He, thus, with that sound and discriminate good sense, which distinguished him and with the spirit of true philosophy, relinquished those aspirations for political distinction, which compose the very aliment of those, who, so eagerly, tilt in the periodical tournaments of the partisan arena. He preferred to devote himself to the comparatively, more humble and obscure duties of the public service and of private enterprise in which he had so long been engaged.

From his practical experience and intimate knowledge of the details of army life and duty he would have proved a most useful incumbent of the post of War Secretary, which had been urged upon him by partial friends. From his intimacy with the present chief Magistrate, with whom he had served as aid, he would have been an invaluable confidant and auxiliary of that distinguished functionary, whom he, thus, concisely and characteristically, has sketched in a manner, that might well be applied to himself. "I have the sincerest respect and affectionate regard for 'Don Zac.' He is a simple minded, honest old soul, of such constancy of courage and firmness of purpose, so unaffected and plain dealing in all things, that all, who serve near him, love him."

To the distinguished post of Governor of the great State of New York it is known, that his friends were desirous of advancing him; but to this proposition he could not be prevailed on to lend a listening ear.

Such was Edmund Kirby. Whilst virtue, honor and unblemished purity of life and character continue to be esteemed, his memory will be held in grateful recollection by his numerous friends, and by all who enjoyed the gratification of his acquaintance. If, among the glorified spirits of "just men made perfect," a purer or nobler has "flown up to Heaven's Chancery," we are at loss to designate him.

To give a better idea of the exalted standing of this gallant soldier, virtuous man, and useful citizen, I subjoin the following accounts of his reception among his friends and neighbors of Western New York, on his return from the seat of war to his homestead at Brownville.—Such a reception is ample proof that he was no common man, and is another indubitable confirmation of the libel, that "Republicans are ungrateful."

MAJOR KIRBY AT HOME.

On Thursday last, the ringing of bells—booming of cannon, and such other demonstrations of popular enthusiasm as were predicted by the elder Adams would usher in the Anniversary of our National Jubilee, announced to the people of Brownville and its vicinity that their excellent fellow-citizen, Major KIRBY, was returning to his home.

Although the unexpected manner of his arrival was such as to preclude any pre-concert of arrangement, and disappointed the desire of thousands of the adjacent country to join in a demonstration of congratulation and welcome; yet a large cavalcade of his friends were able to meet him before his arrival in town, and before reaching the village the entire population had formed in procession, and his arrival gave him a most cordial and heart-felt reception.

Agreeable to the previously expressed wish of the citizens, his esteemed and venerable friend, THOMAS V. HOWE, Esq., greeted him with the following Address:—

MAJ. E. KIRBY.—It is not, Sir, in the spirit of form or of ceremony, that your fellow-citizens, of the village of Brownville, assemble to receive you upon your return to your family and home; but from those sentiments of respect, esteem and affection which they cherish towards you.

Unwilling, as you are, to detain you from the presence of your family, they cannot but yield to their feelings in delaying you, for a moment, while they assure you of the strong solicitude which they have constantly felt for your personal welfare during the arduous and dangerous service in which you have been engaged, and of their gratitude to Almighty God for restoring you to them in unbroken health. May you long continue to serve your country with the distinguished talent and the unspotted integrity which have ever characterized your official conduct, and to adorn our private society with those excellent qualities which have given you so deep a place in the hearts of your fellow-citizens!

The moist eye and quivering lip of the gallant soldier, whose iron nerve had braved, seatless, for the past two years, the hardships of every climate and the leader had of many a field, gave slight indication in view of the crowd of familiar faces around him, that there are times when a brave man may falter. His incoherent reply was drowned in cheers—three times three and one cheer more, the procession moved on to the gate of his beautiful and beloved homestead, and with a parting cheer left him to the embraces of his family.

The Mexican war has possessed more than ordinary interest in the minds of Brownville. Not only relatives of many of her citizens have taken a distinguished part in its perils and glories. For them much solicitude has been felt. But the anxiety of the friends of Major Kirby were quieted in the early part of the war by the assurance that he would confine himself to the duties of his immediate office, and allow those who were to win the laurels and acquire the glories of the field to brave the dangers of it. From his frequent and interesting letters to his friends, descriptive of the incidents of every field from Monterey to the terraces of the city of the Aztecs, none would infer that of the active business of the field of battle he had been anything else than a quiet looker-on. As to this, however, they were early undeceived. The official reports of Gen. Taylor announced to them the active and valuable services of Major Kirby as his Volunteer Aid—"conveying his orders to points of danger and through difficulties with an alacrity which entitles him to all praise." And they soon learned from his fellow officers that there was no man in the Army whose opinions upon military matters stood higher in the esteem of the General-in-Chief than those of Major Kirby. General Scott had known him long and well, and of course he was embraced in the requisition to join him at Vera Cruz. The arduous duties of Chief of the Pay Department, with its millions of responsibility, although requiring incessant labor, were insufficient for the tireless energies of this faithful and gallant public servant. The fields of Cerro Gordo—Molino del Rey—Chapultepec—witnessed his daring and intrepidity—the more glorious that it proceeded from pure and disinterested patriotism. Being out of the line of promotion, he aimed at no higher rank, while daring deeds of bravery and heroism which herald the Brevets of officers of the line.—Such, however, has been his uniform course through life—active and efficient benevolence in the walks of private life—energetic and untiring in the performance of all and more than all his duties, as a public man—seeking no reward—asking no higher distinction—he has his reward in the admiration and affection of his fellow-citizens.

The Albany Evening Journal, in noticing the arrival of Maj. Kirby to that city, pays him the following just compliment:
Major Kirby is not only one of the most gallant but one of the most efficient, practical and useful officers in the Army. He was commissioned when a youth by President Madison, and distinguished himself in the war with England. In the sanguinary battles on the Niagara Frontier he was Aid to Gen. Brown, whose daughter he married, and after the war, though holding himself always ready for duty, became an enterprising farmer. In all emergencies, however, he was remembered and sent for. In the Black Hawk and Florida Wars he did good service. At the first blast of war with Mexico he was ordered to join Gen. Taylor upon the Rio Grande. There he became, as he does everywhere, active and efficient in all the movements of the Army. After Gen. Taylor had reached Saltillo, Maj. Kirby was ordered to join Gen. Scott, with whom he bore a prominent part in all the glorious achievements from the capture of Vera Cruz to the occupation of the "Office of the Montezuma."

Through in the Pay Department, Maj. Kirby is a "man of all work" in the Army. His worth is known to every commanding General, and on all trying occasions his advice is in request.

After Mexico had fallen and a Treaty of Peace made, Maj. Kirby was relieved, and goes home to resume his agricultural and domestic occupations and enjoyments. Though a man of more mind and merit, and one who has fought more battles than many who figure as war chiefs, Maj. Kirby, with simple habits and unostentatious manners, passes quietly and almost unobserved, from a dozen hard fought battle fields, to the plow he left in the furrow, to grasp the sword with which he won laurels at Chippewa and Lundy's Lane. We are most happy to learn that two Brevet Commissions, which raise Maj. Kirby to the rank of Colonel, are now before the Senate.

RECEPTION OF MAJ. KIRBY AT SACKET'S HARBOR.

It having been announced through our village to-day (Thursday), that Maj. Kirby had arrived here, on his route home from Mexico, our citizens immediately assembled at the call of D. McColl, Esq., the President of the village, and appointed J. C. Dunn, Oris N. Cole, M. K. Stone, D. N. Dunham, T. S. Hall, and D. Hunter a committee to wait on Maj. Kirby, and to arrange for giving to his distinguished citizen of our country, such cordial reception as was prompted by the spontaneous feelings of our people, clearly due to his high character and important public services.

A. Ford, Esq., was designated to address Maj. Kirby upon the occasion, in behalf of our citizens, who were assembled in great numbers in front of the Exchange. Maj. Kirby was conducted by the committee on the steps in front of the Exchange, where Mr. Ford addressed him as follows:

MAJ. KIRBY:

In behalf of the citizens of this place, whose organ I am, I welcome your return from the camp and battle fields of Mexico to the country of Jefferson. Long known and distinguished in this community for your energy, usefulness and integrity in the public and private relations and business of civil life, respected and honored for your amity and prominent virtues, he assured that we, your neighbors and friends, have watched with intense interest your military career in Mexico. We have seen and known, that declining to avail yourself of the position of Pay Master in chief of the army in Mexico, as you honorably might have done, and exempted yourself from the hazards incident to the deadly conflict of arms, you have been a volunteer in every battle, with a single exception, from the storming of Monterey, to the triumphant entry of the American army into the capital city of Mexico. We have read and marked with lively emotions of pleasure and gratification, the high encomiums of praise which your conduct and services have drawn from the General-in-Chief and Generals of Divisions of the army—and while watching your progress and beholding many falling upon your right hand and upon your left, we have rejoiced that you have been spared the fate of, alas! too many of our countrymen.

Rest assured Sir, that your services are not wholly "unrequited." In a few hearts and affections of this people, who have known you longest and known you best, and you will be held in lasting remembrance. That reward is yours at least.

Grateful to a kind Providence, who has watched over and protected and secured you to your family, your friends and your country, we devoutly hope that your future life may be as protected and pleasant as your former has been honorable to yourself and useful to your country. Again, in the name of my townsmen, I bid you welcome to Jefferson county, to your friends and to your home.

To which Maj. Kirby replied in a brief, but feeling and appropriate address.
He thanked his friends, who had assembled to give him this cordial welcome. He had never doubted that on returning to his home and his friends he should be made welcome. But a public demonstration like the present was entirely unexpected, and he was unprepared to meet it. That his own efforts had been too feeble to merit such praise, and that it was only due to those noble Chiefs and our gallant Army, who had exerted their best energies and talents, freely spilling their blood when called to do battle for their country. He thanked them again for the honor they had done him, as no one knew better how to appreciate such kindness, than he, who had long been separated from his friends and his kindred. He congratulated the people of the United States on their happiness in having so good a country, and a government the best in the world. He had long thought that the United States was the fairest and best portion of this continent, and his absence had only served to confirm him in that opinion; and that in no place within the United States, was there a brighter spot, or one that surpassed in the comforts and enjoyments of life, our own old Jefferson—God bless her!

After which many of our citizens, including several of the ladies of the village, paid their respects to the gallant Major, at the Exchange, during the few moments he tarried here. At about 2 o'clock, he departed for his home at Brownville. We are happy to say that he appears in good health and fine spirits.

PUBLIC SPEAKING. When the chivalrous Hull broke the spell of England's supremacy on the ocean by the capture of the Guerriere, on his return to port he was complimented by the citizens of Boston with a public dinner. The cloth being removed, after a few preliminary toasts came one to the honor of the captain—"Our gallant guest, who has secured for himself a name and a praise among his countrymen, and added terror to the courtesy of his country's flag." The toast was drunk with enthusiasm, and then all was quiet. A friend sitting next to the gallant captain, said, "Sir, we are waiting for your speech." "A speech!" said the modest Hull, "I can't make a speech—I don't know how." A gentleman on the opposite side of the table exclaimed, audibly,—"Sir, you are in for a speech. Don't you see that the president is waiting for a response to the toast?" The noble air rose up and said, "Mr. President, the gentlemen round me say that you and the other gentlemen are waiting for me to make a speech. Sir, I never made one in my life. I can't do it, sir. I don't know how, sir. I'd rather fight the battle over again than try it!" The rafters of Faneuil Hall were a little displaced by the truthful delicacy of the gallant captain.

THE LEARNED PROFESSIONS.

The mania for entering the "learned professions," which was once so universally prevalent throughout this country, appears in a great measure to have died away. It seemed, at one period, to be the honest and conscientious conviction of every married pair in the United States, to whom a "man-child" was born, that that identical infant was destined to be as great a luminary of his country and the world, as he was of his father's hearth; that he was either to be a Blackstone at the Bar, or a Tillotson in the Church, or a Cooper in Medicine; or if neither of these, that he might possibly content himself with being a Major General in the Army, or a Commodore in the Navy. There was no telling so long before hand, but very possibly "that child," if he lived, might become President of the United States, and wield the sceptre of authority over millions of other babies yet unborn. While these sage reflections passed through the mind of the parent, the infant by some mysterious magnetic mode of acquiring knowledge, which perhaps Dr. Dods, or Dr. Williams, or the old gentleman in black, alone could explain, arrived at the same conclusion with his father and mother, and became charged with the electric idea that he was a very extraordinary youth and had before him a very extraordinary destiny. In process of time, this idea was further developed by reading the light literature of the day, in which no one hero, or very admirable character of any kind is found, unless he have a title, noble, military or civil. In the popular novels, which all little Americans of both sexes read and always have read, and from which they derive their bright ideas of society and actual life, a mechanic is never introduced, except perhaps to build a cottage for Miss Araminta, or to finish the repairs on the town or country houses of the Right Hon. Augustus Aurelius Fortescue Fitzgerald or the like. To introduce a mechanic as the hero of a novel, or a sewing girl as the heroine, is a thing which would have distressed and disgusted, beyond measure all the novel readers of the land.

It is no wonder, therefore, that the "learned professions" became at one time the only pursuits in which nice, genteel young men would permit themselves to indulge, so that these professions all over the country became completely overstocked. In every city and town, it so happened that a few patient, plodding, personages monopolized the business and the profits of the profession to which they belonged; while the great majority had nothing to do and little to eat. This state of things, in a country such as ours, could not last always, and the evil has consequently begun to work its own cure.

For, be it remembered, the American is a money loving as well as title-admiring animal, and, fond as he may be of ornaments and luxuries, he has, in spite of all his follies, a solid quarry of strong, hard sense in his composition, and an admiration of the practical somewhat stronger than his fancy for the ideal. Jonathan could never think of "dying of dignity," and consequently we are not surprised to see that many of our young men after obtaining collegiate education, now devoting themselves to mechanical pursuits and to manual labor on the farm. We fully anticipate that this will become a general thing, and that the period is not far distant when it will be considered just as respectable to be an honest and industrious mechanic, as a member of those "professions" known by compliment, as the "learned."

To bring about this result, and to command their due share of influence and respect, mechanics should embrace every means to elevate, intellectually and morally their own condition. And it is a duty of republican society to discourage and frown at those prejudices against labor, which they have inherited from an aristocratic government and imbibed from the worst portions of its literature. It would seem as if reason and common sense, as well as republicanism and right feeling would be sufficient to destroy these unjust and injurious prejudices. The superior man is he who develops, in harmony, his moral, intellectual, and physical nature. This should be the end at which men of all classes should aim, and it is this only which constitutes real respectability.

For the Quincy Patriot.

GENERAL COLD WATER ARMY.

The annual meeting of the Whigs of Officers and Addresses, was held in the Town Hall, on Saturday afternoon, at two o'clock, the 22d inst.

The lowering clouds, which for a day or two, threatened to defer our meeting, were dispersed and the pleasantness of the weather finely accorded with the pleasant countenances and feelings of about two hundred well dressed and orderly children; more beautiful to the reflective beholder than a garden of the richest flowers.

The meeting was called to order by the President, and after a song from the children, we listened to an appropriate prayer, by Rev. Mr. Gould.

The Treasurer, Abram Prescott, presented the following Report:

Quincy, Sept. 22, 1849.
The General Cold Water Army, by your Treasurer, beg leave to report the state of your Treasury:
Received of James S. Baxter, your former Treasurer, $3.36
Received of Mr. Felt for use of tables, 1.00
Cash paid Mr. Samuel Baxter, per order, $4.36
Balance now in hands of your Treasurer, 2.00

ABRAM PRESCOTT, Treas.

Voted to accept the Report.
Another song, and it was then voted that a committee of three be chosen to nominate a list of Officers for the ensuing year.

Voted.—That the above committee be appointed by the Chair, who named Abram Prescott, John Hardwick, and T. Kellogg.

On motion of Geo. Newcomb, Esq., voted that the committee report at the close of the meeting.

The President now introduced Dea. Moses Grant, of Boston, well known by most of the youthful audience, as he doubtless is to most of the Cold Water Armies in New England. He evidently spoke from an extensive personal observation of the miseries of Intemperance which he had witnessed, in above thirty years of hard labor in the cause. And notwithstanding he had seen so many inebriates reformed and made happy with their families, yet, he usually felt in Temperance meetings, more like weeping than rejoicing, as so many were cases of suffering children, mothers and fathers, were still rushing upon his mind. He reminded me of the Divine character spoken of by the Prophet, "as a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief." His stories and remarks were heart-felt and interesting. May "he be faithful unto death, receive a crown of life," and his name be recorded with the first philanthropists of the age.

The next speaker introduced was G. W. Bungay, an eloquent lecturer on Education and Temperance, ranking with Gough and Chapin as a public speaker.

His valuable services in pleasing, instructing and persuading the children to sobriety and virtue, I hope may be enjoyed by all our youthful armies in this vicinity. Many of his thrilling stories, beautiful figures, and useful remarks, presented in his peculiar, clear, vigorous and masculine style, will be remembered by the children, and must favorably influence their future conduct and characters. May life, health, and every blessing attend him and his family, and may he continue to lecture for many years to come.

The President next called upon Rev. Mr. Kimball, for some remarks, which were appropriate to the occasion.

The Chairman of the nominating committee, now presented the following list of names, as officers of the Army the ensuing year, all of whom were unanimously chosen.

President.—Dr. William B. Duggan.
Vice Presidents.—George Newcomb, Esq., Dea. William Pratt.
Treasurer.—Abram Prescott.
Corresponding Secretary.—David B. Stetson.
Recording Secretary.—Theodore Kellogg.

Directors.—James M. Wade, George S. Gill, Jonathan Baxter, Capt. John Hartwick, Dea. Eliza Baxter, Dea. George Baxter, William D. Gray, George W. Barrett, George W. Basley, Eben. Ford, Harrison O. Whitney, James S. Baxter, George Venzie, Jr., George S. T. Whiting, Benjamin Bass.

•The Deacon, either alone, or in connection with Mr. Bungay, (for they did not let their right hand know, what their left hand done in this matter, as we could understand,) procured and distributed a bundle of tracts and temperance papers amongst the children, as the overflowing of a benevolent heart.

The meeting adjourned in good season and all retired well pleased. T. KELLOGG, Secy.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 29, 1849.

THE LYCEUM.—Although unable to-day to announce the entire course of lectures which will be given before this Institution during the present season—owing to the late hour at which the order came to hand—still, we are happy to say that the services of several public men who stand preeminent in the field of eloquence and learning are engaged, by the Society, so that its members at their weekly intellectual banquets will be regaled by some of the choicest viands. Therefore, lovers of learning, and of self-culture, do not delay in becoming members of so valuable an Institution.

CHOWDER. Daniel French, at his Saloon, will serve up this evening one of these delicious preparations, the first of the season, in true epicurean style. That it will be all which the lovers of this favorite luxury may desire, the experience as well as the relish of the caterer for the good things of this world, are a strong guaranty and will rally a crowd to enjoy, each, one bowl of No. 1 clam chowder. Be on hand early, ye lovers of this excellent and fashionable dish, and you will not get disappointed.

AGRICULTURAL GATHERING. The first meeting of the Norfolk Agricultural Society was numerous, attended on Wednesday last, at Dedham. We have seen no account of its proceedings, and therefore can give none until next week. Much dissatisfaction was expressed by members of the society at the management, and there was good cause for complaint. Something was radically wrong, and the public will be cautious how they are humbugged again. More anon.

DELEGATES.—At a recent meeting of the Whigs of this town, the following gentlemen were selected as delegates, viz:—

State Convention.—Israel W. Munroe, Lysander Richards, and Horatio N. Glover. Substitutes—Thomas C. Webb, Ebenezer Adams, George H. French.

County Convention.—Thomas C. Webb, George H. French, Lysander Richards.

A RARE OPPORTUNITY. On Monday next, Geo. H. French will sell by order of the Probate Court, at auction, the former residence of Capt. E. Underwood, Jr., very pleasantly situated. There is thereon a good house, stable, and other out-buildings, with a choice variety of fruit trees, grapes, flowers, shrubbery, etc. Within a few minutes walk of the Railroad Depot, with all other desirable advantages, the sale moreover being positive, it offers a great chance for the man of leisure, or the working-man to get a healthful and pleasant home.

TAKE NOTICE. On Monday next, there will be a change in the time of running the cars on the Old Colony Railroad, as will be observed by their advertisement.

PUBLIC DOCUMENT. We are indebted to the Hon. Horace Mann, for a bound copy of the Patent Office Report, for 1848.

Increase S. Smith, Esq. of Dorchester, will deliver the Address before the Agricultural Society, at Bridgewater, on the 3d of October.

It is stated that a cattle market, in rivalry to the one at Brighton, has been established at Cambridge in the rear of Porter's Hotel. Ample accommodations have been provided, and the location is favorable for those who bring live stock over the Vermont Central, Fitchburg, and Northern Railroads. The markets are held on Wednesdays.

James Bates has been appointed keeper of the Light House at Scituate, in place of Ebenezer Osborn, removed.

Out of a quarter of a million of emigrants from Great Britain to America, 188,233 proceeded to the United States, and only 31,005 to the British colonies—about eighty-five per cent. were Irish.

Israel Post, long known as a publisher in New York city, died at Panama of cholera on the 6th ult.

The number of passengers that arrived at Boston between May 22d and August 23d was 10,327 in ninety-five vessels; and the amount of fees collected from said vessels was $950.

In the city of New York, from May 19th, 1849, when the first case of cholera occurred, to September 22d, there were 4957 deaths by cholera. The population of New York is about 425,000. The ratio of deaths is therefore one to eighty-six inhabitants.

Rev. Dr. Gannett's Society of Boston, have received a polite request to surrender immediate possession of their church and land in Federal street to the First Presbyterian Society of that city, on the ground of an alleged provision in the original grant of said estate, that the Scotch Presbyterian form of worship should always be maintained there.

Five of the great capitals of Europe are now under military law, namely, Paris, Vienna, Berlin, Rome and Naples.

There are twenty-two applications for divorce pending before the Supreme Court, now in session at New London, (Ct.)

Kossuth, Dembinski, and about eighty Hungarian refugees are in Turkey, and have placed themselves under British protection. A sister of Kossuth has been captured by the Austrians and is held prisoner.

NOTICES.

The regular monthly meeting of the Niagara Engine Company, No. 1, will be held at the Engine House on MONDAY EVENING next, at sunset.

The members of Tiger Engine Company No. 2, are requested to meet at their Engine House, THIS EVENING, at 8 o'clock.

The regular meeting of the Quincy Lyceum, will be held at the Lyceum Room, next WEDNESDAY EVENING, at half past seven o'clock.

The testimony of Science to the virtues of Dr. Corbett's SHAKER SYRUP OF SARSAPARILLA.

This invaluable preparation is daily drawing towards it the notice of the most distinguished Physicians and Chemists in the United States, and is prescribed in their practice very generally. The Formula of its preparation being freely placed with them for examination.

From E. R. Peaslee, M. D., Professor of Anatomy and Physiology, Dartmouth College, and Professor of Anatomy and Surgery in the Medical School, Brunswick, Me.

I first became acquainted with the Compound Concentrated Syrup of Sarsaparilla, prepared by Dr. Corbett, of the Shakers' Society, somewhat more than four years ago, at the time he made its precise composition public to the members of the New Hampshire Medical Society. It was at once believed that the formula then published by Dr. Corbett could not fail to prove a most valuable remedy in all cases in which the peculiar effects of sarsaparilla are required. This expectation has, on trial, been fully realized. It has peculiar efficacy in certain diseases of the skin and of the digestive apparatus, and in scrofulous conditions generally. The ingredients added to the Sarsaparilla itself, of which it contains more than the other preparations I have used, increase its alternative effects and render it diuretic, and, in most cases, slightly laxative also. I recommend it to practitioners of medicine as superior to any Syrup of Sarsaparilla I have yet tried, in cases requiring the administration of this remedy; none but physicians being, in my opinion, competent to distinguish the precise conditions in which it is really indicated.

Sold by EDWARD BRINLEY & Co., Druggists, Boston, sole proprietors, and by their appointed Agents throughout the United States.

Agents—Mrs. E. HAYDEN, Quincy; Oliver Perkins, Braintree.

BEWARE OF IMPOSITION.

The greater the value of any discovery, the higher it is held in the esteem of the public, and so much in proportion is that public liable to be imposed upon by the spurious imitations of ignorant, designing, and dishonest men, who, like the drone in the hive, have neither the ability nor inclination to provide for themselves, but thrive and luxuriate upon the earnings of the deserving. The extraordinary success attending the use of Wistar's Balsam, in diseases of the lungs, and the many singular cures it has effected, have naturally attracted the attention of many physicians, as well as the whole fraternity of quacks.

Now that this preparation is well known to be a more certain cure for incipient CONSUMPTION, ASTHMA, LIVER COMPLAINT, COUGHS, BRONCHITIS, and all similar affections, than any other remedy ever known, there will be, and NOW ARE found those so villainously wicked as to connect a spurious, and perhaps poisonous mixture, and try to palm it off as the genuine Balsam. We raise no false alarm. We advise the public of these schemes, that their health may not be trifled with, nor ourselves plundered of our just rights.

THE GENUINE AND ORIGINAL DR. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY, on account of its great popularity, has been extensively counterfeited in Philadelphia, and some thousand bottles of the spurious imitation thrown into the market and extensively circulated. This is to caution dealers and the public generally against purchasing any other than the HAVING THE WRITTEN SIGNATURE OF L. BUTTS on the wrapper.

Agents—Mrs. E. HAYDEN, Quincy; Oliver Perkins, Braintree.

Special Notice to Consumptives! Dr. S. S. FITCH, of New York city, would inform the citizens of Quincy and vicinity that he has established an Agency Office, at No. 15-17 Hanover St., Boston, for the sale of his popular Medicine, Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, Inhalant Tubes for Consumptives, Shoulder Braces, etc. Dr. Fitch's "Guide to Invalids," (a work containing 74 pages) can be obtained gratis, by application at his office.

Ladies in the city can be waited upon at their residences, and Shoulder Braces, Supporters, etc. fitted by Mrs. RICE.

Also—For sale as above Dr. Fitch's Lectures on Consumption and its cure.

The members of the Free Soil Club are hereby notified, that their annual meeting for the choice of Officers will be held in the Lyceum Room on MONDAY EVENING, Oct. 1st, at seven o'clock.

A Lecture will be given by Hon. Charles F. Adams, previous to the choice of officers.

The citizens generally are invited to attend.

A sure cure for Dyspepsia and Costiveness. HARRISON'S PERISTALTICS have had 12 years' trial by the Medical faculty and the public generally. This medicine is in Lozenges, pleasant to the taste, and may be given to children.

The Peristaltics are gently laxative, and by their tonic qualities improve the digestive organs and invigorate the whole system. They cure Costiveness, Headache, Dizziness, Sleeplessness, Jaundice, Oppression after Eating, Liver Complaint, Diarrhoea, Piles, Dropsy, Debility, Faintness, Weak Stomach, Heartburn, Palpitation, Rheumatism, Pains in the Bones, Scrofula, Tic-Douleur, Worms, etc., etc.

These Lozenges are excellent in all Nervous complaints and Dyspeptic symptoms, Female Suppressions and Irregularities, especially in the young. This medicine contains no preparation of Mercury whatever, and no ingredient which may not safely be given to the most delicate female and under any circumstances.

This preparation is also put up in bottles for seafaring persons, who should always have a supply. An occasional use of the Peristaltics prevents Fevers, Bilious complaints, and chronic or East India Diarrhoea. They are admirably adapted to the complaints incident to the coast of Africa, Sumatra, West Indies and South America.

For sale in Quincy by Mrs. E. HAYDEN, Seth W. Fowle, 135 Washington street, Boston, General Agent.

DR. BRIGGS'S SHOULDER BRACES AND SUPPORTERS are acknowledged by the Medical Faculty of New York to be the best ever invented. Read the following letter from Prof. C. P. BRONSON, A. M., M. D., Teacher of Education and Music.

Dr. Briggs: Dear Sir—You ask my candid opinion of your Shoulder and Shoulder Brace. I am not apt to be carried away with new things, nor accustomed to receive whatever comes highly recommended. I care but little for theory; practice, or use, is the great test; hence I abide by this motto—"Prove all things, and hold fast that which is good." I have no idea that your Brace will cure many diseases; but as a preventive of disease, I find by considerable experience and observation, that it is very valuable; particularly such diseases as are incident to the digestive organs, lungs and spine; because it pleasantly compels a person to be straight, and thereby aids the operations of nature. Blessed are the upright, body as well as mind; and the opposite is equally true.—Cursed are the crooked.

I have applied this brace to a great variety of persons, male and female, old and young; and in most of these cases with decided benefit, especially those of feeble constitutions and slender forms. And I am particularly pleased with its structure, conforming, as it does, so entirely to physiological principles, on which account it commends itself to reason and common sense, as well as to science. I am acquainted with a good many articles of a somewhat similar character and purpose, but consider yours preferable to any of them; as it differs, in some important respects from all others. Allow me to hope that you will not resort to any of the too common modes of "alleviating purchasers"; only give it fair trial with reasonable persons, and they will need no other recommendation. Yours truly, C. P. BRONSON.

For sale, wholesale and retail, at 15-17 Hanover Street, for Dr. Briggs's Shoulder Braces and Supporters, for the New England States, Boston, July 7

J. A. Holden, Tailor,
HAS just received, and will be constantly receiv-
ing,
New and Suitable Goods,
for the coming season, his intention being to have at
all times on hand, NEW and FASHIONABLE
GOODS, and not let accumulate at his store a quantity
of old and unfashionable merchandise, such as will be worn with the majority of country tars.

He does his OWN CUTTING, which he flatters
himself he has no need to boast of, inasmuch as it is now too well known to need any man's praise,
and least of all his own.
He invites the attention of such as expect
Punctuality and Good Workmanship,
FOR CASH,
such being his rule of business,—the REDUCED RATES at which he sells rendering any other mode

GET A STOVE !!!

"I WANT to buy the best COOKING STOVE" is a remark often made, but few succeed in accomplishing this wish on account of the great variety of patterns to be found in the market. There is no article of domestic use of so much consequence as a good Stove. A poor one that will not draw, will fill the room with smoke, injure the furniture and make every one about it cross; but with one which draws well, burns Coal or Wood well, and BAKES well and quick, it is a pleasure to cook,—as all will bear me witness. Having thoroughly tried the

New England Air-Tight Cooking Stove,
both by myself and many of my friends, for the past two years, I can, with the greatest confidence recommend it to my numerous customers, with the full assurance that they will find in its use every thing they could desire, and I agree that if any use this and do not find full satisfaction, I will take them back and refund the purchase money. I would invite all who are about purchasing this desirable article to call on the subscriber, (who is sole agent for this town) and examine the above mentioned Stoves; where will also be found a GREAT VARIETY of other Stoves, both

COOK, PARLOR, OFFICE & SHOP STOVES,
among which is a new and elegant
Parlor Stove, for Wood or Coal, with or without Ovens.
Also—FURNACES, BAKERS, BRITANIA & JAPANESE WARE; TIN AND SHEET IRON
WORK Made to Order,
As good as the Best.
CHARLES HOLMES.
Quincy, Sept. 15.

P. LOW'S UNION HOT AIR
Cooking Stove and Fuel Saver.

THIS is a most beautiful and extraordinary Cooking Stove. The even and regular application of the heat to the Oven, gives this Stove all the advantages of a brick Oven—while at the same time the boiler holes are so constructed that the heat is immediately applied to the boilers from the fire pit, which makes this stove the most complete and finished Air Tight Cook Stove in America.

AS A COAL COOKING STOVE,
Any person who will give this stove a fair trial will be convinced of its superiority for Economy, Convenience and DURABILITY, over any other Air Tight Cooking Stove.

As a SUMMER APPARATUS
It is attached to the front, affording, of itself, ample convenience for light summer work, without the unpleas-
ing effects and expense of heating up the main body of the stove; it may also be used at the same time that the rest of the stove is occupied, greatly adding to its value, and rendering it altogether the most efficient
Cooking Stove for the class of families for whom it is expressly designed, ever yet invented.

Any person who will give this stove a fair trial will be convinced of its superiority for Economy, Convenience and DURABILITY, over any other Air Tight Cooking Stove.

A pamphlet containing a description and directions for fitting up and using this Stove is furnished, gratis,
to every purchaser.

These Stoves of the different sizes may be examined at the
Tin and Sheet Iron Manufactory

up Garment, to call and examine his very Extensive and Varied Assortment of GOODS, which will be found to be well adapted to all classes of society.

Money may be Saved
by trading with DINEGAN, as he keeps a LARGER ASSORTMENT OF GOODS
than the majority of tailors in the country, and
As good as any in the City.
He employs the VERY BEST of Workmen to make up his Garments, and sells at
ONE PRICE ONLY.
No person in want of Clothing should neglect calling on him, as it is a well known fact that he makes
up his Garments AS WELL and SELLS CHEAP-ER than can be bought in the City.

October 10th.

THE fast sailing coppered and copper-fastened Schooner, LAMARTINE,
—Charles H. Brown, Master,—will sail as above and will take twelve to fifteen passengers at very low rates.
The vessel is staunch, strong and well furnished in every particular; built at Portsmouth, (N. H.) of the best White Oak, in July, 1848, will furnish the best of provisions and water, and accommodate the above number comfortably. It being the most favorable season of the year, and having secured the services of Capt. UNDERWOOD, who has had much experience on the Pacific coast and doubled the Cape sixteen times, it is expected she will make a speedy and safe passage. Each passenger will be allowed the bulk of three barrels, and can remain on board after arrival,
ten days free of charge.

The above offers a fine chance for a Company of twelve persons,—as a room will be fitted for their express use,—to form for mutual protection and take with them such articles as are needed for mining or other purposes, provisions, etc., thereby making the passage pleasant and agreeable, and which more than offsets the expense they would incur across the Isthmus.

For the Quincy Patriot.

UNION.

Come, let us all as brothers join,
To swell the great communion,
And morally and legally Promote the temperance union.

The Washingtonians still can ply
Their favorite, moral union;
And probe the heart and wring the eye,
And rouse the sleeping nation.

But should the foes who hate our cause
Be deaf to every prayer, sir,
The advocates of wholesome laws
Would bring their guns to bear, sir.

Then let us all as brothers join,
Our armies leagued as one, sir;
The olive round the arrow twine
And press to victory on, sir.

Here Christian, Heathen, Jew and Turk,
Can all unite their forces,
And all, with heart and hand, should work
To stay this worst of curses.

The neutrals who in idle swarms,
Look on while others tire,
Are like to those who fold their arms
And see the house on fire.

F. M. ADINGTON, Weymouth.

A PARODY.

Take a little wife,
The prettier the better;
Put her cheek, and when
She wants to kiss you—let her.

Keep her in the house,—
There she'll cook your mutton,
Darn your pocket too,
If she's worth a button.

Never mind the late
Of her aunts and cousins,
Ask them to "drop in!"—
Dine them all by dozens.

One of those odd days,
You'll feel one inch taller,
When you see her hug
A clapping little squaller.

THE HEART'S MUSIC.

The bird that to the evening sings,
Leaves music when her song is ended;
A sweetness left—which takes not wings—
But with each pulse of love is blended:

Thus life involves a double light,
Our acts and words have many brothers;
The heart that makes its own delight
Makes also a delight for others.

The owls that hoot from midnight tower
Shed gloom and discord ere they leave it;
And sweetness close, like a flower
That shuts itself from tones that grieve it:

Thus life involves, or double joy,
Or double gloom, for each hath brother;
The heart that makes its own annoy
Makes also an annoy for others.

A "GRAPHIC" PICTURE.

His brawny arm belted her waist,
With love their eyes did burn;
From his warm lips she snatched a taste,
And then he tasted her.

ANECDOTES.

In the corner of a large field, in England, is a small enclosure known as the "Quaker's Sepulchre," which has been for a number of years deserted. On the mural monument in the east wall, is the following inscription:—

"Here lies my love, my only dear, Eight feet straighterward just from here."

At the examination of the children of an infant school, a little boy was asked to explain his idea of "bearing false witness against your neighbor." After hesitating, he said it was "telling tales." The reverend examiner said, "That is not exactly an answer. What do you say?" addressing a little girl who stood next, when she immediately replied, "It was when nobody did nothing, and somebody went and told of it."

A Quaker having sold a fine looking, but blind horse, asked the purchaser—
"Well, friend, dost thou see any fault in him?"
"No," was the answer.
"Neither will he see any in thee," said old broad-brim?

A political aspirant in Indiana, mounting the stand to make a political speech, commenced with "Fellow citizens, notwithstanding my youthful appearance, I am the father of two children."

"O, you have seen HALL this morning, I perceive," said a wag to a fellow who was making comical efforts to walk straight.
"Haw—hic—Hall? What—hic—Hall? What—hic—hic—what Hall?"
"Alco-hal," replied the wag, as he passed on.

An eminent and witty English prelate was once asked if he did not think that such an one followed his conscience. "Yes," said the Bishop, "I think he does follow it, as a man does a horse in a gig; he drives it first."

An excellent old lady always dated from the time "when their horses ran away"—to be sure it was a remarkable figure, and she used to remark, in describing it, that "she put the firmest reliance on Providence till the breeching broke, and then she gave up."

"The prospect of heaven itself," says an English paper, "would have no charm for an American of the backwoods, if he thought there was any place further west."

"What do I consider the boundaries of my country, sir?" exclaimed a Kentuckian, "why, sir, on the east we are bounded by the rising sun—on the north by the Aurora Borealis—on the west by the procession of the equinoxes—and on the south by the day of judgment!"
